Twitterings.

Mr. H. Best, 5, Alma Place, Beckett Street, Leeds, writes that he will send on application a schedule of the Leeds Roller C.C. contest, Nov. 3, 4, to anyone who has been overlooked.

Mr. J. Dalgetty, 10, River Street, Brechin, writes that if those who have not received a schedule for Brechin show, Nov. 4, will send their entries on plain paper he will classify them.

The Ordnor Park and Eastwood C.B.S., writes Messrs. Smith and Lees, secs., Lynn Croft, Eastwood, Notts, has engaged Mr. J. H. Roe, of Birmingham, to judge the annual open show, Nov. 25. Schedules are now ready.

I have gone into partnership with Mr. J. Bunn, writes Mr. T. H. V. Hayter, and in future will exhibit under the name of Hayter and Bunn. Will show secretaries please note, and address all communications to 81, Ena Avenue, Sneinton Dale, Nottingham?

A little bird says that some cross talk in the secretary's office at Liverpool Show caused great amusement. "How those wounded soldiers laughed." Our representative sat still and listened, very much amused. It was not all Canary chat, but brimful of wit. The "star turns" of this little episode, although busy up to the hilt (we better not mention names) are just it. Both declared they were — tired, and wished the Fancy to know.

We have changed our show date to Nov. 25 instead of Dec. 16, writes R. Johnson, 17, William Street, Whickham, hon. sec. Whickham C.B.S.

Mr. A. Knaggs, hon. sec., Guisbro Priory C.B.S., writes that fanciers will be welcome at the annual table show to-day, October 28. Birds will be staged at 2 o'clock.

Sharp Work in Paying Out.

Llanelly Show in Aid of War Prisoners.

Llanelly C.B.S., writes Mr. H. Webster, hon. sec., have decided to again run their annual show, and all profits will be devoted to the Llanelly Prisoners of War Fund.

Last Week's Prize Letter.

The full address of the writer of the prize winning letter of last week is Mr. Wallace C. Jones, 147, Dupont Street, Toronto, Canada. We had not the address at hand when awarding the prize.

Another Charity Show at Hamilton.

I am pleased to inform you that the fanciers of Hamilton have decided to run another open show on Dec. 9, in aid of War Relief Funds and Prisoners of War, writes Mr. W. S. Wilson, sec.

Further Corrections in Barrow Show Schedule.

Mr. McFarlane, hon. sec. Barrow C.B.S., writes that in the schedule for the Red Cross Show, Nov. 3-4, class 27, Cinnamon Norwich, should read self or foul yellow or buff cock, and class 28, ditto hen.

New Sec for Windhill O.S.

Mr. R. Garnett, 32, Carr Lane, Wiudhill, Shipley, writes that as Mr. Taylor has been called to the colours he has been appointed hon. sec. to the society, and that all entries for the members' show, Nov. 4, and the open show, Dec. 2, must be sent to him accordingly.

Corrections in Clapham Report.

Mr. F. C. Knight, Dartmouth Park, writes that in our report of the Novice clear yellow Yorkshire cock class at Clapham Show 1st prize should be Knight, not Smart, and that our reporter's remarks in the unflighted buff class, "1, Knight, we could not find," were due to the fact that the bird was being judged for the specials.

The Patronage of the Green Canary Association.

The patronage shows this season, writes Mr. F. Handley, hon. sec., are: Liverpool, Oct. 20 and 21, full patronage; Manchester, full, Oct. 27 and 28; Barrow, Borders, Nov. 3 and 4; Sheffield, Yorkshires only; Swansea, Nov. 16, Borders; Gateshead, Dec. 9, Borders. G.C.A. show date not fixed yet. Cups will be held over this year, as there are not enough competing shows. Good list of specials in each section.

The Song of the Roller Canary: Illustrated by the Living Birds.

To very many lovers of Canary song the fine distinctions between the various "tours," which are known to the experts under separate names, such as Gluck Roll, Bell Roll, Hollow Roll, etc., are quite unknown. Those who are interested should read the report of the last meeting of the British Roller Canary Club, as published in our Club Reports column this week, and should watch "Club Notices" for the announcement of the next demonstration.

The Patronage of the Norwich P.C.

Owing to a mistake, writes Mr. J. Hopkins, the list of the Norwich Plainhead Club's specials were omitted from Sheffield schedule. They are similar to those granted to Manchester and Accrington, and are subject to the same conditions. Members must mark N.P.C. or N.P.C.X, as the case may be, on their entry forms. Novice Norwich classes have been changed to Amateur Norwich. Members cannot win a special or count points towards one unless their subscriptions have been previously paid.

Should Judges Give their Reasons?

In a letter referring to the recent Clapham Show, published in our correspondence columns this week, Mr. G. E. Rattigan suggests that judges should explain their awards for the benefit of unsuccessful exhibitors. A distinguished legal luminary once advised a newly-fledged judge to be careful always not to give reasons for his decisions, but perhaps this would not apply to bird shows. As it happens, in this particular case the reason for the non-success of the bird in question was given in our report. It was an immature bird in imperfect plumage, and had to compete against a champion Nightingale, one of the best Blackcaps ever staged, an exquisite Wheatear, and several other birds, each a perfect specimen of its own species. Its rarity as a hand-reared specimen of a rarely exhibited species made it a very interesting exhibit, but it had no chance of winning as an exhibition bird among such perfect examples as were in the class.

Blaenavon Show, Nov. 9, will be under the patronage of the Welsh Cage Bird Club, writes Mr. Geo. Broome, sec., 82, Ping Street, Blaenavon. Members will be required to compete at this show for their specials. Schedule will be sent on receipt of postcard.

Prize Money Paid.

All prize money has been paid out for Abertillery C.B.S., writes Mr. Newell, 62, Princess Street, Abertillery. Anyone overlooked please apply.

Crossbills Domiciled in Ireland.

In the Irish Naturalist, Mr. C. J. Carroll says that since the invasion of seven years ago of an unusual number of Crossbills, these birds have nested each year in the Galtee Mountains, Tipperary.

Bumping Entry at Manchester.

Up to now, Oct. 23, writes Mr. J. Green, hon. sec. Manchester and N. Counties O.S., we have 900 entries, and more still to open, and from what we can judge we shall have a record entry for Norwich; we have 350 in the open (champ. and amateurs) now. Other sections are also going strong.

Joint London Show Probable.

I regret to state, writes Mr. A. J. Watcham, hon. sec. London C.B.A., that again no show will be held at the Horticultural Hall, but efforts are being made to have a good London show, similar to that held at Holborn Hall last season, which I am sure will be fresh in the memory of all fanciers. I hope to be able to announce success very shortly.

OBITUARY.

We hear, with great regret, of the bereavement which has fallen upon Mr. A. J. Notley, the sec. of Hetton-le-Hole C.B.S., in the loss of his wife on Oct. 17. Mr. Notley is left with six motherless children, and we are sure that readers of Cage Birds will join us in sympathy with him in his sad trouble.

Mr. J. BEANLAND (Bedford).

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. H. W. Valentine, Bedford and Beds United C.B.S., that I send you the report of the death of our chairman, Mr. John Beanland. Mr. Beanland was a keen fancier of the Norwich Plainhead, and always ready to do a fellow fancier a good turn. I feel sure that all who knew him will be grieved at the news of his death.

Mr. J. C. Wilmot, hon. sec. Bedford and Beds. O.S., also sends a sympathetic reference to the death of Mr. Beanland, in which he conveys the information that the sad occurrence was the result of a motor cycle accident.

"CAGE BIRDS" ROLL OF HONOUR.

Lance-Corporal Hodgson, Stanley.

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. Robt. Hutchinson, Stanley Victoria F.F. and C.B.S., I have to inform you of the sad news one of our members has received of the death of his son, Lance-Corpl. Thomas Hodgson. He was wounded on Sept. 15, and died Sept. 19. He was only 21 years last June, and was a great help to his father, one of our oldest fanciers and local judges. I am sure all fanciers will join me in expending their greatest sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Hodgson in their great trouble, and in hoping God will give them strength to bear it. He died nobly.

REVIEW OF SCHEDULES.

Sheffield O.S.—Cutlers' Hall, Church Street. Nov. 3-4: judges, W. A. Cowgill, J. C. Barnes, J. Robson, J. Frostick. 97 cl.: Yorks. 33 (11 Nov., 4 Greens). Nor. 23 (7 Nov., 4 Greens, 3 Cinn.). Will members please note, writes Mr. A. C. Shirley, sec. City of Birmingham C.B.S., that the members' show will not be held on Saturday, Oct. 28, as there are no rooms vacant at headquarters.

An Address Wanted.

The Rev. G. H. Raynor, Hazeleigh, Maldon, would be glad of the exact address of Mr. W. Tullett, of Brighton, who answered a recent advertisement of his in Cage Birds.

Hoopoe's Nesting in Bucks.

A correspondent to the "Selborne Magazine" says that a pair of Hoopoes nested near Taplow in the spring of this year, and reared at least one young one. The young bird was seen with its parents during the third week in May, and the two parents were again seen on July 5.

Evenings for Fanciers.

Mr. A. J. Watcham, hon. sec. London C.B.A., writes that fanciers will be welcome to the table show and judging competition (Canaries) at the next meeting, Nov. 9, at 8, at headquarters, the Red Lion Hotel, 2, York Street, St. James's. Similar evenings will be given later for British birds and foreign birds.

Yellow or Grey Wagtails?

A friend of mine who has wintered in the Newquay district, says "W.C." in the "Manchester Dispatch," tells me that a few miles inland, when out shooting, he has seen the Yellow Wagtail in December and January, and that he has considerable doubt as to whether the whole of these Wagtails do migrate.

Another Fancier Joins Up.

I am sorry to say, writes Mr. H. W. Valentine, Bedford, I have to part with all my birds as I am joining the Army, and have no one to look after them. I am particularly sorry, as I have spent years in building up a strain, and had got the right type nicely fixed, as the report in Cage Birds of the last Bedford Show testified, but we must keep on smiling, there is a big future for Cage Birds and the Canary fancy, as there is sure to be a big demand for birds when the boys come home.

Sheffield's "Red Letter" Days.

Friday and Saturday next, Nov. 3, 4, will be feast days for fanciers in the cutlery capital. Fanciers from north, south, east, and west will be in the city of blades to visit the show of the Sheffield O.S. in the Cutlers' Hall, an ideal place for a bird show. The schedule is a fine one, replete with valuable specials, and the birds will be looked after by a staff of experts. The patronage of most of the leading specialist clubs has been secured, and all profits from the show will be devoted to war charities.

The City and Suburban A.C.B. Comes of Age.

We have received the schedule of the 21st annual members' exhibition of the City and Suburban A.C.B. at the St. Marylebone Church Institute, Paddington Street, W., Nov. 8 and 9. There are 73 classes, embracing all kinds of Canaries, Hybrids, British and Foreign birds. As usual with this Association, the specials list is a very generous one, and this year there are no fewer than 82 specials, ranging from a seven guinea challenge bowl to a large number of cash prizes. Messrs. J. Robson and C. Prior are to judge, and the show should be well worth a visit.

Manchester Show in Aid of Blinded Soldiers.

At the general meeting of the Ardwick and Manchester C.B.A., writes Mr. A. E. Thorpe, it was unanimously decided that all the profits from our open show Nov. 11 should be given to the Blinded Soldiers' Fund. The Lord Mayor of Manchester has kindly written to say that he approves of our object, and, seeing that we have provided a special classification of 89 classes, we are looking forward to the fancy in general to give us their united support, as our object is worthy of the greatest consideration. We are hoping to be able to hand over a sum such as will be a real help and blessing. If those who have not already received a schedule will write to the secretary, A. E. Thorpe, Park Villas, Park Grove, Levenshulme, he will gladly forward one.

The "Avicultural Magazine."

The "Avicultural Magazine," the Journal of the Avicultural Society, for October contains a full index to Vol. VII. and a list of the names of contributors. The opening article, "Notes on the Red-winged Bush Shrike," by Dr. Van Someren, is illustrated by some beautiful photographs by the author. Dr. A. G. Butler contributes an interesting article, "The Imitative Power of Birds." The Marquis of Tavistock sends his "Breeding Notes of 1916," and other articles are "Cuvier's Podargus," by Dr. G. Renshaw, "Breeding of the Pink-crested Touracou" and "Wagtails in Herefordshire," by the Editor, Mr. Astley, and "Bird Life on Yanko Creek, N.S.W.," by C. Barrett. An item of very considerable value to students of ornithology is "Robins," by Dr. E. Hopkinson. It takes three pages of the magazine to give a list of the world's birds to which the name "Robin" is applied.

The Famine in Canaries.

What some London Dealers think.

The Trade is Dead, pro tem.

Sir,—I am rather surprised at your note, "Great Famine in Canaries."

Long before Cage Birds was ever thought of the American dealers were buying yearly immense quantities of Norwich and Yorkshires, with others.

Forty years ago I can remember the Americans visiting London twice yearly to pick up their consignments from Norwich and Bradford. They have continued to do so down to the present time. Genuine American dealers. The English breeders have greatly benefited by the many thousands of pounds spent by these American dealers.

Without their custom the Canary trade would be absolutely nil. Then why advise the breeders to spoil themselves? Advise them to breed every possible Canary for exportation, to supply the world as usual. I state without fear of contradiction that there is no trade at home here for Canaries, or even foreign birds of any sort. The bird trade is dead pro tem. in Great Britain. There only remains the old export trade.

John D. Hamlyn.

The letter as above is published as received, and we think that we cannot do better in reply than to quote an article which has appeared in the London "Star," and which is as follows:—

A FAMINE IN CANARYLAND.

WHERE WE CAN CAPTURE MORE GERMAN TRADE.

The song of the Canary is no longer heard in Seven Dials, Walworth, Bethnal Green, and districts where Canary dealers congregate. Never in the history of the trade has there been such a famine in this popular songster.

A "Star" man who made a tour of London Canaryland failed to discover a single "Roller" Canary, and dealer after dealer assured him that they were unobtainable.

Not a Song in Them.

There were a few Canaries of sorts to be seen, but not heard. Not all the arts and wiles of the professional hand could get anything which might be described as a note out of them.

How the British Canary industry has been unable to cope with recent demands, and the money there is to be made by British breeders who will enter into the trade with science and skill, was explained to a "Star" man by Mr. W. S. Isaacs, the well-known ornithological expert and dealer, of Shaftesbury Avenue, who said that during the past two years the demand for Canaries has gradually exceeded the supply.

"If I could buy a thousand Canaries to-day they would all be sold before the end of next week," he said.

No Birds from Abroad.

"The crisis has arisen since the importation of birds from abroad was prohibited. Before the war 2,000 to 5,000 Canaries were imported every week, but although the importations gradually fell away, up to a few weeks ago birds came in pretty freely from Holland. They were described as Dutch.

"We breed a fair number in Norwich, Yorkshire, and Lancashire, and a few of the Scotch and Border fancy, but the British breeders have never supplied one-tenth of the demand. It is the sudden cutting of these Continental supplies which is the cause of the famine.

Doubling in Price.

"Birds which a few weeks ago would have only fetched from 7s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. now sell for 15s. and a guinea.

"The British 'Roller' Canary has always been a very scarce bird. Many good and beautiful 'Roller' Canaries are bred in this country, mostly by members of the British Roller Canary Club, but they are not a fraction of those sold."

Mr. Isaacs explained that the Canary breeding in Germany has been an industry for generations, and German bred birds are to be found all over the world. The headquarters of the industry is in the Hartz Mountain districts, where the birds are bred by the thousand by the poorer people, who make a very good living.

The Cobbler's Pets.

They are mostly toy and boot makers, who work in their own homes, and train the Canaries to sing whilst they are at work.

Some birds are taught to sing by the mouth, and others by an organ, but the best Roller birds are taught by the mouth.

To the initiated there is all the difference between a "Roller" and an ordinary singing Canary. Mr. Isaacs has heard German "Rollers" with thirty changes in their tunes, and a well-trained Canary which has a compass of two octaves has always been worth anything from £10 10s. upwards.

In Mr. Isaacs' view British breeders have never been thorough or businesslike enough to set up an industry to oust the German bird. The majority of the British breeders have bred too much for show purposes.

Money in Canary Breeding.

"There is undoubtedly very big money to be made by breeding Canaries in this country," added Mr. Isaacs, "if carried on scientifically, systematically, sensibly, and on a large scale. There are men in Yorkshire and Lancashire who have earned good livings for years by collecting birds from small breeders and retailing them to dealers.

The Wrong Way.

"But to start breeding Canaries in a haphazard way, as the average British breeder does, with one or two pairs, will certainly not result in any profit worth having."

An Interview with a Norwich Breeder.

To get at the bottom of the facts relating to the supply of and demand for English Canaries we have had an interview with Mr. Arthur Howard, of Howard and Son, London and Norwich, breeders, exhibitors, and dealers in Norwich Canaries especially.

Mr. Howard agrees that the demand for the past two years has exceeded the supply, but he says this is putting the case mildly. The demand, he told us, has always exceeded the supply, not only during the past two years, but for all the years his father and he have known anything about the trade. The demand is practically illimitable. All that is necessary is to breed the young birds. They will all be wanted, and more; more will be wanted than can possibly be produced.

Before the war, Mr. Howard told us, more birds went to Germany annually than to any other country in the world. One German buyer alone would buy a thousand pairs from each of four or five Norwich dealers, who themselves collected the birds from the breeders.

But the home trade alone in English Canaries has always been greater than that with America and Germany combined, notwithstanding the fact that the birds taken out of our country by the German agents were replaced to some extent by German-bred singing Canaries.

Now that the German supply to our markets has been definitely stopped, the future for the English Canary breeder is rosy in the extreme. The opportunity is before him, and it only requires grasping. Breed the birds, don't trouble about the selling of them, says Mr. Howard, they will sell themselves.

It should not be forgotten that the English birds which in pre-war times went to Germany in thousands were not for Germany itself. The German agents were only middlemen between the English breeder and purchasers all over the world. The world's demand will now come to England direct, and if the English breeder is not prepared to meet it it will be his own loss.

The Views of a Pessimist.

Fears that there is No Market.

Sir,—I have read with interest your article in Cage Birds, Oct. 21 issue, appealing to the Canary breeders in Great Britain to "keep the home fires burning." I don't doubt for one moment that that is what every good and true fancier is out to do, but you say it is not Canary attics, but Canary farms, that are wanted. Just so, but where is the working man who has got a Canary attic who could afford a Canary farm? We will say for argument's sake that I give up my attic in which I can breed a hundred birds, and build a very large place for Roller breeding, and I breed two thousand birds. To whom am I to sell them; where is the market for them? That is what I and scores of other fanciers want to know. Is it to dealers that offer us 1s. 6d. for hens and 3s. 6d. for cocks? If so, then no "Canary farms" for me. Neither will it pay to sell birds in ones or twos; I know several fanciers in this and other towns that have given the business up in disgust through that one thing alone. They could not make it pay. You say that there are thousands of birds going abroad. I suppose it is because the breeders can get a higher price for them than they get at home, and no one can blame them. After going through the breeding season, with all its troubles and anxieties, they want some return for time and money spent. Now, Mr. Editor, in conclusion, let us know where we are to get a respectable price for respectable birds, get us a good market, and I'll guarantee you get the birds. Wishing Cage Birds the success it so well deserves, and hoping that you, too, Sir, will "keep the home fires burning."

Eli Orrillard.

[If our correspondent will read our advertisement columns from week to week we think he will see that a standing market exists, and the prices continually being offered by dealers are many times greater than those he quotes. If the supply were multiplied twenty times there would still be a demand for more.—Editor.]

Do Dealers Offer Unfair Prices

Sir,—I read with great interest your article, "Great Famine in Canaries," in the issue of Cage Birds of Oct. 21, and I notice you state that thousands of Canaries will change hands this season for 15s. each. Yes, I've no doubt about it, but I am afraid it won't come from the dealers to the working man, who is the backbone of the fancy, and who spends, perhaps, pounds in getting good stock birds, cages, and, above all, the best of foods.

I myself (a working man) have been a breeder of Canaries for several years, and have spent pounds in getting as good a class of birds and cages as I possibly could, and have spent all my leisure hours in looking after the welfare of my birds. Then after the trouble and anxiety in rearing young birds during the breeding season, I see dealers advertise for all kinds of Canaries in the columns of Cage Birds. If I write to them and offer them my birds, they coolly write back, stating that their highest price is 1s. 6d. for hens and 3s. 6d. for cocks, though they have a ready sale for the birds at anything from 3s. to 5s. for hens and 7s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. for cocks.

I think, dear Sir, something ought to be done to induce the dealers to offer more to the working man for his trouble, time, and the anxious times which he gets during the season. I am fully aware of the fact that the dealers must make a profit. Some of them are making a good profit, and the working man is not getting enough to pay for his seed bill, let alone anything else. If dealers will offer more for the birds they want the working man will breed them more and more, and will look upon it as a duty of national importance.

Correspondence.

Every week a Prize of Ten Shillings is given for what, in the opinion of the Editor of "CAGE BIRDS," is the best letter published under this heading. The letter may be on any subject; it may be a comment, for or against, on anything which is published in our pages, an opinion on the policy of our paper, or may have no reference whatever to anything which has already appeared. So long as it is on a "birdy" subject, and is original, it will be eligible to compete for the prize.

The Prize this week is awarded to Mrs. May Raynor, Hazeleigh Rectory, Maldon.

How the Lighting Restrictions Come in.

Sir,—I must congratulate the Committee of the Clapham C.B.A. upon their very fine show, but at the same time I should like to mention one little item, the bad arrangement of light. Classes 1 to 4, also some of the British, could not be seen after lighting up time, which is very annoying to visitors who cannot get there early. It was just the same two years ago, but I trust it will be put right for the future.

The Patronage of the Southern Norwich Plainhead Club.

Specials Going Begging.

Sir,—The Southern Norwich Plainhead Club has given its patronage to Clapham, Swansea, Cheltenham, Llanelly, and Dulwich and Peckham, and is prepared to adopt four more shows.

We are giving a diploma open to all for best Norwich in show, and a 5s. special to our members. All we ask in return is that our members who wish to show with other club members shall be allowed to do so on payment of a proper entrance fee. I am given to understand that some who belong to local clubs object to "outsiders" showing at their members' shows. But surely other local members have some claim to specialist clubs' patronage, and I wonder why they allow their local club to debar them therefrom?

We heard a little while ago that the specialist club did nothing for the local club. Yet here, as I say, are specials going begging.

Proposed Red Cross Show for Glasgow.

Sir,—It is out of the question to run the Red Cross show in Glasgow at the same date as last year, as the "City of Glasgow" have fixed their show for the 3rd and 4th January, but it would be a great pity to let the Red Cross show drop altogether. I for one feel that the necessity for it is much greater this year than last.

The outstanding feature of the last year's show, over and above the £80 given to the Red Cross, was indeed a very pleasing one, and that was that fanciers dropped their "little" grievances, and all pushed the one way, namely, to success, so let us all do the same this year, only with greater push.

I would suggest that all clubs (without exception) be asked to help to run a show early in February, and I am quite sure that if Mr. R. Heggie was approached he would be quite willing to take the secretaryship at double the salary he had last year. When we remember that last year he got nothing, we could not expect him to do it at much less. What say others to another Red Cross show?

A White Chaffinch and a Pied Blackbird at Hunstanton.

Sir,—It may be of interest to you and others to know that a pure White Chaffinch has been seen near here (Hunstanton). I believe it is a hen bird. I have also seen to-day a Blackbird with black and white breast, white head, and black and white wings and tail.

Hybrid Wrong-classed at Clapham Show.

The Judge, Mr. Robson, Explains.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. S. A. Reynolds, my reason for wrong-classing his Hybrid at Clapham Show was that after closely examining the bird I was unable to make it other than a cinnamon coloured Greenfinch-Canary Hybrid. As such it should have been entered in Class 45, "Any other variety of dark Canary Hybrid." The class Mr. Reynolds entered the bird in was confined to Bullfinch crosses and Greenfinch-Chaffinch Hybrids, consequently I had no alternative but to wrong class it. I was sorry to have to do so, as it is a very nice specimen.

Theft of "Drinkers" at Abertillery Show.

Sir,—May I make an appeal through your valuable paper Cage Birds on behalf of the exhibitors of the country re drinkers at shows? I had charge of the Borders at Abertillery Show, and while I was packing two drinkers were taken from my own cages by some one. I have no doubt that the person who took them would have taken the birds as well if he had had half a chance. It is not for the value of them that I am grumbling, but I think it is a pity fanciers cannot send their drinkers out without some mean person stealing them from the cages.

A Hybrid Winner in a British Class.

A Question as to the Classification.

Sir,—Did Mr. Cook know what the bird was that he placed first at Ystradgynlais show? I have known a Cinnamon Chaffinch win in a Mule class before to-day. No correspondent has yet raised the question as to whether there was a Mule or Hybrid class at Ystradgynlais, and not having seen a catalogue I am in ignorance. Will Mr. Cook quote an authority—apart from himself—in saying that a Goldie-Greenfinch Hybrid is a British bird? I cannot find such a statement in any of my ornithological books. One would think that Sam D. Davies is either the breeder or exhibitor of the Hybrid in question, and naturally backs up the judge's award.

W. F. Lloyd James.

[There was no class for Hybrids at Ystradgylais show. It was a mixed show, and four classes were provided for Cage Birds—Yorks, Nor., A.O.V. Canary, and British.—Ed. Cage Birds.]

Proposed Society for Ferndale.

Sir,—Apropos of your article under the heading "A Famine in Canaries," kindly permit me through the medium of your valuable paper to suggest that the fanciers of Ferndale and district are sufficiently strong in number to form a society and do something towards the "big push."

I think a society could be established with very little effort, and I would like to see anyone holding similar views writing to your paper with a view of forming a society for Ferndale and district.

Rearing Young Birds Without Egg Food.

Is it an All-round Success?

Sir,—In the early part of the year there was some discussion upon rearing Canaries without egg food, and at the time several recipes were given. Now that the breeding season is over, and the majority of young ones bred are well through the moult, I think it would be instructive if those readers who made use of egg substitutes were to give their experiences.

May I suggest answers to the following:—

The kind of food used?

Did the hens feed readily upon it, and were the usual number of young reared?

Did the young ones thrive after leaving the nest, and how did the percentage of losses compare with other seasons?

Was there any loss of size in the young?

The Hen Canary that Wouldn't.

Can Anyone Give a Reason?

Sir,—I thought I would like to tell you of an experience I once had with a hen Canary, a plain Norwich, which I bought of a local breeder. I tried to pair her with a large variegated cock, but there was nothing doing; she fought him with such vigour that I had to separate them after a week. Then I tried her with a Bullfinch, and she served him the same. After several trials I lent her to a friend, and his bird she served in the same way, and he was convinced my bird was a cock, so after about a week he brought it home. I put her in a cage, and, noticing her carrying bits of greenstuff about. I gave her a nest box and some material, and to my delight she built a lovely nest, but then, instead of laying, started to sit very tight, so I found four Linnets' eggs and put under her. She hatched them off, and then sat on the perch and absolutely refused to feed them, so they died very soon. I tried to pair her afterwards, but always with the same result, so when war broke out she went with the rest of my birds, as I had to sell all. If there is anything to learn from it I should be glad of advice. Wishing Cage Birds every success.

Ten Young Canaries from One Pair.

Sir,—It was with interest and sympathy that I read in Cage Birds the account of a lecture given by Mr. H. Bell on How to Start Canary Breeding. He states that out of 21 pairs mated this year he has only had nine chicks, and I thought it might be interesting to your readers to know that I have reared ten strong, healthy youngsters this year from one pair. It is perhaps more exceptional when one considers that this is my first attempt in the hobby, with absolutely no knowledge or friends to advise me, only a 6d. edition of "Canary Breeding," by Claude St. John, of which I cannot speak too highly, though I might mention that I have been enlightened by various articles which have appeared from time to time in Cage Birds. It all came about in this way. I bought a cock Canary for 8s. 6d., and was so struck by his song that I developed a desire to take up breeding, so I purchased a hen at a local bird shop for 4s. 6d., got an empty box, and knocked up what I considered to be something like a breeding cage, and got to work. On March 3 I paired them up, rather early, I suppose, but at any rate they produced four chicks by April 1, of which I lost two. On May 19 I paired them up again, and this time the hen laid six eggs within ten days of being paired up, one being broken, presumably by the cock. She hatched out five chicks from this nest, but one died. I paired them up again on July 23, and by August 12 I had four more chicks, two of which are now whistling. All being well, I hope to meet with similar luck next year.

Missing the Moult.

A Nightingale that Has Not Moulted, and a Skylark that is Singing Though Moulting.

Sir,—As an old reader of Cage Birds, and one who has derived much practical assistance from its columns, I fancy the following may interest readers of your paper.

I have been a fancier of Nightingales for some fifteen years, and at the present time I have several. One of them, a fine old cock bird, has moulted regularly for the past four or five years at the usual time, but up to the moment of writing hasn't shed a feather this season, and yet is in splendid condition and health, and—what will surprise even fanciers of this charming bird—is at the present time in full free song.

Another remarkable thing is that he has not bathed once since being caged, but is, of course, sprayed regularly and fed on the best of food, including some fifteen to twenty mealworms daily. I also possess a Skylark, which is moulting heavily, and yet singing by daylight and gaslight.

I suppose I must be one of the lucky ones, but as a matter of fact this is the only 'Gale that has so handsomely repaid me for the trouble and care expended upon it. I wonder if any other 'Gale fanciers have had a similar experience? Wishing Cage Birds the success it so well deserves.

Earwigs in the Birdroom.

Bad for the Earwigs if They Get Caught.

Sir,—I was interested to read Mrs. Lingwood's letter in this week's issue of Cage Birds, for I, too, have lost one young bird through the bleeding she describes, but I certainly do not attribute it to earwigs, as none can get to my bird room.

I noticed several times that the birds were bleeding profusely from the tops of the wings, and that their own beaks had blood on them, and this shows that they picked themselves and caused the bleeding. I think this came about by the small feathers moulting off at the top of the wing, then the bird pierced itself and picked the bare part between the ends of the flight feathers, and gradually worked a sore spot, which bled, and it kept on picking, as it liked the taste of the blood.

The same occurred in the case of bleeding from the end of the tail feathers. The bird I lost bled from the tail. One night I noticed a lot of blood about the cage and from the tail, but as the flow had stopped, and the bird seemed all right, I left it for the night. In the morning it was dead, evidently from weakness. I may mention here that 10 drops of calendula to a good tablespoonful of water is effective in stopping bleeding.

Although earwigs are unpleasant things, I don't believe they could harm a bird. A few days ago a rather amusing incident happened. A friend was giving some nasturtium flowers to the birds, and an earwig fell out of a flower into the cage. Immediately an old cock Canary flew down, got the earwig, and brought it to his perch, where he killed it by eating off the head, and then ate the remainder! I did not know before that a Canary would eat insects!

Before closing I would like to mention that I consider your correspondence most interesting, and wish Cage Birds all success.

Sir,—Our outdoor aviary is divided into two compartments. One of these (20ft. long, of which 13½ft. is flight and 6½ft. shelter, the height being 8ft.) is at present devoted to the following birds, viz., two cock Goldfinches, a hen Bullfinch, and three hen Canaries, together with their progeny, which consists of seven Goldfinch-Canary Mules and a Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid. The aviary faces south and west, and is very well sheltered, so that its lovely tenants thoroughly enjoy their little lives, and are a perpetual source of pleasure to ourselves and all our visitors.

It is a pretty sight indeed to watch the demeanour of the inmates when a fresh supply of food is introduced. Besides the usual sorts of green food, such as groundsel, chickweed, sowthistle, and sods of flowering grass, we give them in autumn very many kinds of seeds gathered wild. Of these knapweed (hardheads) and a very similar plant, the lesser skullcap (Scutellaria minor), are especial favourites, whilst teasel and thistle heads are also welcome, so are seed-heads of ragwort, dock, the two plantains, and dandelion.

Use Our Notepaper.

To these may be added two very fascinating plants with which your readers are probably unfamiliar as bearing seed relished by birds. One is the seeding heads of the ordinary Michaelmas daisy (aster) in its many varieties such as you find in almost any garden; the other is a less known plant, but not uncommon in cultivated and waste places throughout Europe, and of frequent occurrence in the British Isles. I myself gather it in weedy fields in this immediate neighbourhood (Hazeleigh), where it is fairly common in September. It belongs to the buckwheat family, and is named Polygonum convolvulus, and in English the black bindweed. It is a glabrous, i.e., smooth-leaved, annual, with a twining stem as in convolvulus, whilst its pointed leaves are heart-shaped. The seeds resemble small triangular nuts, and are sharply pointed on the mid-rib. It is these of which the birds are so enamoured.

All species of Polygonum when in seed seem particularly beloved of birds, among them being the buckwheat of agriculturists (an Asiatic plant), the Persicaria, and the knotweed or knotgrass, the specific name of the latter being "Aviculare," that is "acceptable to birds."

The Bullfinch and her Hybrid son revel in blackberries, haws, cotoneaster, and privet berries, whilst, strange to say, the Goldfinch Mules also partake of haws, although neither of their parents is much addicted to any kind of berry. The Mules are pretty perky little chaps, ever on the move, and singing lustily, but the gem of all, and a gem indeed of first water, is Tim, the Goldie-Bullie. Resplendent in his coat of many hues, he dashes here and there unceasingly, warbling the while his sweet melodious song and glistening like a jewel. In this aviary every bird is tame, but Tim is tamer than the rest, and invariably manages to sample everything before his comrades arrive upon the scene of his delight.

The Recent Clapham Show.

Pied Flycatcher Dies, and Exhibitor Blames the Management.

Sir,—I have a serious complaint to make re the management of the Clapham Show, and I consider it is only fair to exhibitors in general that facts such as those set forth below should be made public.

As I seldom exhibit, and even on this occasion only exhibited one specimen, it may well be that the management does not think my entries are worth bothering about, and treats them accordingly. A very short-sighted policy to adopt, surely, even from the financial standpoint.

However, whatever the cause of the neglect may be, the facts are as follows. At considerable inconvenience and expense I exhibited a young Pied Flycatcher which, amongst others, I had succeeded in hand-rearing this season, thinking, as I believe these birds are seldom if ever exhibited on the show bench, that it would prove an interesting exhibit. However, as, for some reason, best known to the show authorities, the name of the bird, although plainly stated on my entry paper, was not put into the catalogue, probably few of the visiting public were aware of its identity.

I brought the bird with me all the way from Wales, and as it was a great favourite of mine, and I was anxious to avoid all unnecessary risks, I had the bird dispatched to and brought from the show by special messenger, from which it will be at once apparent that I do not exhibit from any mercenary spirit.

Unfortunately before dispatching the bird one of the glass drinkers was accidentally smashed, and I had to substitute at the last moment two small china dishes. I mention this, as it occurs to me the excuse may be put forward that it was impossible to clean out the food and water vessels without opening the cage door to get them out. Even if this were the case, I can see no excuse for what happened, but as a fact it was quite easy to get the vessels out from the front with just a little trouble.

The bird was returned to me on Thursday night looking very bad, and on examination I found the food in its cage was in a horrible mildewed condition, and, of course, rank poison for anything, let alone a delicate bird like a Flycatcher.

The food had obviously not been changed since I put it in on Tuesday night, the consequence naturally being that the bird was poisoned, and I have since lost it. I think it absolutely disgraceful to treat birds in such a way, apart from the loss to exhibitors of birds they value, and which are, as in this case, quite irreplaceable; it is downright cruelty to the birds themselves.

It is only fair to mention that I have been assured that this sort of thing is quite exceptional at the Clapham Show, which is, as a rule, very well managed, and the exhibits well cared for. However this may be, the fact remains that upon the two occasions upon which I have exhibited at this show I have had ample reason to regret my temerity. The other occasion I refer to was, speaking from memory, in 1911, when, through some carelessness, they allowed some Parrot finches to escape, one of which was never recovered.

A Suggestion to Judges.

Whilst on the subject of shows, I think it would be of general interest if judges would always give their reasons for the awards they make, such as is the practice in certain dog shows, etc. This would enable exhibitors to see where they had failed, and give them the opportunity of doing better upon the next occasion. I always myself imagined that the rarity of the exhibit and the difficulty of keeping it in captivity counted for most, but this apparently is not so, so it would be interesting to know upon what system, if any, birds are judged. I am referring, of course, to mixed classes of Soft-bills, etc., where different varieties compete against each other.

Gerald E. Rattigan.

[We have communicated the purport of this letter to the hon. sec. of the Clapham C.B.A., and his reply is as follows.—Editor, Cage Birds.]

The Hon. Secretary Replies to the Complaint.

Sir,—I am greatly indebted to you for letting me know of Mr. Rattigan's complaint about the treatment of his Spotted Flycatcher at our late show. I have enquired of Mr. Vale, who fed the Soft-billed section, about this particular exhibit, and he says the food vessel was stuck, and impossible to get at, so he put fresh food on top of the old each day, and saw the bird eat it; he also gave the bird mealworms, which it ate. With regard to the bird not being named in catalogue, I cut out the names of the specimens owing to the cost of printing, and thereby saved four pages, which would have added to the cost of catalogues. As it was, we had to pay 7½d. each, and sold them at 6d.

The old complaint of a bird being lost several years ago I have no personal knowledge of, but I can assure you and Mr. Rattigan that every possible care is taken of exhibits whilst in our charge, and we have always been complimented upon the way our exhibitions have been conducted. Our committee comprises some of the most capable and hard-working fanciers in the kingdom, and I am deeply sorry Mr. Rattigan should have lost such an interesting exhibit. I can assure him that everything possible was done for the bird, and it is through no inattention on the part of any person in connection with the Clapham C.B.A. that it has died.

Border Fancies at Sheffield.

Breeders and Exhibitors as Judges.

Sir,—In reply to the letter of Dr. Craig, in which he states that he wishes to explain the end of the controversy with me for the benefit of fanciers who are interested and might be misled by my last letter, I am quite agreeable to leave the matter in the hands of your readers, who can form their own opinion whether they have been misled by me or not. The only conditions made by me were as published in Cage Birds of Oct. 14, and were worded exactly as in a private letter sent direct to him.

His letter in your last issue might convey to some that I had a standing grudge against the judge mentioned; this is far from the truth, and at the time of writing him I had no notion who were to be the judges (in his former letter he states "the same judges") until I heard from him. My sole reason for making the condition that the judge must be both a breeder and exhibitor of the Border Fancy Canary was the conviction which I have held with many more exhibitors for a number of years, that when once a fancier stops being a breeder and exhibitor he should also retire from judging. When judges have to keep in the thick of competition themselves it keeps their mind active to the conditions in which their brother fanciers have to exhibit, and keeps them up to date in what is required to assist the specialist clubs under which shows are held.

The Sheffield Society are quite within their rights to engage whom they choose, and, much as I regret my conditions did not meet with their approval, I think they must also admit that by guaranteeing their classes where I stood to pay the piper I was entitled to select some part of the tune. I know, therefore, that your readers will not throw the onus of responsibility for the failure upon me.

(MANY INTERESTING LETTERS UNAVOIDABLY HELD OVER.)

WHICKHAM C.B.S.

Meeting, Oct. 2, Club room, Mr. J. Crass chair. Owing to clashing with other shows we have decided to hold ours on Nov. 25. Other two classes were added to schedule, one for British hens, any variety, and a 10s. selling, making a total of 25 classes. Fanciers are invited to join us, and should watch CAGE BIRDS for next and final meeting before show.—R. Johnson, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting, Oct. 21, North of England Cafe, Mr. J. Farrar presiding over a fair attendance. After going through the members' show business a very interesting discussion took place about previous shows held at Sunderland, some of the older members going back 30 years or more, when the rule was to show a cage of four birds.—F. Riseborough, Asst. Hon. Sec.

WEST OF SCOTLAND F.S.

Meeting, Oct. 7, Nelson Temperance Hotel, Mr. W. Wood presiding over a large attendance. Mr. J. Stewart gave a successful demonstration of his method of washing birds and thereafter judged a novice washing exhibition, and his awards were 1, Gilbert; 2, Hunter; 3, Fulton. Mr. Stewart was awarded a hearty vote of thinks.—W. Hutchinson, Sec.

NEW KYO (Constitutional) C.B.S.

Meeting, Oct. 8, Mr. R. Humphrey chair. After a lengthy discussion Mr. T. Dixon, of Bedlington, was elected judge. It was proposed to adopt last year's classes with an additional class each for young Nor., young York., and A.O.V. Brit. Sec. was instructed to write, re printing, etc. Members attend next meeting, Oct. 29, at 10.30 to have these classes confirmed.—J. W. Christon, Sec.

LEIGH C.B.S.

A very successful washing competition was held at the meeting, Oct. 18. There were several spectators, who seemed to enjoy the proceedings. Mr. T. Collier judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction: 1, C. Walkden; 2, H. Taylor; 3, R. Charleson. Several specials were offered for competition for our old show, and it was decided to leave the fixing of them until the next meeting.—R. Charleson, Sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting, Oct. 11, Mr. Jones, chair, with improved attendance, but room for more. Nominations for 1917 were made. Messrs. J. E. Crook and J. Bailey elected members. Table show result: Yorks.: 1, 3, 4, Jones; 2, vhc, Williams. Nov. Yorks.: 1, 2, 3, 4, Williams; vhc, Sisson. Norwich: 1, 2, 3, 4, vhc, c, Gill; hc, Sisson. Messrs. Drabble and Woolhouse judged. Members are urged to be present at the next meeting, so that business can be done. Mr. Towl will give a washing exhibition.—E. Sisson, Assist. Sec.

CLYDEBANK C.B.C.

Meeting Oct. 19, Mr. McGown presiding. The arrangements for annual show were practically completed. The judges selected are Mr. R. H. Livingstone, Rutherglen, Norwich and Yorkshires; and Mr. P. Gentleman, Avonbridge, Borders and British. Agreed to have the same adverts. as last year in CAGE BIRDS and the local papers, and to get all printing done by the Leith Printing Co. Any specials intended for annual show might be intimated to sec. before our next meeting Nov. 16.—Wm. Kane, Sec.

BRITISH ROLLER C.C.

A Series of Instructive Evenings for the study of the song of the Roller Canary.

Meeting, Oct. 17, Cock and Lion Hotel, 69, Wigmore St., W., Mr. Fisher presiding. Notwithstanding very bad weather there was a good attendance, and a notable feature was a number of visitors, so much so that it was felt desirable to postpone business to an interim meeting to be called in a few days, and so get on straight away with discussion of the song from the birds present. We had a fine exhibition of a variety of tours in two young birds brought in by a notable breeder. Gluck, Gluck Roll, Schockel, Bell Roll as contrasted with Hollow Roll, were much discussed. Considerable interest attaches to the song of these young birds as they come up month by month, and those who have attended these meetings regularly are able to detect the gradual development of the tours as the season goes on. Next meeting there will be more birds, possibly some of the old moulted ones, and if the attendance means a crowded room visitors are requested to note that the landlady of the house has notified us that she will be pleased to let us have a larger room if it is found necessary.—Hy. W. Gutierrez.

BORDER FANCY C.C.

Annual Open Show to be Held.

Meeting of the Show Committee, at 142, High St., Edinburgh, Oct. 21. Election of office-bearers for 1916 resulted in Mr. Jas. Lumsden President, Mr. S. Buglass Vice-pres. and Show Manager, and W. B. Smart Sec. Committee: Messrs. J. Aitchison, A. Bell, J. F. Dewar, A. Gilchrist, W. Hock, J. Hutchinson, H. Watson, W. H. Nelson, J. Weir, C. Stewart. Decided to add any other member willing to act. It was agreed to again have a judge for each section at the annual open show; clears, variegated, and Greens and Cinnamons; three being proposed, it was left with the Sec. to have answers from them for next meeting, Nov. 18. Arranged that Sec. get offers from three different firms for printing schedule, and he was also instructed to write Sec. of Southern Club for use of staging at show. Failing Southern staging, it was left in the hands of Pres. and Sec. to arrange with other societies. Agreed to adopt last year's classification with the exception of heavily variegated class. Sec. was instructed to get offers from two local firms for prize cards. The President said we had secured St. Cuthbert's Church Hall this year, which the meeting considered a great improvement on last year. This hall is in King's Stables Road, off Lothian Road, and only two minutes walk from the side entrance of Caledonian Station. It now lies with every member of the club to be up and doing his best in the interest of our second show, Dec. 30, Jan. 1. If any member has any suggestion to make, I will be very pleased to hear of same in time for next meeting, and the committee will give them due consideration, as we are anxious to put out a good schedule. I will be very pleased to hear from any member who wishes to give a special.—W. B. Smart, Sec.

WALKLEY C.B.S.

Meeting, Oct. 12; Mr. Ridal, chair. Members please note alterations for annual show, Nov. 11. Birds are to be staged by 2.30, on view at 3.30, the show closing at 5.30. No charge for admission. Prize-money, 4s., 2s., 1s. Specials for each section. Officials nominated for 1917. Third table show result: Yorks: 1, 2, 3, 4, vhc, hc, Williams; c, Sisson. Nor.: 1, 2, 3, 4, hc, Gill; c, Sisson. Mr. Drabble judged. Next meeting, important business.—E. Sisson, Assist. Sec.

EASTLEIGH C.B.S.

Meeting, Oct. 16, Secretary's residence, with a very good attendance, and some good business was done. Schedule for open show was passed, and it is hoped that exhibitors will do their best to keep the flag flying. Five silver medals will be competed for independent of our other trophies, and specials were also received from Messrs. Foyle, Chandler, Legg, Godbur, and Alderslade. There are several more promised, so everything is looking very well, considering the circumstances.—J. Alderslade.

WIGAN ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, Oct. 11, Mr. T. Kay, chair, and 18 members present. Decided to accept terms of judges for open show: Mr. J. Tomlinson (Newcastle), Mr. Lyons (Blackburn), Mr. Kilshaw (Bolton). Also decided to hold show Dec. 15-16, as arranged at the meeting in February last. Unanimously decided that Mr. Best, from Leeds, be sec. of control board. New member, Mr. J. Hitchen. Thirty-two special prizes were promised. We ended a busy night with a small whip round for our soldier members for smokes, etc.—W. T. Unsworth, Assist. Sec.

ABERDEEN (Amalgamated) C.B.S.

One Day Show for Charity.

Meeting, Sept. 27, arranged to hold open one-day show on Dec. 9, with same classification and prize money as last year. The surplus (after paying expenses) to be handed over to the Aberdeen and District Prisoners of War Bureau. Mr. George Bennett, Brechin, will judge open section (Canaries), Mr. John Strachan, Aberdeen, the Amateur section, son, H. Watson, W. H. Nelson, J. Weir, C. Stewart. The society is to go forward, relying upon the Fancy generally to give them their hearty support, as in the past, in their undertaking. Fuller particulars will be advertised in CAGE BIRDS later.—R. J. Robertson, Sec.

HIGHGATE & HAMPSTEAD C.B.S.

Extra Classes for Border Canaries.

Table show and judging competition, Headquarters, Oct. 16. Mr. W. Shakespeare officiated as final judge, his decisions being well received. Fifty birds were staged: Yorkshires 10, Norwich 15, British 25. Members first judged birds, entering their awards on slips, which were collected by Secretary. Mr. Shakespeare then judged in a very critical manner. Meanwhile a meeting was held and annual show business settled. A feature of business was putting on of extra classes for Borders. Our vice-president, Mr. T. R. Trower, again gives a generous array of special prizes. The silver medal for judging competition was won jointly by Messrs. A. and F. C. Knight. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Shakespeare for his services.—F. C. Knight.

GLASGOW & WEST. COUNTIES.

Meeting, Oct. 7, Mr. Wm. Dinwoodie presided over a fair attendance. Four Crest classes were added to classification of annual show, two for young birds and two for old. Mr. James Johnstone, Partick, was admitted a member. The management, ever on the look out for something special, did not belie their reputation when they introduced Mr. R. T. Campbell, of Dunfermline, to the members. Mr. Campbell chose for his subject the Border Fancy Canary, and right well did he handle it, both from a literal and scientific point of view. He touched on very many knotty points and at times he was on very dangerous ground, but Bob came through it all with credit. At the close many questions were asked and answered in a capable and efficient manner. Mr. Campbell was accorded a hearty vote of thanks, and we look forward to another of his visits in the near future. Next meeting, Nov. 4, a washing exhibition by Mr. J. H. Adam.—J. H. Adam, Hon. Sec.

GARSTON B.B.A.

Meeting, Headquarters, Oct. 18, when a Field-Moulted British Table Show was held. Goldf.: 1, 2, 3, Bryant. Greenf., Etc.: 1, Rothwell; 2, Leadbetter. Linnet: 1, Rothwell; 2, Leadbetter; 3 Jones. Siskin, Etc.: 1, Leadbetter; 2, Jones; 3, Griffiths; vhc, Bothwell; hc, Jones. A.O.V.: 1, Leadbetter; 2, Jones. Mr. J. Abbot, of Liverpool B.B.A., judged, and gave every satisfaction. During the judging the final selection of judge for annual show, Dec. 2, was made and the honour fell to Mr. W. Young, New Brighton, who gained the verdict by 1 vote from J. Thornton, Liscard.

Mr. J. Lloydd then gave a splendid demonstration on bird washing, washing three birds and outlining in detail the methods of handling the bird, and washing it from stem to stern in masterful fashion, and fully kept his audience engrossed. Washing a bird seems such an easy process when in such hands as Mr. Lloydd's. A hearty vote of thank to Mr. Lloydd, and to Mr. Abbot for judging brought to a close a most successful meeting. Next meeting Nov. 15.—R. T. Lonsdale, Hon. Sec.

QUEEN'S PARK AND DIS. C.B.A.

Public trial of the Sexing Apparatus which has been so much discussed in our columns.

Meeting, Headquarters, Emmanuel Hall, Harrow Road, W., Mr. Clark chair, and a splendid attendance of members and visitors. As was foreshadowed in last week's CAGE BIRDS, the demonstration by Mr. W. R. Bonniwell, on "How to ascertain the sex of Birds," proved most entertaining, it being followed with the keenest of interest by all present. The sex of those birds experimented with certainly proved to be correctly indicated by the ingenious method applied, and a great deal of discussion followed, but the opinion of those present seemed divided as to whether it was an infallible way of discovering the sex of birds. At any rate the demonstration proved most interesting and was enjoyed by all.

This was followed by Mr. W. G. Sanders reading a well thought out paper on "Matters of Opinion" which was very ably written, pointing out how opinions of fanciers varied in many respects appertaining to birds. At the conclusion of a very enjoyable meeting a hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. W. R. Bonniwell and Mr. W. G. Sanders for the way in which they had entertained all present.—W. R. Beasant, Hon. Sec.

EAST ANGLIAN NORWICH P.C.

Meeting, Festival House, Oct. 12, with a good attendance. Announced that the balance in hand to date, after paying all expenses, amounted to nearly £7, and this amount will be considerably increased. The completion of the general rules of the club was the principal business, and after considerable discussion the draft of these as made by the Committee was agreed to with very little alteration. Sec. was instructed to write to societies in East Anglia, inviting applications for the patronage of the club, and to point out that owing to the war, and the number of classes scheduled by many societies being greatly reduced, we are prepared to consider applications to moderate our requirements. —R. Tomlinson, Hon. Sec.

LONDON AND COUNTIES A.C.B.

Meeting, Oct. 7, Victoria Hotel, Charterhouse Street, E.C. Mr. F. Harrison presided over a good attendance. The special business of the evening was the washing competition. Messrs. Gilbert, Harrison, Durham, Dyer, and Cullers took part, and the silver medal went to W. Gilbert; Harrison 2nd, and Durham 3rd. Mr. W. Shakespeare then gave his washing demonstration, and all were greatly interested in his most instructive and expert manner of bird washing. Several questions were asked, and Mr. Shakespeare suitably answered them all. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Shakespeare for officiating as judge at the washing competition, and for the demonstration. Vote of thanks to the Chairman brought a pleasant evening to a close.—W. Gilbert, Hon. Sec.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Meeting, Godfrey's Dining Room, Trinity Street. Mr. E. J. Banks presided over a well-attended meeting. A communication was read from Mr. R. L. Crisp stating that through pressure of business he would not be able to judge at our show, and it was agreed that Mr. H. C. Smith take the whole of the Yorkshire section, Mr. J. H. Payne the open Norwich and Mule classes, Mr. Maggs the Novice Norwich and Selling, and Mr. H. Norman Borders and British. Resolved, that all wounded soldiers be admitted free to the show, and that invitations be sent to the various hospitals. We made two new members, Mr. Wilson and Mr. C. Haines. Resolved that we pay night stewards for the open show. Our President, C. Williams, Esq., sent a donation of £5 towards the show funds, and the following members also gave donations and specials, Messrs. Banks £1 1s., Pugh 10s. 6d., Smith 10s., Thomas 10s., Phelp 5s., Allsopp 5s., Pearce, Wiseman and Wilson 2s. 6d. each. Mr. Ball promised 4 specials; will all other members let me know what specials they have? The show fund will be open for donations until the show. Contributions are now due, and members who are in arrear will not be entitled to compete for any members' special.—E. Thomas, Sec.

BRISTOL C.B.S.

At the monthly meeting of the above society at headquarters, City Arms Hotel, Narrow Wine Street, Oct. 4, a very successful table show for moulted birds took place before a good attendance, about 40 birds being staged. The exhibits were well above the average, and the general opinion was that a good many of them will be heard later in open competition, which goes to prove that the cage bird fancy in Bristol is booming and very much alive. Mr. Lovell judged, and his awards were well received. Champ. Nor.: 1, 2, 3, Sampson. Yell., Unflig.: 1, 2, 3, Tristem; vhc, hc, Greenslade; c, Matthews. "HOMING" SONG BIRDS.

By A. R.

A charming account, by a life-long bird lover, of his birds which he trained to leave and return to their cages.

MULES are not to be recommended as likely homers. My one experiment with such ended more at a deterrent than any other. I formed the opinion that at the first opportunity, given the wild instincts of the Finch blood, aggravated by an undeveloped sense of self-preservation, hybrids lose their heads the moment they feel the unwonted sensation of complete freedom.

I had reared in a large garden aviary a nest of four Mules—one Goldfinch, one Linnet, two Siskins—(the Canary mother had not been very particular in the choice of a husband and had coquetted with three.) The Siskin Mules turned out hens, and after their first moult I caged them for some days where they could see the aviary with all its occupants, the scene of their young life. I reckoned on their making straight for this, like many other birds had done before at the first opportunity available. Vain hope! They rose at once, cleared every inviting settling place and disappeared over some high trees in that first unchecked flight. I lost faith in Mules then.

A German Goldfinch, after raising some Canary Mules, escaped one September day, and was only discovered through his twittering in the trees. His Canary wife was promptly hung up, but did not utter a sound of call. Meanwhile Goldie sampled the tree-tops for aphides, and enjoyed himself generally for more than two hours, and it was getting dark. He had then strayed out of sight, and I mentally classed him with the failures of previous trials.

I left his cage out, furnished with fresh seed, and his favourite maw and hemp seed inside the open door, and next morning that bird had become a Homer. Before I had the chance of looking at the empty cage, he had visited it and regaled himself. He soon returned again, and was carefully secured for that day. On the next and last occasion he served me in the same way, and, not liking to lose a valuable muling Finch, I kept this Homer for a more tangible benefit.

The Greenfinch which Refused Liberty.

Greenfinches lend themselves readily to make Homers. A hen, which I had got tired of keeping, was let out of a window where a few birds in cages were hung up, but, although she had then only been caught two months, she elected to sit on the cages until the window was opened for re-admission.

Now, that bird was simply too lazy to fly away in order to forage for herself, and being voracious, like all Greenfinches, kept near the well-spread table within reach, rather than join the hungry throng starving in the open. I did not, however, trust her after February, but kept her with a cock-bird in an outdoor aviary, where she built, laid eggs, and sat the full time, but all were clear, much to my chagrin.

This reminds me of another hen Greenfinch found in a common spring-trap cage, captured by the tips of her out-spread wings, which were held fast by the closed trap-door. While thus suspended, she was greedily eating the seeds used as bait. I released that bird, of course, but there was no keeping her out of the trap for a few days; at last I carried her fully a mile into the country, and set her free. This proved insufficient; before I reached home she was in the trap again, but for the last time!

I made a cage-bird of that hen, and let her have the sustenance which she was probably unable easily to procure in the natural way. No! This was not an escaped prisoner, glad to throw away her liberty to appease her hunger, but a perfectly-plumaged wild country bird. What a homer she would have made had I wanted one then?

Foreign Birds as "Homers."

A more surprising experiment, meeting with perfect success, was made by me when living in a south-western suburb of London. Among my foreign birds was an odd Grey Waxbill, which had been out of health for a month or so, keeping, however, in perfect plumage. The little mite constantly puffed out its body feathers, and never ceased looking for something outside its prison.

Putting aside all scruples, called up by the contemplation of its puny body, the cage was hung outside the conservatory, and the door opened. One minute later it had flown to the garden path, from which it returned to its cage half an hour later a happier and a healthier bird. In a few days that little Astrild had become a charming Homer, in the pink of health, defying the Sparrows, laughing at cats. The white-painted conservatory served as beacon, the skylight as means of egress and ingress to its board and bed.

I then thought of increasing the number of my foreign Homers, and selected a single St. Helena Waxbill for the purpose. Nothing was easier than success. The St. Helena, being in excellent health, straightway joined the Grey Waxbill, and followed it closely. Thus I had two most perfect Homers, which caused me no uneasiness of being lead astray by any wild congener.

Instead of increasing their number, I contented myself with studying their habits as unfettered denizens of a London suburb. The next nearest locality to do this would have been—Africa. My observations can be briefly recorded.

Free Waxbills in a London Suburb.

One side of the road I lived in was not built upon. The land was not under cultivation, and being bordered by a long row of old elm trees and a ditch, offered food and shelter to numerous wild birds.

When I let my Waxbills out, they disported themselves in the cultivated shrubs of the back garden, visited the lawns and gravel paths very warily and briefly, and then disappeared over the roofs. The flight was vigorous, but not of great velocity; quicker than that of our Titmice, but slower than our Willow Wrens; the propulsion was intermittent, showing, however, very little arch or drop; the short call note was uttered incessantly when on the wing.

My birds would make for the middle of the nearest tree in front of the house, after crossing the fallow land, and travel by stages to the very farthest elm. By that time they were about five hundred feet from their home. Frequently have I seen them flying in a bee line from the top of that tree towards the roof beneath which they would find food, shelter, and especially water. They always seemed thirsty on their returns to the conservatory.

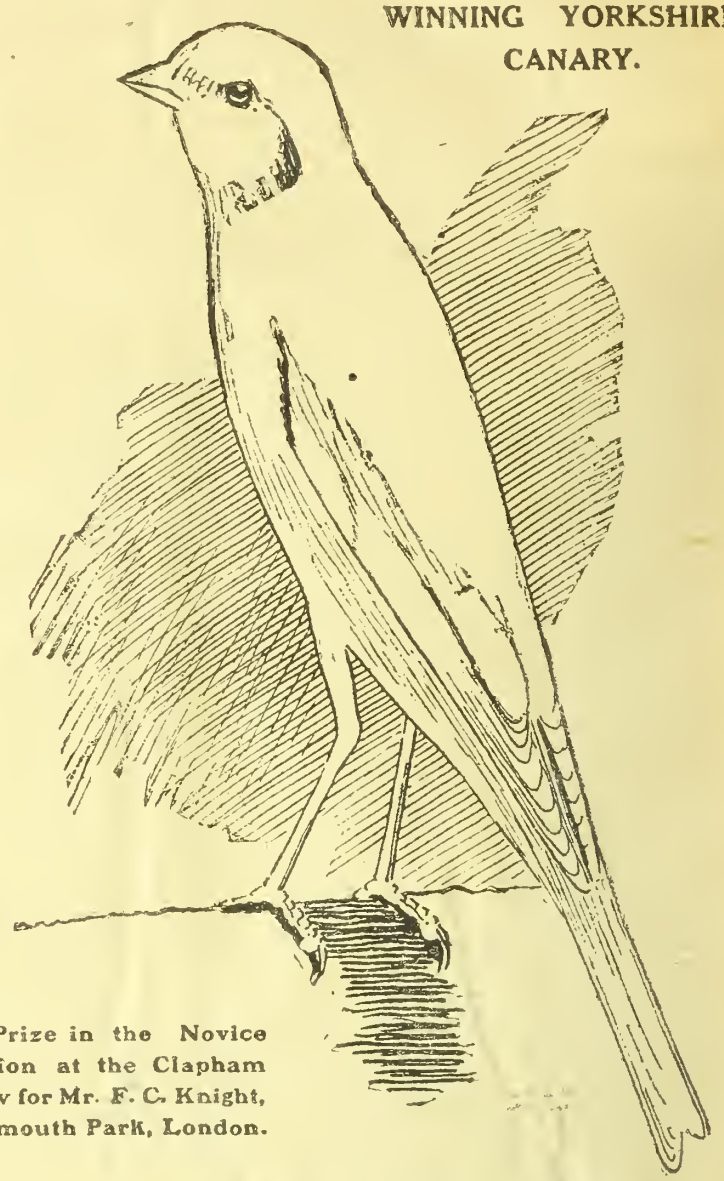
An Unfortunate Ending.

With the advent of shortened days, I had to keep my Waxbills in a warmer atmosphere, and before the next spring came round they were "no more." A terrible winter and a household removal during a blizzard were responsible for many losses in my live-stock.

Cripples or very old cage birds, unable to use their wings effectually, must not be experimented with while in that state of defencelessness. A summer migrant, after enjoying the tender care of its keeper all the winter months, if released before Nature has provided ample sustenance for it, would starve or get killed through exposure, before it could resume its earlier habits of supporting life.

But to some extent such a bird could be turned into a Homer. I well remember a hen Blackcap, which would not leave the garden, but re-entered the cage as soon as it was carried outside; but there were then no wild Blackcaps about likely to entice mine away, nor insects or elderberries.

The first Homers I had were three Serin finches taken with the nest and reared by the parents—heartlessly caught when tenderly endeavouring to bring them sustenance. Deeming the young to be all hens, they were offered their liberty after some three months. Two hours later they were all back in their cage, which, henceforth, was fixed inside a second floor room, where for two months the birds had free access to food and sleeping quarters through an open window. Meanwhile they had moulted, turned out to be males after all, and showed an inclination to camp out at night. Then I stopped the excursions.



Next spring one only had survived, and he proved faithless to his trust after a few days' freedom. Nature's laws would not be defied any longer.

THE PEKIN ROBIN And How to Keep It.

By E. ALLISON, Tulse Hill.

A short account of a most charming foreign bird which, while presenting no particular difficulty in its keeping, is a splendid songster.

THE Pekin Robin is a bird that is rather delicate on first arriving in our rather sunless land, but after it has been with us a month or so, and has become acclimatised, it is a very hardy subject and, if properly treated, will keep in perfect condition for years.

When freshly imported it should have plenty of insect food and grubs, and a good deal of ripe fruit, but later it can be easily kept on any really good insectile food, accompanied by an allowance of fruit, say half banana until finished, a half apple or a pear, a few grapes, a plum, or even a few soaked raisins if fresh fruit is unobtainable. I mean, of course, any one of these fruits at a time.

All kinds of insects should be offered in addition, and anything from blight on a rose leaf to a large moth is appreciated. Recently I gave my cock Pekin a large specimen of the moth family, more or less as an experiment, and after I had put it in his cage it occurred to me that it was rather an unusual insect to give, and thought it might upset him. It was partly devoured, and I put my hand in the cage to take it out, but the language of the bird was so awful that I had to desist, he was absolutely "mad" on devouring it, and it all disappeared immediately.

A great feature of my Pekin Robins is their habit of criticising by means of loud scolding, and sometimes subdued mutterings, the food offered, or the apparel of any person visiting them who does not meet with their approval. The other morning I had caught a mouse in one of the "break back" traps and the remarks of the Pekins, when they saw it and "strafed" it were absolutely blasphemous.

In order to obtain the maximum of song from a cock Pekin, the plan that I have found the best, is to have a hen within calling distance, but out of sight of the cock; by this method I have had Pekin music from one bird every day of the year, moult included. If the hen is a good distance off, the song is even louder, and seems to fill the house with cheerful melody.

The Pekin Robin makes an endearing pet, and takes a lively interest in everything that occurs. He is very inquisitive, and any new arrival in the bird room causes him the greatest concern until the newcomer has satisfied him that his credentials are in order, and that he comes from a respectable family, and carries his exemption card, etc.! If the newcomer should be placed under the Pekin's cage, not visible, his curiosity, if unsatisfied, will cause him the greatest anxiety.

I find that Pekins do best kept separately in a good sized cage indoors. I have tried a pair in an outdoor aviary, but the cock nearly killed the hen in the raptures of his very numerous passions, and scarcely ever sang properly. They also seemed very easily upset by the presence of cats, even in the day time, and, if there is one thing that grows well in a London garden it is cats.

By the way, if any reader wishes to test his stock of restraint in trying circumstances, I would recommend him to try and catch, without a bird net, a healthy Pekin Robin in a fair sized aviary. Greased lightning is slow going compared with the movement of one of these birds being pursued by a mere man, and even when you think you have caught it, you usually find that the bird has slipped through your fingers like fine sand.

I have tried to breed Pekins, but have never got them beyond the highly interesting stage of love-making. In conclusion I would remark that if you have a true pair that have been cage-moulted the sexes are easy to distinguish, but if you see a mixed lot in a dealer's cage, the task is very difficult for an amateur. The plumage of the cock is much brighter and bolder everywhere than the hen's, and especially on the throat and long feathers in the wing. Round the eye of the cock the feathers are yellower than those of the hen, but the song of the cock is the never-failing guide and a daily source of delight to all.

FINE SHOW AT LIVERPOOL.

A TRIUMPHANT SUCCESS—LAST YEAR'S RECORD ECLIPSED.

Magnificent Entry of 961 Splendid Specimens.

The 9th annual open show of the Liverpool O.S. took place Oct. 20 and 21. St. Martin's Hall, in which the exhibition was held, is a most capital venue, spacious, lofty, free from draughts, and nicely lighted. The birds were well staged at a convenient height to be comfortably seen.

The management, as usual, was perfect, no hitch whatever occured, and everything went as smooth as marriage bells. The Merseysiders are a jovial and enthusiastic lot of fanciers, and it does one good to be amongst them.

The Men who did the Work.

An enormous amount of work throughout the show days was got through practically and to a nicety by Messrs. T. Rowlands (the Yorkshire Green expert), G. Benson, W. R. Knowles, J. Abbott, and T. Evans. Mr. E. Lawson, the treasurer, has his heart and soul in the society, and to describe adequately the worth of Messrs. J. W. Metcalfe and G. Green, the joint hon. secs. to the society, would be beyond the power of words; one might go many miles before locating their equals. Stewards deserving of the fullest praise, each one proving himself an acquisition, were Messrs. H. Jones, J. Knight, A. Parsons, J. Roberts, Scatterwait, Leadbeater, Huyton, and J. Thornton (chairman). We must not forget the indefatigable lady helper, Mrs. J. R. Jones. Every show time sees her busy and industrious, tending to many details promptly and efficiently.

Mr. G. Green makes a fine show manager; his handling of the venture proved him to be master of his job. He and his colleagues were highly delighted with the fine entry of 961, which proved to be 161 up on last year's number.

Quite a host of wounded soldiers were present (all invited free by the society), enjoying themselves to the fullest. Amongst the many well-known visitors was Mr. Keating, all the way from Dundalk.

Unfortunately several cases of exhibits did not arrive in time for judging, although the classes in which they were entered were kept open until about one o'clock.

Champion Exhibitors Send their Representatives.

Yorkshires made a nice collection, both in numbers and quality. Many envious eyes fell upon the yellow cock and buff cock standing at the head of their respective classes, and doing great credit to their owner, Dr. W. Craig. Yorkshire Greens were grand, better type and col. prevailing than in those of a few seasons back, a progression to be noted with pleasure. Toppers were benched by Messrs. T. Rowlands, who had quite a field day (5 1sts), and R. P. Roberts. Norwich Greens were good, although not numerous; gems were those the property of Messrs. J. McAndrew and R. Barker. Norwich Plainheads captivated. Type, quality, colour, and substance were all in evidence. The clear buff cock of Sam Cook's is a stormer, and will want some stopping. Mr. A. C. Brotherhood scored in unflighted yell. cocks with a clear possessing all the essentials of a true Norwich. The bird was a study of an ideal Norwich, and great credit is due to the owner for the perfect manner in which he staged a perfect bird. Mr. W. N. Turner staged a magnificent team, and his stud accounted for three 1sts. Borders, the "wee gems," were numerous and exquisite. Many exhibits that were fully worthy of a 1st had to be satisfied with lower mention, the competition in this section being "red hot," such stalwarts as Messrs. J. S. Wilson, J. Nicholson, G. Higgins, J. Brown, D. Lawson, T. E. Davison, and A. Reid, putting down their warriors to do battle. Mr. G. Large, the judge, must have had a stiff task in separating which from which in the yellow and buff (clear, etc.) classes. He went into raptures over them, and might well do so, for they were "hot stuff." He would have liked to give three sets of prizes.

Among the Mules and British.

Canary Mules brought a few good birds together, the winner, an eye ticked buff Goldf.-Canary, was shown in the best of condition. We missed a lot of last year's cracks this time, but perhaps they are not quite ready yet. British birds were a very good lot, and the winners had to be in tip-top form to get there. Goldfinches were smaller in numbers than usual, but made up in quality. Linnets were a fine all-round lot, and it only wants a little more time to make some of these take higher honours. Greenfinches were few, but very good. The Siskin, Twite, or Mealy Redpoll class contained some of the best Twites and Siskins seen together here for some time, very little separating all the card winners, a slight change in condition may easily alter positions. The Lesser Redpoll class was exceptionally good, and two sets of winners could have been placed. Brambles and Chaffinches were very fine—the winning Bramble being an ideal of perfection. The A.O.V. Hardbills were led by a fine conditioned Hawfinch, and about the largest and best Corn Bunting seen for years stood 2nd. Softbills were conspicuous by their absence this year. Under war circumstances the British classes must be counted very good on the whole.

Catalogues with awards were on sale by 4 o'clock. Many entries were sent too late to appear in the catalogue, the printer, through shortage of labour, not being able to include them.

The show-room was cleared and all birds got away on their return journey by 6 p.m. on Saturday, and prize-money was paid out to all fanciers present on the second day. Judging commenced in good time, and capital light assisted the judges, Messrs. H. W. Battye (Yorks.), J. C. Barnes (Norwich), G. Large (Borders), and C. Boulton (British).

ABERTILLERY.

GRAND BIRDS AND A RECORD ENTRY.

The 4th annual show of the Abertillery C.B.S., Oct. 18, proved a great success in every way. The entry was a record for the society, over 400 exhibits facing the judge, comprising as fine a collection of really good exhibits as has been seen at a provincial show, even in pre-war times. This society has indeed made rapid strides in a very short time, and its show is recognised as one of the foremost shows in Wales. This success is not to be wondered at when one meets the officials, all of whom are keen fanciers with but one object in view—the success of their society. The hall is ideal, being well lighted and free from draughts, and the birds were staged in tiers at just the right height to be seen comfortably. This year our old friend, Mr. R. H. Mortimer, acted as show manager, and, in saying that the arrangements were perfection, we only give him the credit that is his due. He was ably assisted by the hard-working committee, Messrs. Hyde, Cooper, Morton, Selby, Webber, Blackmore, Parfitt, Powell, Scott, Salter, Russell, Orill, Warr, and Bibbings, all of whom carried out their duties well. The hon. secretary, Mr. Wm. Newell, though new to the duties, did his part well, and he had as his lieutenant on show day, Mr. E. Moule, another keen fancier, to whom nothing is a trouble.

Norwich were a fine collection, Messrs. Hathaway, Broome, Morris, Amphlett, and Rev. Jolliffe putting down good teams. Yorks also were a very level lot, two sets of winners being easily obtainable in most of the classes. The "Wee Gems" also came up well, the winners being all birds of great merit, while the novice classes were really astounding, the type and quality of the exhibits right through being excellent and reflecting great credit on their owners. Indeed, had some of them been in the champion classes the awards would have been considerably affected. Mrs. Bridgwater's team of Norwich, Mr. Maidment and Mr. Pritchard's Yorks, and Mr. Lapworth and Mr. Egerton's Borders, to mention only a few, were much admired. Sales were exceedingly good, and quite a large number of exhibits changed hands at good figures.

Members' specials were won as follows: Cup, most points, special best Border, special best Nor., special most points in show, Mr. Geo. Broome; special best Yorks, special runner-up for cup, Mr. J. Pritchard; special best unflighted, special 3rd most points, Mr. Newell. Mr. J. Robson judged.

NEWCASTLE'S RED CROSS SHOW

The 11th annual show of the Newcastle C.B.S., which a month ago seemed destined to failure, turned, through the energies of the members, into one of the most successful shows ever held by the society. A little over a month ago the members decided that in spite of the war it was in the interests of the Fancy generally to hold a show. Time was short, but it has been used to its fullest extent, and the officials wish to thank the numerous visitors for so generously supporting their efforts The Town Hall, which the Corporation generously offered at a nominal rental, was the venue, and no doubt the central position increased the number of visitors. The entry reached a total of 750 birds, which, considering the times and the fact that Liverpool's effort was held on the same day, Oct. 21, was considered excellent. The gate reached a total of £19, in addition to a very large number of tickets sold, so that a good balance should be available to hand over to the local branch of the Red Cross Society and St. John's Ambulance Brigade.

There were many visitors from a distance, but time was too brief to get all their names. Mr. J. W. Gordon Stewart, who is now known to all readers of CAGE BIRDS as the writer who introduced the discussion on the Pros and Cons of Inbreeding, which has created such interest, travelled all the way from Ipswich, and made his debut as an exhibitor. We congratulate him upon his success, and understand that his lovely marked hen, 3rd in the open unflighted class, was one result of the application of his inbreeding theories. Our old friend Jim Patterson, was present from Chirnside, helping to unpack the birds and assisting as steward. Others whom we recognised were Messrs. Bell, Carlisle; Carr, Middlesbro'; Wright, York; Riseborough, Swan, and Farrah, of Sunderland; Parlett, Sheffield; and many other prominent men from all over the country. An unfortunate occurrence was that a fine Scotch Fancy from Mr. Willison, of Barrow-in-Furness, arrived dead at the show. Mr. Heggie's exhibits from Glasgow did not arrive till after judging was finished. The case was broken, and one of his birds had got out of its cage; fortunately it was no worse, but it is a great pity that such fine exhibits should have been so unfortunate, for several would undoubtedly have stood high in their respective classes.

The officials, headed by the energetic Chairman and Show Manager, were one and all at their positions and had all ready by nine o'clock, when judging would have commenced, but they decided to wait for a while for the non-arrivals, all of which turned up by ten except Mr. Heggie's. Messrs. Holden, Maddison, Studholm, Harris, Kirwan and others all did their work as stewards well, whilst the thanks of everyone are due to "Billy" Curry, the society founder, who got the loan of a horse and cart and was in his element getting the birds to and from the show. The Secretary, Mr. Laidlow, filled a gap when the society was in its struggles, and his pleasant way and happy manner have already stamped him as a successful secretary. What he has done in one month others have taken two or three to do. To him undoubtedly the great success of the show was due. A well known Northern pigeon fancier, Mr. D. Armstrong, most ably assisted Mr. Laidlow in his secretarial duties. The judges are all to be congratulated upon their share. Mr. George Dobinson took Norwich, Mr. T. C. Crawhall, Crests; T. Tomlinson, Yorkshires; J. Stanger, Borders and Scotch Fancies, and R. Tindall, Mules, British and Foreign, and their awards were well received. Norwich totalled 206 in 8 classes, Crests 83 in 4 classes, Yorkshires 116 in 7 classes, Scotch Fancies 13 in 2 classes, Border Fancies 174 in 9 classes, Mules, British and Foreign, 158 in 13 classes. Mr. Maddison's clear Goldie Mule won the Arthur Young Cup, given by Mrs. Young in memory of her son, Captain A. C. Young, who was killed in France, and who was an ardent Foreign Bird fancier and a regular attendant at the shows and Club's meetings.

CANARY QUERIES

AGE TO PAIR.

Breeder.—In a general way all Canaries, both cocks and hens, that were bred in the proper season this year, will be old enough to mate and breed next season. Youngsters bred very late, or out of the proper season at the end of the year would still breed successfully towards the end of next summer, and no harm would result from allowing them to have one brood next year, although from an economie standpoint it may be wiser to run them over the year without mating, and mate them at the beginning of the following one. It also adds to the stamina of the larger breeds, such as Lancashires or Crests, to regularly run a few birds of the year over the season without mating, to give them more time to mature and harden before taking up the onerous duties of rearing young. It is not absolutely essential to mate one year hens to two-year-old cocks, though it is certainly a very judicious plan to mate a year old bird with one that is older, say, two or three seasons, but it is immaterial on which side the seniority exists. Thus, you may mate a one year old hen to a two or three year old cock, or if more convenient it may be a one year old cock with a two or three year old hen. Indeed, it is necessary to mate both ways unless all the young cocks of last season are to remain idle all through the first season, which is not at all necessary.

PET NORWICH NOT SINGING.

New Novice Reader.—(1) It is quite the usual thing for a bird to go off song whilst it is moulting, so that, in all probability, fully explains the silence of your bird during the time it has been moulting. A few birds will retain their song more or less fully during the period of moult, but these are always the exceptions that go to prove the rule. In all ordinary cases the song is resumed in a few weeks after the moult is quite finished. If it seems long in commencing, ten drops of lemon juice and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece added to the drinking water every second day for a fortnight or so will help it, and also tend to clear and strengthen the voice when it does begin, as the voice is apt to be a little harsh for a time when a bird first opens out after moulting. (2) The refusal to bathe during the latter part of the moult is of no consequence at all. Continue to offer the bath as usual on bright days about three times a week now, and it will in course of time resume its old habits. Or you may offer it a bath daily for a time, leaving it in the cage for an hour each time, which will induce it to resume its bathing habits quicker than otherwise it might. (3) The black strip which has appeared or the beak is probably nothing more than an indication of green blood dormant in the bird's system, and as such is of no moment whatever.

UNFLIGHTED BIRDS WITH NEW TAILS.

A Show Question (Rex).—(1) It is rather a delicate question whether the young bird which you say has grown a new tail in consequence of the hen plucking it in the nest can be correctly shown in an unflighted class. As it has not changed its flights from the same cause, it must naturally be a moot point whether the tail was not removed to give the bird just that little extra advantage in length which it might have lacked, and as this is the way the judge must consider it, you will see that with the best of intentions you run a risk of the bird being at least "passed." Strictly speaking, the bird is not eligible for either class. (2) Theoretically the bird would not be eligible for a flighted class, even though it has a new crop of feathers in the tail, so long as it has a complete set of nestling flights; moreover, it would be at a disadvantage in competing with flighted birds. (3) It is very probable that a complete new tail may escape notice on an unflighted bird, but if suspected, a judge would be able to form a pretty shrewd opinion as to whether the tail was a first or second one. Whether he gave the bird the benefit of any doubt would depend upon the judge. In any case, if you exhibited the bird in its present condition you should be prepared to accept the judge's decision in good spirit if you found the bird passed unnoticed.

NORWICH CANARIES NOT LAYING.

Hopeful.—(1) As you do not give me the slightest clue to the age of the birds in question, beyond saying that they have no scales on the legs, by which of course, you mean that they do not show the large coarse scales which are characteristic of old age, I cannot hazard a guess as to whether they were too old to lay or not. If they were late hatched 1915 they would be well worth trying again next season, mating them with vigorous young cocks in full song, but if the present was their second breeding season, or more, and they have not laid yet, you would be well advised to take no further risk of disappointment with them another season. In the latter case your sentiment of not unloading them on to someone else is a good and worthy one, and does you much credit. This is the true fancier-like spirit. (2) It is quite possible that the vigorous singing of the cocks at the sitting hens was the sole cause of the hens deserting the clutches of fertile eggs. If they were young hens in their first season they will probably do better than this next year, but, nevertheless, it would be much the best plan to take the cocks away from these hens when they begin to sit and leave the hens to hatch and rear the young by themselves, which they will probably do much better without the presence of the cocks than with them.

LOSS OF PLUMAGE.

W. T. H.—It would have been better if you had given full particulars, as to how the bird is fed and where it is kept. It is quite possible that you have been devoting too much attention to the cage and not enough to the birds. If the feeding and general treatment be fairly good, then I have little doubt, considering the age of the bird, that it is a physical degenerate which is not very likely to respond satisfactorily to treatment. Anyway, you may treat as follows for a month and then report result, giving full particulars as suggested above, when I will advise you further if necessary. Of one thing you may rest assured; the mere loss of these feathers is not in itself likely to cause death. See that it is kept in a bright and airy place, but not exposed to direct cold draughts or rapid extremes of temperature; above all, do not hang it in a window, nor near or over a burning light in the evening. Neither should it hang high up near the ceiling, where the air is always the most impure and irritating in the room. Let the situation be as equable as you can manage, and fairly comfortable though it need not be overheated. As a staple diet give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition give separately every third day a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake lightly dusted with flour of sulphur and sprinkled with maw seed. On the intervening days give first a morsel of banana or a spray of some green salad as long as you can get the latter in a fit condition to use, and add to the drinking water ten drops of lemon juice and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence, and the next day half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, linseed and broken groats. Offer the bath three times a week on bright mild days, and early in the day, so that the plumage may have time to dry before the bird retires to roost.

GASPING FOR BREATH.

Mowgli.—The bird is evidently badly affected with bronchial trouble, and I am rather inclined to agree with you that it has probably already become chronic, in which case the chances of a permanent recovery are rather slight. Alleviation is generally all that can be expected in such cases, and the following treatment should do all that is possible in this direction. See that it is kept in a comfortable place, rather on the warm side for the present, but do not overdo it in the matter of heat, and see that the warmth, whatever the degree, is fairly equable and not subject to rapid fluctuations, and strictly avoid cold direct draughts and irritating fumes, such as may arise near or over the vicinity of burning lights in the evenings. Give a plain mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape, as staple diet, and in addition give separately every third day a half-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod-liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the intervening days give first a morsel of banana or some green salad, and the next a pinch of mixed seeds. In the drinking water add every second day for a week six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence. After this get a chemist to mix you two drachms each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, one drachm each of ipecacuanha wine and sweet spirit of nitre, and add six grains of iodide of potassium, and give 15 drops of this mixture in the water every second day for a fortnight, then stop it for a week, and resume and give it again for another fortnight.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

A WELL-BUILT AVIARY.

Wm. Wooldridge.—I must congratulate you upon putting up such a good aviary single-handed. No doubt it entailed a good deal of work, but I am sure it must have been a pleasurable undertaking, and I wish you every success with your birds. The aspect, due West, is not at all a bad one; in fact, I prefer it myself to one due South, which at times gets unpleasantly hot. The only cause for anxiety will be during very rough weather (which mostly comes from the West) when your open flight will be very much exposed, unless you are fairly close to tall buildings, or something that will break the force of the gale. In describing your bird-room you do not say if you have a ceiling or not; if not, I should advise you to put one in, as it makes the room much warmer in the winter and keeps it cooler in summer.

BEGINNER AT MULE-BREEDING.

Hopeful.—Glad to hear you managed to get a young one in your first season; it is something to spur you on to doing better another time. I would advise you to use the hen Canary again with the cock Goldfinch, as she may throw something lighter next time. Your first nest from her could be pure Canaries, and still have time for Mules. The hand-reared Goldfinch hen had better be paired to a Greenfinch or Linnet, but you will, of course, not put them in the aviary with the cock Goldie and hen Canary, because the Goldie would be sure to pair with the hen of his own species. The cock Bullfinch does not bear a very good reputation as a breeder when in captivity, so you had better try another Finch to pair with the Canaries. Redpoll Mules are not so attractive as Goldfinch or Linnet Mules unless you get one large enough for exhibition.

FEEDING A GOLDFINCH MULE.

J. S.—There is not much wrong with your seed mixture, excepting the amount of linseed you are using. I would advise you to give a quarter of the quantity. Cannot you collect a few wild seeds for your Mule, such as shepherd's purse, groundsel, gold of pleasure, plantain, etc.? Failing these, give him a spray of chickweed daily, but be sure there is no frost on it. If you cannot get chickweed offer a slice of sweet apple or carrot. You cannot expect him to start singing directly he is through the moult. If he still appears slow in pulling himself together during the next fortnight give a few grains of sound hemp three times a week, and twice a week he may have a pinch of maw seed, and you could give a small spoonful of egg-food made damp with a few drops of chemical food. Let him bathe on fine days.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

PARROT WITH WEAK LEGS.

Mc.G. Rothsay.—You give me practically no details, and you must supply these before I can give a really helpful reply. Is it a new purchase? How has it been kept, fed, and generally treated? It is also rather late in the day to apply for advice in such a case. In the meantime soak the affected leg or legs in hot water (as hot as you can bear your hand in without discomfort), dry with a soft cloth and rub in Elliman's embrocation, or paint with neat whisky. Also give it a little cod liver oil emulsion daily, spread it thick on plain cake, bread, biscuit, or anything similar that the bird will eat. Give it one teaspoonful of fluid magnesia in the drinking water and repeat the dose after an interval of two days. Upon hearing fuller from you I will try and help you further.

TEMPERATURE OF ROOM FOR FOREIGN BIRD-KEEPING.

S. W. B.—If your room "strikes cold" in the morning it shows that a little warmth during the night would improve matters, and if there is a fireplace the simplest and healthiest way would be to keep a fire going, with, of course, a fine fire screen to keep falling cinders in bounds and to keep a bird away if it escaped from its cage. As your birds are in cages, they would certainly be the better for a little warmth. The matter is quite simple, banking the fire up at night should leave the room quite comfortable early next morning. In a state of nature, even tropical birds have to put up with a much lower night temperature than that of the day, even in the summer time. Of course, during mild winter days you would only just keep the fire in. Re the Weavers, the weaving instinct is greatest in the breeding season, though some weave all the year round. Supply them with a little hay and long grass and take out the wool, and they may do better.

RED-HEADED AMADINE FINCH.

E. P. M.—This is an unnecessarily long name for the Red-headed Finch (Amadina erythrocephala). They hail from Africa, and are first cousin to the Cutthroat (A. fasciata), with which species they have been crossed several times, and pretty hybrids have resulted. I see no reason why they should not breed in cages, though some pairs are shy breeders even in an aviary, and others are just as prolific. A dietary of canary and millet seed, green-food, grit, cuttlebone, and water, will about meet their simple requirements, though if any young are hatched it would be well to supply some live food (live ants' eggs, gentles, smooth caterpillars, etc.), and your chances of rearing the young will be all the more probable. They live out of doors (garden aviary) with me all the year round.

BUDGERIGARS AND THEIR AVIARY.

Esperance.—The aviary I consider to be in the best position where it is, but it will be much improved if you substitute a permanent end of half wood and half glass, and do away with the felt shutter. I have advised querists again and again to procure their male and female birds from different sources, so as to be sure of unrelated stock. I do not consider your aviary needs any alteration, unless you should be able to increase its size at any time, and then covered and open parts must be increased proportionately. To save disturbance from cats you could have wood and glass shutters to cover up the front at night all the year round, and if they were so fixed as to leave at least one inch space between the shutter and aviary front, and this space is left open top and bottom, they would have ample ventilation even in the hottest summer weather.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. The Post Office regulation is that bodies of birds must be sent at the letter rate of postage, and must be packed in hermetically-sealed receptacles which must themselves be enclosed in strong wooden, leather, or metal cases. If this regulation be infringed the packets may be destroyed by the authorities. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Wm. B Vaughan.—Meningitis was the cause of death of Canary. There were several hemorrhages on the surface of the brain. The bird was otherwise quite sound.

Mr. W. H. West.—Abdominal hemorrhage, resulting from an injury.

GENERAL.

THE VARIOUS NAMES OF THE GREENFINCH.

Viaduct Inn.—There is only one Greenfinch, but it is known locally by various names. "Joey," as you call it, is a name given to it in many localities, and another very general name for the Greenfinch is Green Linnet; there is, of course, no such bird as a Green Linnet; the term always means the Greenfinch. It is also called Big-head, Feather-poke, Greenbird, Chub, or Green Chub. Green Olph, Greenie, Peasweep, and by other names which we cannot recall for the moment. By the way, you did not forward your name and address according to our rules.

WILL HYBRIDS BREED?

E. G. Riddett.—This is a question which crops up almost weekly. Generally speaking, we can only say that Hybrids are sterile. Hybrids between closely allied species, such as tame pigeons and wild pigeons, various kinds of ducks, etc., are undoubtedly capable of producing fertile eggs, and it has sometimes been claimed that hybrids between the Canary and a British Finch have proved fertile. Such cases as the latter, however, are few and far between, and when investigated scarcely ever bear the test of enquiry.

AN "AUSTRALIAN GREY PARROT."

Mrs. Galbraith.—Your bird is a Rose-breasted Cockatoo. It is only a Parrot in the sense that all Parrot-like birds are popularly called Parrots. They may be Macaws, Cockatoos, Lories, or birds of several other kinds. The Grey Parrot of Africa is quite a different bird, and the best talker of all the Parrot tribe. The Australian Rose-breasted Cockatoo will sometimes say a few words after it has become thoroughly acclimatised and tame, but no bird of its kind approaches the Grey Parrot in linguistic capabilities.

PRIZE-MONEY AT SHOWS.

S. E. W.—The letter to which you refer does not seem to us to be directed against any society in particular. The remarks made were quite general, though you appear to take them as referring to your own society. What that society is we have no idea, as your letter bears neither name nor address. Any communication intended for publication must be authenticated by the proper name and address of the writer.

BOOKS ARE STAR SHELLS

THAT LIGHT THE WAY TO SUCCESS.

Our Handbooks Help Novice and Expert Alike.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS. By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.—An exceptionally helpful, intensely practical and instructive handbook for beginners and tyros at Canary Breeding. It contains 116 pages 7in. by 5in., and is profusely illustrated and contains innumerable hints helpful to all young bird-keepers. In this book the reader is instructed how to pair up the stock birds, how to cage and feed them, how to test the eggs, what to do when the young birds are hatched, and so on until the birds are old enough to be put on the show bench. ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS"

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Unerossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

"AILING Cage Birds and How to Cure Them," "Nutshell No. 6," an account of the troubles which beset captive birds, with the treatment and list of medicines to restore our pets to health. "Not a Song in Them."

(vide "Cage Birds," Oct. 28).

That is what the "Star" man said, and I quite believe it. But, if he had called on me here, he could have heard plenty of song, and with his own eyes seen a large collection of Canaries. To prove this fact up to the hilt, I invite any responsible person—by appointment—to call on me, then they can judge for themselves, whether I have the birds or not. Personally, I very much prefer to

Advertise what I possess
AND
What I have for Sale

than advertising myself. Respecting quality, that requires no comment from me. Value is the quintessence of cheapness. A few prices are given below for either

Plainheaded Norwich or Yorkshires.

These high-class birds are offered as follows:—Cocks, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 60/- each. Hens, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-. Pairs, judiciously mated, 20/-, 30/-, 40/- upwards. I have plenty of others at far lower prices. I will not say they are cheaper; but, still, good reliable birds. Hens, for instance, 3/6, 4/6, 5/-. Muling Hens, good, 4/6, 5/6, 6/6. You will do well to secure these now. Cages, 4d. and 6d.

SOUND ADVICE.

Purchase while you have this grand opportunity from above stock.

Also, I have a nice collection of CRESTS and CRESTED-BREDS, BORDER FANCIERS, etc., etc. Full particulars can be given of any kind on receipt of stamped envelope, or I shall be pleased to send my Illustrated List of other varieties free upon receipt of address.

W. RUDD, THE BIRD SPECIALIST, NORWICH.

BRITISH CANARIES.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

I wish to thank the Canary Breeders of Great Britain for their magnificent response to my advertisement "Wanted to Purchase." It will interest the Canary World to know that a record arrival has been made during the last week—7th October to 14th October. Over 1,109—one thousand one hundred—Canaries were received during seven days, and paid for same day as arrival.

Ask any Canary dealer if any deductions were made, or if any delay in payments. To have paid out £400 in one week, and given satisfaction to every sender is a fact to be recorded, and congratulated on.

The Canary branch of this business is conducted solely by my wife. I assure every sender they will receive fair and prompt attention at Mrs. Hamlyn's hands.

JOHN D. HAMLYN,

221, ST. GEORGE'S STREET, LONDON, EAST.

IMPORTANT.

To Breeders Wishing to Dispose of their Stock of CANARIES for SPOT CASH

we are prepared to offer the very Highest Prices for any quantity of 1916 Canaries, including NORWICH, YORKSHIRES, BORDERS, ROLLERS, and CRESTS. We are also open to purchase 1915 MALE CANARIES. Do not dispose of your Canaries until you have offered us your stock, as we are buyers of Large or Small Quantities and SPOT CASH. Further, we are buyers all the year round.

NORWICH AND YORKSHIRE CANARIES.
NORWICH AND YORKSHIRE CANARIES.
NORWICH AND YORKSHIRE CANARIES.
5, 10, 50, 100, or 1,000 pairs.

It will interest the Canary Fanciers to know that 4,220 British Canaries were shipped on the steamer "Manchuria" for New York, October 31, 1916.

These 4,220 birds were purchased between October 16 and October 28.

It constitutes a record purchase so far as the British Trade is concerned during the last twenty years. Every sender was paid cash. Only thirteen cocks, one hen, arrived dead, and half cost was paid, although they were suffocated through bad packing.

The value of the consignment was £3,000 (three thousand pounds).

I require 5,000 Canaries this coming week, for which cash will be paid.

MY GREY AND OTHER PARROTS

By T. W. TOONEY.

A delightful account of the pleasure to be derived in the proper keeping of Parrots as pets.

MR. Claude St. John's article on the Grey Parrot reminds me that I have often felt I should like to convey to the readers of CAGE BIRDS the extraordinary aptitude I have found the Grey Parrot and other members of the tribe to possess for the making of affectionate and entertaining companions. I am very much alone and live at a farm-house about three miles from any town, and so find the versatile and affectionate nature of these birds a great help during the long winter evenings.

I have two Greys, hen and a cock bird, a male Lesser Sulphur-Crested Cockatoo, and a Yellow-Fronted Amazon. The little hen Grey and the Cockatoo are probably the favourites, though the male Grey runs them close. These three are absolutely tame, and I can handle them anyhow I like.

Feminine Vanity.

The hen Grey is intensely feminine, being most unreasonably jealous of the others, so much so that I generally find it desirable to have her out alone. If she is in a temper that is not as it should be I find her irritation immediately allayed by letting her inspect herself in the glass which seems to give her the liveliest satisfaction. I am sure she realises it is herself because she hates my other Grey like poison, and loses no opportunity of giving him "beans."

On the other hand, her affection for me is almost pathetic, and I feel it sometimes to be more than I deserve. No one else in the world must touch her, or hardly look at her. Her great delight is for me to keep the other birds in their cages, to let her sit by my side on a little stand, and then, after I have properly wooed her with caresses, she will come creeping up my arm and as I lay back in my armchair, cuddle up against my face, lay her head under my chin, nestling in my beard, or kiss me with human-like kisses, putting her beak between my lips.

She does not always feel like this, and here she again displays her feminine instincts, and again she will not treat me to this display of her affection in the presence of anyone else. I may not be believed, but all the above is strictly true. I bought her of a dealer when acclimatised, for £5, and when I had her I don't think she had ever been handled.

Lovable, but a Misogynist.

Cocky is a dear old loving, naughty rascal: occasionally he will permit a man friend to touch him, but he will have nothing to say to women, except to go for them. He is as full of mischief as an ordinary boy, which is saying a good deal. If I would let him he would spend the most of his time on my hand, but as he is never still, and I read a good deal, I cannot stand too much of him. He will snip buttons off in a moment, and occasionally, taking a finger in his powerful beak, will just try how much pressure I can stand.

He has his soft moments when he loves to be caressed, and opens his wings for my hand to gently rub his side, and he will caress my face with his bill, but mischief sometimes prompts him to gently pinch my nose. When I say "goodnight" he will cling to my fingers to try and keep me and hold my finger in his great beak, but I have absolute confidence in him, as he could smash it if he liked, for he can crack the hardest walnut and smash up plum and cherrystones.

The male Grey, named Sir Edward Grey, and called Teddie for short, is the best tempered of all; he does not much care to be touched by strangers, but I have never known him try to hurt anyone. I have only had him three months, and hardly yet know his capabilities, for it takes time to know a Parrot. I don't think he will ever quite reach the extraordinary confidential relations which exist between me and the other two who always seem to prefer my company to anything else.

I believe Parrots are the most exclusive of friends, even more so than the dog: the loved one is everything, and no one else counts at all. Anyway, Teddy and I are great friends, but not exactly lovers.

Cocky and Teddy are very great friends; when out of their cages they play together, feed each other, and are altogether devoted; at the moment of writing I see they have both gone into one cage together. On the other hand "Little Poll," the hen Grey, is about the only thing in the world Cocky is afraid of. What she has done to him I don't know, but that she has established a funk of the highest order there is no doubt.

One side of my den is fitted up for the Parrots, their cages are suspended by iron rods with a hook at each end which catches a curtain rod, secured to the joists by hooks going through the ceiling. Below is the play-ground, a wooden platform four or five feet long by two to three feet wide.

I lift one cage on to the platform, and they climb up and down, and then to the ceiling, and get lots of exercise; they run round and round the platform and perform all kinds of gymnastic feats over the edge. I have also two or three stands they can sit on when they like, and to the ends of the stand perch short lengths of chain are attached which they play with.

Parrots in the Garden.

In warm weather, when I can snatch the time, I take them all out in the garden and let them out. Cocky swaggers about the lawn as if the whole place belonged to him; Little Poll prefers to sit on a garden seat as close to me as possible; Teddy and Cocky play about on another seat; Charlie, the Green Amazon, who is the best talker of the lot, holds long conversations with himself. He is tame, that is to say he will readily come on my hand, and likes his head rubbed, but he will not let me stroke his back which is a real test of a Parrot's tameness, and our relations are not as intimate and I don't think ever will be.

I should say that, as a precaution, I cut one wing, for I once lost a pet Rosy Cockatoo through not doing so. This need not disfigure the bird; spread out the wing, and cut four or five centre flight feathers; don't cut the covert feathers, and leave four or five main outside flight feathers to support the wing. On fine days I often leave them in the garden for hours in their cages hung up to a frame well above the ground, but of course only in warm weather.

A Sensible and Varied Menu.

I feed on a mixture of oats, canary seed, sunflower and safflower seed, a little hemp seed, and monkey nuts. This is the staple, but they have various dainties besides; walnuts they are very fond of, bananas and apples, cherries in season, Osborne biscuits, a little plain cake, and also cooked vegetables, such as vegetable marrow, potatoes, carrots, and sometimes a little piece of sop, a crust or piece of hard toast soaked in tea.

My birds are as fit as possible, in beautiful plumage, and plump as Partridges: no doubt the exercise they get allows for a more varied diet, but I must say I could never get them to eat maize, wheat, or dari. They have a chunk of wood each day to amuse them while I am away. In hot weather I spray them, and occasionally in winter too, but I then set them round the fire to dry. Parrots feel the cold. I know this by their little cold feet, and a fire is kept going for them all day in winter and a little left to keep the room warm at night.

I cannot understand why the barbarous practice prevails of giving barred bottoms to Parrot cages. Also to keep a Parrot entirely in its cage is like tying up a dog in one spot always. Many people keep Parrots, but few, I think, realise what they are capable of becoming if given a reasonable amount of liberty. It takes time to tame, matters must not be hurried, but I know nothing more lovable than a really tame Parrot. Little Poll has just climbed up on my shoulder and given me a kiss, and is trying to take off my eye-glasses.

Besides the Parrots I have two aviaries of small birds, one a large one in the garden full of English Finches, and a Crystal Palace aviary in my room with Canaries and several kinds of small foreign birds.

Twitterings.

At Abertillery show, writes Mr. J. A. Greenslade, I secured second in Yorkshire unflighted hen class, not Hyde, as stated.

The printer has omitted judge's name in our schedules, writes Mr. J. G. Torbett, sec. Muirkirk O.S. It is Mr. Whitelaw, Govan, Glasgow, who officiates.

Mr. J. Fairgrieve, sec. East Lothian C.B.S., writes that sixpence will be deducted for model card instead of threepence as printed in schedule for show 11th Nov.

Mr. Geo. Sawer, sec. Alfreton C.B.S., writes that there will be 5s. cash for most points at Alfreton open show Nov. 11 by non-members; also 2s. 6d. best British. These specials were omitted from schedule.

Mr. W. C. Poole, Stratford-on-Avon, writes: "Will the gentleman who sent a telegraphic money order from Stockton-on-Tees for Hawfinch kindly send his name and address, so that bird can be sent as desired."

The judges for the annual members' show of the Mansfield C.B.S., Nov. 18, writes Mr. B. Gabbitass. sec., are Messrs. Beardall, Huthwaite, and Potts, Worksop. Mr. J. Robson, London, will judge the open show, Dec. 16.

Mr. W. Taylor, hon. sec., writes that the judges for the Birmingham Roller Club Open Roller Canary contest Dec. 13 and 14 are Messrs. J. Tomlinson, J. H. Willows, and J. Lyons.

Entries for the Midland Roller Canary club show, Nov. 9, 10, are very poor, writes Mr. J. W. Thomson, Hon. Sec., 9, Gorsebrook Road, Wolverhampton. Will accept entries Monday, Nov. 16, first post.

Mr. E. Ashman, of the Pontypool C.B.S., is stationed at Colchester, and we would like fanciers in that district to make his acquaintance, writes Mr. W. D. Lewis, hon. sec. His address is—Pte. E. Ashman, No. 6981, B Co., 3/5th Lancashire Fusiliers, Godycrat Barracks, Colchester.

Referring to the record of wins of the Buff Yorkshire Canary shown on the front page of our issue of Oct. 14, Mr. Phillips, who owned the bird when it won at the Holborn show, writes that that was its first time out, and that the other wins were made subsequently, and after the bird had passed out of his possession.

Prize Money Paid.

We learn that prize money in respect of the following shows has been paid. If any exhibitor has been overlooked he should apply to the secretary concerned. Landore and Plasmarl, Liverpool.

Bird Show at Gosport.

We have received an unsigned report of a show held by the Gosport F.A., Oct. 25. In our list of Societies there is no mention of such a society, and we shall be glad if the sender of the report will furnish us with his name and address.

Shows Going Strong.

Mr. E. C. Job, hon. sec. Sheffield P.S., wires that there are 1,100 entries for Sheffield show, and Mr. D. McFarlane wires: "Barrow Red Cross Show entries good; 700 at time of wiring. No classes cancelled. All Scotch and Carlisle birds leave Barrow Sunday at 4.55."

Correction in Ardwick and Manchester Schedule.

The Lizard Classes appearing under open amateur classes in schedule are open champion classes, writes Mr. A. E. Thorpe, hon. sec. Mr. C. H. Strafford has promised a special to the member selling the most tickets on behalf of the Blinded Soldiers' Fund.

Thanks from Abertillery.

Allow us to express our thanks for the way in which exhibitors patronised our show, write Messrs. Newell and Moule, secs. We wish also to thank all those who sent congratulations, which were too numerous to answer individually. Our show was a great success, and we hope to put a better schedule of classes next year.

Corrections in the City and Suburban Schedule.

City and Suburban A.C.B. schedule corrections for the show Nov. 8, 9, writes Mr. F. J. Martin, are as follows:—Crests compete for the MacGruther shield. Specials 70 to 73 inclusive refer to limit classes, and half-crowns (where mentioned) can be had instead of cages if the winner chooses.

Red Cross Show at Blaenavon.

Fanciers of South Wales and the West of England should support Blaenavon Show, Nov. 9, for all profits are for the Red Cross, and members are working hard selling tickets to make it a success. I hope, writes Mr. G. Broome, sec., that those that can will attend the show, and help to further a good cause. All birds will be sent back the night of the show, and prize money will be paid within a few days.

No Charge for Admission: How to Avoid the Entertainments Tax.

The entertainment tax is a bothersome nuisance in connection with our shows. At Northampton, the committee avoided it by running the show for the benefit of the wounded soldiers in the local hospitals, and by taking a collection of all visitors instead of making a charge. The idea is a good one. It saves a lot of trouble and worry, and many outsiders may be tempted to visit shows adopting such a course. Thus the results would be increased, and possibly new fanciers made.

Keeping the Home Fires Burning.

Many of our comrades in the Fancy have answered, or will in due time answer the call to the Forces, and, although difficult, we are doing our best to keep the local society together, writes Mr. G. Lawley, Bridlington and Driffield C.B.S. Our secretary, Mr. J. Chadwick, has been at the front for some time, and his successor, Mr. G. Lemon, leaves us at an early date, but, still, I hope the boys at home will be able to keep the Fancy alive in Bridlington and Driffield. Mr. Ernest Brown and Mr. Dixon have promised to look after and take care of any stock of those who join up, but even that will be a difficult task

Why Letters Are Delayed.

Once more I am sending my annual advert. to your excellent paper, with every assurance of a response equal to previous years. I have already sold a goodly number of birds, but have still a few to part with, and as the winter session of my work is very exacting a quick sale, so as to reduce my stock to the usual 14 or 15 birds, is imperative.

Quite a number of letters reach me with no more address than "Rev. Jolliffe, Cardiff." They usually find me a day or so late, and I fear sometimes correspondents think I am unbusinesslike. I am therefore again obliged to seek the good offices of your paper, in order to get all sales over as quickly as

For competition at shows held under the patronage of the Welsh Cage Bird Club, writes Mr. D. H. Tedstone, hon. sec., I have secured a silver cup each, value £2, for champion Norwich and Champion Yorkshires, and a gold medal, presented by Mr. G. T. Jones, Mayor of Brecon, for novices. All are to be won outright this season, and are to be for most points during the season by the three highest birds at shows under the club's patronage. Additions in the way of specials for other varieties or for runners up for the cups will be welcomed. Mr. Tedstone's address is 5, Struet, Brecon.

OBITUARY.

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. E. Thomas, Cardiff C.B.S., I have to inform you of the great loss of one of our members, Mr. Emerson, of Emerson, and Winston, has sustained in the loss of his dear wife. I am sure all the members of the Cardiff Society will join in extending their deepest sympathy to Mr. Emerson in his great bereavement.

It is my painful duty, writes Mr. Wright, sec., Denton C.B.S., to inform you of the death, on Oct. 23, of Mr. J. Blease, Denton, after a very painful illness of seven weeks. The deceased was well-known to the fanciers of Manchester and district. One of the oldest members of Denton C.B.S., he and his son were also members of the Norwich Plainhead Club, and always exhibited under the name of J. Blease and Son. His genial disposition and strict integrity of character endeared him to everyone with whom he came in contact, and I feel sure that fanciers generally will join with join with Denton C.B.S. in tendering their heartfelt sympathy with his widow and family in their sad bereavement.

MR. J. TIPPING (Coventry).

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. J. Kent, Coventry O.S., that I send you the report of the death of one of the oldest and best known fanciers in the district, Mr. J. Tipping. I feel sure that all who knew him will be grieved at the news of his death.

"CAGE BIRDS" ROLL OF HONOUR.

LIEUT. O. STONE, R.F.A.

I have just received the news of the death of our President, Lieut. O. Stone, who died of wounds on Sept. 22, in France, writes Mr. Mr. W. D. Fryett, sec. Crystal Palace and Penge C.B.S. Kindly place the record on CAGE BIRDS Roll of Honour.

May I be allowed to state through the columns of CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. Tom Glasby, Bridlington, how deeply the Bridlington and Driffield fanciers feel the loss of our late assistant secretary, Private J. Sturdy, who answered his country's call, and has been killed in action. He took a great interest in the Fancy, being also secretary of the F. and F.S., a position he held until joining the forces. He was liked by all, and was one who could always take a beating like the man he was. His fancy was for Yorkshires and British, but he could at the same time pick out the best in a Norwich. The fanciers in this district desire to convey to the widow their deepest sympathy in her loss. She is left with four children, the eldest of which, I believe, is only 7 years of age.

BIG DEMAND FOR SURPLUS STOCK.

"Allow me, through the medium of your paper to thank all enquiring friends for the birds advertised. They were all sold as advertised, to one person on Saturday. I have answered all letters containing stamps."—J. SMEDLEY, (Rainworth).

"In reply to my advert. under Mules October 21st, I had enquiries from all over England and Scotland, and might have sold them over and over again. I desire through your valuable paper CAGE BIRDS to thank all I did not reply to."—G. C. KING (Norwich)

I am taking over the care and management of the Stud of Norwich of Mr. Joseph Hampton, of Wolverhampton, who is shortly joining up to "do his bit," writes Mr. W. Hepwood, Albrighton, near Wolverhampton, and should be obliged if all correspondence be addressed to me. I shall now be very much overstocked, hence my advertisement, and shall in future exhibit as Hepwood and Hampton.

The Coventry Godiva C.B.S., writes Mr. A. Wright, hon. sec., have decided to hold a members' show instead of an open show this season. A good schedule has been made up, and as the cup and all specials are to be competed for, we are expecting a record entry for a members' show. The 160 entries at the last show I am hoping to see doubled. Visitors will be given a hearty welcome. The show is fixed for Nov. 25, from 2 till 10.

Red Cross Show for Wishaw.

The Wishaw Clydesdale C.B.S. is again holding an open show on Dec. 30, writes Mr. J. Watson, sec. and treas., 16, Young St., Wishaw. We have decided to give all the proceeds to the Red Cross Society, and to make our schedule as atractive as possible, are having special prizes this season. The number of specials will depend greatly on the liberality of cage bird fanciers, and I will be pleased to accept prizes in money or kind. I hope all our old supporters, and many others will help us to make our first Red Cross show a huge success.

The Lesser Redpoll.

By PHILORNIS.

THE pretty little Lesser Redpoll is a regular winter visitor to most parts of England, retiring northward as spring approaches. In Scotland, however, it is common enough all the year round. It is very easily reconciled to cage life when taken in autumn, and is a lively and attractive species in confinement, but has nothing in the way of song beyond a low twitter.

The cock Redpoll in breeding plumage has the beak brown, tinged with yellow at the base (in autumn and winter it is yellow tipped with black). The feathers at the base of the beak, the lores (space between beak and eye), and the throat are black; the crown deep, glossy crimson; the rest of the head, the nape of the neck, and the upper wing-coverts dark brown. There are a few light feathers about the nostril, and the middle and greater wing-coverts are tipped with light reddish brown, forming two conspicuous light bars of unequal length on the wing.

The back, rump, and upper tail-coverts are dark brown, with a reddish tinge at the sides; breast, pink, tinged with buff; lower underparts greyish white; flanks streaked with dusky brown tail, brown; legs, dark brown. The total length is 4¼ inches.

The female is a little smaller and lacks the pink on the breast and the reddish tinge on the rump. The other parts are duller.

The Nest of the Redpoll.

In Scotland and some parts of England where it breeds, the Lesser Redpoll seems to prefer alder and willow trees fringing some stream or pool for a nesting-place, but its nest is also sometimes found in coppies and shrubberies, and in larch plantations.

Where one nest is to be seen there are usually several others not very far away, for the birds are very sociable during the breeding season as at other times. The nest is often placed pretty high up; it is a tiny structure, the cup being only about 1½ inches in diameter, and the walls scarcely an inch thick.

It is composed of fine twigs, grass stems, moss, and wool, and lined with feathers. The eggs are 4 to 6 in number, and pale greenish blue freckled with different shades of reddish brown.

Towards the end of summer the Redpoll is to be seen in small flocks, fluttering about the heads of thistles and feeding on the seeds, and on those of groundsel, dandelion, and other plants of the composite order.

During autumn and winter these bands are increased in numbers and betake themselves to woods and plantations, where they rove about, often in company with Siskins. Tits, and other small birds and many move southwards in partial migration.

The same locality is not generally frequented by any one flock for more than a day or two. Both the buds and seeds of the trees seem to be eaten. Very early in spring the cock utters a little twittering song, usually while on the wing.

In a cage, the Redpoll thrives well on two parts canary seed and one part German rape, with an occasional treat of crushed hemp seed.

IS THE HOME TRADE "DEAD PRO TEM"?

The statement made in a letter in our issue of Oct. 28 that the home trade in Canaries is dead has provoked a hail of letters. We have communications from breeders, dealers, private buyers, and all kinds of people to the effect that the home trade is a long way from being dead. There are not enough Canaries to meet the demand; that is all, and the lesson is obvious. Breed more Canaries. They will sell themselves.

A question has been raised whether breeding from one pair of Canaries can be made to pay. Of course it can. We know of a lady who bought a pair of cheap Canaries last year, and the produce realised five times the cost of the original pair. And she still has the old ones and one pair of their young to pair up to the parents for next year's breeding.

It is within the power of thousands upon thousands of people to put up a few pairs of Canaries for breeding. The methods are simple and easily learned. If a hobby is to be taken up successfully some thought must be given to the best way of proceeding, and the hobby of breeding Canaries is not any exception to this rule. But there are no difficulties so great as to deter anyone of ordinary intelligence.

Some of our most successful breeders of to-day began not so many years ago in a small way, and now their names are as household words. People who began Canary breeding entirely as a pleasurable hobby found it a profitable one, and it is open to anyone to follow their example.

The statements of a few of our readers that they can only get ridiculous prices for their Canaries only show that in Canary selling, as in everything else, there are more ways than one of managing. We know that fair prices are obtainable. Over 4,000 Canaries left London this week in one lot, bound for New York. It is true that many of these were Rollers of Continental origin, merely passing through the hands of the dealer as part of the consignment, but the bulk were English Canaries, Norwich, Yorkshires, Borders, and Lizards, and if 10,000 birds had been obtainable they would have found as ready a market as the 4,000.

But why should these birds go out of our country at all? They should be kept here for the benefit of Englishmen, not sent to America for the profit of American dealers, hyphenated or otherwise. Next year the demand will be greater. Shall we have the birds? Anyway, if we have the birds we shall be able to sell them, and if we do not produce them the loss will be our own.

Several letters received this week contain long details alleging unfair treatment to breeders on the part of dealers. These are in the nature of complaints, which would have been investigated at the time if they had been sent us in accordance with our rule, and it would not advance the argument to publish statements which may or may not have proper foundation. Our deposit system exists to safeguard both parties in a deal, and those who do not take advantage of that system, but prefer to send goods or money on the bare statement of a stranger, have only themselves to blame if the transaction does not end to their satisfaction. There are plenty of dealers advertising in our columns whose methods of business are entirely above suspicion, and it should be quite an easy matter for those who have stock for sale to discover dealers who will treat them honestly.

One correspondent, after saying that the most he ever got from dealers for his surplus stock was seven shillings and sixpence a pair, goes on to tell a story of some one who broke a window in his house and stole ten valuable Canaries. He says he has his suspicions, but what the incident has to do with the market price of Canaries we quite fail to see. The thief got ten Canaries for nothing.

BOTH SIDES OF THE QUESTION.

Dealers Bad and Dealers Good.

Sir,—I read with much interest the letters from Mr. Eli Orrilard and Mr. H. O. Corbett re sales of Canaries to dealers, and I can confirm what they say about offers made by some dealers. I hold a letter from a provincial dealer offering 3s. 6d. to 4s. for cocks, and 1s. 3d. to 1s. 9d. for hens. I myself have not paid less than 3s. for hens, and 7s. to 8s. for cocks, and sometimes much more (according to the class of bird.)

I see you are asked to advise readers of the dealers who will pay fair prices; let them watch your advertisements. There are still some fair dealers, and it is most unfair to class all as bad.

A London Dealer.

Low Offers for Roller Canaries.

Sir,—Allow me to endorse the letter of Mr. H. O. Corbett; his experience is exactly my own. I offered my stock of young Rollers to a dealer in a neighbouring town, who makes a point of advertising very highest prices and spot cash. He offered 2s. 6d. for cocks, 1s. 6d., for hens, one third the price I paid for the parents. Where does the breeder come in? The dealers know better than to breed the birds themselves.

You say prices many times greater than these are continually offered in advertisements in Cage Birds. I find Norwich and Yorkshire birds are, but not Rollers. If it were not for the pleasure I find in attending to them I should have given them up long ago in disgust.

Walsall.

Use the Advertising Columns..

Sir,—I was greatly interested in your article re Famine in Canaries, and I am writing to give H. O. Corbett a little advice as to the way to dispose of his birds. Has he ever thought how dealers dispose of their birds? How do dealers become known to every bird fancier in the world? Does he know that dealers only see or know a very small percentage of their customers? It is done by advertising.

This problem occurred to me when I started Canary breeding, which was last season, so you can see I am only a novice. I inserted one advert., and I had twice as many applicants as I had birds for sale.

I should like to draw H. O. Corbett's attention to our Editor's notice, "Guaranteed circulation amongst 50,000 readers weekly." There are hundreds of these readers watching the columns of Cage Birds to buy birds. The dealers know this, so they advertise, and, as they state, the demand is greater than the supply. Trusting this hint will be of some service to H. O. Corbett, and wishing him success,

R. Mitchellmore.

Do Dealers Offer Unfair Prices?

Sir,—We do not know what dealers your two correspondents of last week have been offering their birds to, but we will make this challenge through the columns of your most valuable paper—if any persons have in their possession any letters proving we have offered them such ridiculous prices as stated we are prepared to give £50 to the Red Cross funds. It was only last week we gave a breeder £32 for 40 pairs of his surplus stock. It is not as an advertisement that we are writing these lines, but it is only fair, as dealers' reputations have been sullied, that we should contradict the statements of these two correspondents. There are dealers and dealers. If Mr. Lorillard can guarantee to get the birds we will guarantee his income will unexpectedly have a big rise, and if Mr. Corbett likes to come and inspect our books and see the seed bills, rent, and other expenses, and profits, then he would alter his opinion about large profits.

Once and for all, let us give good advice—offer your birds to an established dealer, and he will offer you a fair price. It is true that there may be some so-called dealers who should be black-listed; they do the bird trade much harm.

J. Howard and Sons.

London and Norwich.

"Fears that there is No Market."

Sir,—I should be glad if you would allow me a few words to Mr. Eli Orrilard. He tells us that himself and scores of fanciers are very much dissatisfied with not being able to get a really good market and decent prices for their birds. I feel sure that if Mr. Orrilard and the other fanciers use their pen and a little more writing paper, with, say, a nice cheap printed heading attached, they would not be long in securing really good markets and satisfactory prices, even with many of the London dealers, not to mention the many private breeders, who would be glad of the Canaries, and at their own price.

I should like Mr. Orrilard to alter his methods, and he will not regret my advice. I wish I had the means and opportunity to start a Canary farm. I would surprise the City of Bradford. I will give our friend a little example. In the year 1910 I made a sort of surprise record, which I made known in Cage Birds. I bred 56 young Norwich out of 8 hens, and but for a slight accident I should have had 59. When these young birds were nicely on hard seed, every bird I had was sold in about ten weeks from being hatched, also all the parents at a very satisfactory price.

What I might do if I were possessed of a Canary farm would be to make my pile, as we Yorkshiremen put it. I wish I had a chance, but I regret to say my means at present stop me, otherwise I would be among the first on the field with a Canary farm without the slightest doubt or the least fear.

J. H. Jowett.

Home Trade Still Booming,

Sir,—Mr. Hamlyn states "without fear of contradiction" that there is no home trade in Canaries. What does Mr. Hamlyn know of the home trade of Canaries? How long has he been in the Canary trade? Anyway, he is contradicting his own statements, for a few months ago he was booming in your valuable columns how many thousands of Canaries he had sold in this country in a stated time. Now that the authorities have stopped the importation of birds, he states that the trade is dead pro tem. This we can contradict on good grounds. There is plenty of home trade, just as much as, and, in fact, more than, in previous years; people right and left are launching out into the bird fancy that could not afford to before. Letters are arriving in galore by every post, asking for birds, requisites, cages, etc. We are buying a thousand birds a week; we don't eat them. Secretaries of shows are having good sales, almost as good as ever. It is true the Americans buy a few birds from this country; in normal times that trade was over the last week in December for the season, but just at present there is a little more demand on account of shortage of other birds. Once again let us tell friend Hamlyn, and in a friendly spirit, there still remains the old home trade, with a little new export trade.

Correspondence.

Every week a Prize of Ten Shillings is given for what, in the opinion of the Editor of "CAGE BIRDS," is the best letter published under this heading. The letter may be on any subject; it may be a comment, for or against, on anything which is published in our pages, an opinion on the policy of our paper, or may have no reference whatever to anything which has already appeared. So long as it is on a "birdy" subject, and is original, it will be eligible to compete for the prize.

The Prize this week is awarded to Mr. J. Gibbons, 64, Napier Road, Wolverhampton.

Enamel Over Whitewash.

How Can it be Removed?

Sir,—I have enamelled a large box cage on the top of lime-wash, and it looks very bad, so I wish to get it off and do it afresh. I should be glad if anyone could tell me how I am to clean the cage, and get all the enamel off.

"Yellow or Grey Wagtails."

Yellow Wagtails in December.

Sir,—I am interested in the note in "Twitterings" of October 28 regarding the Yellow Wagtail. Two years ago these beautiful birds could be seen frequently down in the Chess Valley, in and near Chesham, right in the middle of the winter, December and January. A Grey Wagtail used to be a frequent visitor in my garden, and confusion was not possible under the circumstances.

Clashing of Show Dates.

Sir,—May I appeal to the fanciers of South Wales and Monmouthshire to accept Mr. Bank's offer for a meeting at Cardiff Show to discuss the needless clashing of dates. It would be to the advantage of all societies. Why cannot Welsh shows have eight or nine hundred entries? It is quite possible if we work in harmony with each other.

I would suggest that fanciers meet at 11.30 a.m. on Nov. 30; in the meantime clubs to notify Mr. Banks of their intended representatives.

Too Much of a Good Thing.

How Greenfood May Do Harm.

Sir,—Although breeding a few Canaries yearly for nearly 40 years, it is only lately I became a reader of Cage Birds; in fact, up to four months ago I had never seen it. Being always eager to add to my limited experience, I bought Nos. 2, 6, and 12 of the Nutshell Series, also "House's Canary Manual," "Seeds, foods, and wild plants for Cage Birds," and "The secrets of Hybrid breeding revealed and explained."

I may say that for the last 20 years I had never given my Canaries a particle of green food, and they have always kept in perfect health, but after reading the books mentioned I concluded my feeding was all wrong.

Having two Linnets, one 1915, and the other a this year's bird, both hand reared, I thought I would commence with them, and leaving still the ordinary seed in troughs, I gave between the wires a bit of the following alternately: Chickweed, groundsel, shepherd's purse, and plantain, gradually increasing the supply.

On the fifth day, on going to feed them, they were all huddled up, and two days after were both dead.

On telling a man who does nothing else but catch them, he remarked, "All bunkum, friend, get them on to hard seed as soon as possible, and keep them on it."

Now I wonder which is really best, perhaps some of your readers would give their experience. Meanwhile I will stick to my ordinary Canary mixture, which I have proved will keep them in perfect health.

Hybrid Winner in a British Class.

A Case for the N.B.B. and Mule Club.

Sir,—Is it any use for individual persons to try and convince the judge, Mr. Cook, that he was wrong in placing the Hybrid first in a British bird class, or for him to try and convince the public he was right?

Surely this is a case where the National British Bird and Mule Club should come in and say who is right, and thus stop such a thing happening in future, or allowing it to continue if they think it right. Such things as these kill the British bird section of shows, and another thing that helps to do so are the show cages. Why don't the N.B.B. and M.C. put their foot down and say we will have a cage of standard size, shape, and colour for each individual bird? We should then very soon see a great improvement in the British section, as everyone then would stand an equal chance, or at least would think they did. I have several times heard the remark, "I don't show because there are so many different colours, etc., of cages for the same species, and the judge knows who such and such a bird belongs to." I don't say this influences a judge, but novices think it does, so let us have a standard, and we shall then very soon have a great improvement at our shows.

A. W. Meek.

Does it Decrease Depth of Yellow Colour?

Sir,—In a very interesting and thoughtful letter written by your correspondent, "Live and Learn," under the heading "The pros. and cons. of inbreeding" in Cage Birds of Oct. 21, he says: "If I have a little yellow paint on my palette and add a little more yellow paint to it I have more yellow paint on my palette, but if I add to it an equal quantity of green, a compound of blue and yellow, I find I have no yellow, but a paler green instead."

Now as "Live and Learn" seems to know something about the mixing of colours, perhaps he can help me to solve a problem that has been put before me by a pair of my birds that I had up for breeding last breeding season; they were a clear buff cock, clear bred for two generations, to a very heavily green marked buff hen, which was bred from a yellow cinnamon variegated hen, and the above-mentioned cock.

This pair produced seven young. Three have turned out buff variegated cocks, and one is a buff grizzle marked on back of head. Now the remarkable thing about them is that they all vary in the tone of colour in their clear plumage. The most heavily marked one is very pale in buff colour, with a tinge of green, or what "Live and Learn" calls a very pale green. Next in marking comes a better tone of buff, the next is better than the second, and the grizzle marked one is better in colour than the third.

To put it in a nutshell, the less green that is on the birds the better the colour, as far as the clear parts are concerned; in fact, the grizzle marked is a very high coloured bird, and might almost be taken for a yellow. I have been asking myself the question, can it be the case that the least green blood you have in your birds the better the colour of the clears? Perhaps "Live and Learn" can help me.

Rearing Young Birds Without Egg Food.

Sir,—In reply to your correspondent, "Saxon," in Cage Birds for Oct. 28, I beg to give you my experience in breeding Roller Canaries, which I have done for many years. Up to this year I have always reared the young on Osborne biscuit crushed, and hard boiled egg, with a little crushed hemp seed, but owing to the very high price of these articles, I cast about for less expensive and just as effective food. Last year I tried a little of "Spratt's Cod Liver Oil Cake Food," and the birds seemed partial to it, so this year I determined to use it entirely, and I have never had a finer or healthier lot of young birds. Nearly all the fertile eggs hatched, and I have only lost two or three after perching. I now have between 60 and 70 young ones. In addition to the above I always give plenty of dandelion leaves and chickweed, and the flowers of African marigold and nasturtium.

The first question is answered in above, and to the second and third I say "Yes."

F. Hughes.

A Recipe for Soft Food.

Sir,—As a reader of Cage Birds I notice in this week's issue the question of rearing young birds without egg food, and an experience I had of this in 1913 may interest readers. I reared from two ordinary Norwich hens and a Goldie fourteen mules. The food consisted of one pound of self-raising flour, one egg, and a piece of home-made fresh butter, the whole sweetened with sugar like ordinary tea cake. This was baked in a hot oven, then put into a closed tin, and was moist and fresh for the whole breeding season. Hens were very fond of it, and young birds left the nest vigorous and strong. Both hens fed their young without assistance, and the young received no other food till put on dry seed. Not one of them died, and the majority of the young were large birds. I hope that other readers will follow "Saxon's" suggestion.

New Society for Durham City.

Secretary Appointed and Show Arranged.

Sir,—At a well attended meeting held at the house of Mr. T. Lancaster Claypath, Durham, it was decided to start a Society for the city and district. It was decided that the society be open to all to join, and that the subscription be 5s. per annum. We decided to hold a members' show on Jan. 27. Twenty-one members were present at the meeting, and we had a good many names of those who will join, but could not attend. Mr. A Robson, of Brandon, was elected chairman, and Henry Briggs, 6, Fry Street, Bearpark, Durham, secretary. All correspondence should be addressed to Mr. Briggs, who will be glad to give any information required, and will also be glad of suggestions for the improvement of the society. The next meeting will be held November 25, when we will draw up schedule and elect judge for show, so let's see many old faces and a lot of new ones at this important meeting. The Pelton Fell Society rules were read out, and were unanimously adopted, the secretary being empowered to get them printed.

Some Show Season Hints.

Practical Advice from an Old Hand.

Sir,—As the show season is now upon us a few hints and don'ts may be useful. Our birds are finishing the moult, and our attention should be turned to our stock and show cages. The stock cages should be scrubbed out, and the perches should be kept scrupulously clean, with nice white pine sawdust on cage bottom. Show cages should be painted and perches either sandpapered or scrubbed. When we have got all this done, we should next pick up our Cage Birds to see which is the nearest show, so as to keep down railway expenses.

If you are not a well-known exhibitor a halfpenny stamp will bring a schedule to you, and the first thing you should do (champion and novice alike) is to read the rules of the show at which you enter your birds and have to abide by. This is a point many champions forget, and that is why you see so many birds at shows with the ticket "wrong class." Next you should read the class headings, and great care should be taken as to the words "ticked," "marked," etc., for there is always a lot of controversy on these points. Don't fail to make your entries early; those fanciers who have never been a secretary have no idea what trouble there is with late entries.

When you have made your entries your next care should be your birds, which, although they look clean, should be washed. I am confident that in keen competition you have to wash to win. Some might say it is a lot of trouble to wash twice for one show, but I never think of trouble with my birds. I always wash my yellows a week before the show, and buffs three days, as it takes quite a week for a fine feathered yellow to come itself again. In buffs you can do with some of the feather washed down, but in case I get a short, tight feathered buff I wash him with the yellows.

After you have them washed great care should be taken not to get any dust on them again, and the best thing I have found is to cover their stock cage fronts with thin baize. To wash my birds I use Lux and a shaving brush, and two rinsing waters with separate brushes.

When I take a bird from the stock cage for washing, I always throw away its drinking water, so that I shall not forget to give it Parrish's chemical food in the water after the wash. There is no doubt every bird swallows more or less of the soapy water, and if he should suffer with stomach trouble the chemical food soon puts him right.

Don't fail to send your birds to arrive at the show the afternoon before the show, so that they will have a chance to get a feed and settle down. As soon as they return you should get them at once a little bread and milk, with a sprinkle of maw seed on it, and next day give a little egg and bread with colour food, as sometimes after birds have returned from a show they drop into a soft moult, and in many cases come out patchy, which renders them non-combatable for the remainder of the season.

The Pied Flycatcher at Clapham Show.

Should Rarity Alone Win?

Sir,—I should like to reply to a few of the remarks made by the hon. secretary of Clapham show (Mr. Hose) re my complaint concerning the treatment of my Pied Flycatcher.

After admitting that the food vessel was never cleaned out, but "fresh food was put on top of the old each day," he winds up by remarking that "everything possible was done for the bird, and it was through no inattention of any person in connection with the Clapham C.B.A. that it died."

I would like to ask Mr. Hose how long he would expect to keep any "soft-bill," let alone a fragile little thing like a Pied Flycatcher, alive under such conditions? A little fresh food thrown on top of the old, and this intelligent practice carried out for three days!

Is this really the best Mr. Hose can do for valuable exhibits entrusted to his care? Surely he must know that the old mildewed food would contaminate and poison the new in less than an hour?

Personally I feed my birds with freshly-made up food three times a day, and the food vessels are thoroughly cleaned out each time before being re-filled. One does not expect this at a show, but one certainly does expect that fresh food and water will be supplied at least once a day, and the food vessels properly cleaned out. Even assuming that the food vessels were stuck, it would surely have been a simple enough matter to open the cage door and take them out. Mr. Hose's assertion, therefore, that the bird received every care and attention is, on his own admission, by no means borne out by facts.

With regard to the reason given for not naming the bird in the catalogue, it would carry more weight had it not been for the fact that the birds in the foreign section were named. The exhibits in the "soft-bill" section numbered nine or thereabouts, so that even if they had all been named the cost of the extra printing would have been infinitesimal, but as all the other entries were common birds, known almost to anyone, it would have been strictly necessary to name merely my exhibit, and how much would it cost to print two words?

From Mr. Hose's remarks commencing "the old complaint," etc., it would appear that he wishes to question the veracity of my statement about the Parrot Finch I lost upon the only other occasion on which I exhibited at the Clapham Show. I should have thought that Mr. Hose could easily have confirmed my statement by referring the matter to his committee, some of the members of which would have surely recalled the incident, unless, of course, such happenings occur with such frequency at the Clapham Show that they arouse no special attention.

In conclusion I should like to say a few words in reply to the Editor's comments upon my query, "Should judges give their reasons?" In describing the bird he says "it was an immature bird in imperfect plumage." Well, the bird was certainly immature, though in full first year plumage. I don't know what exactly is meant by "imperfect" plumage, for although immature the bird was in perfect feather when it left my hands on Tuesday night. It is true that on the following evening, when visiting the show, I noticed that one or two tail feathers had become bent and looked wet, as though the bird had somehow fallen into the water vessel. Any way, save for this trivial defect the bird was still perfect in feather.

In short, though the bird was admittedly, when I last saw it, not in such perfect feather as the Nightingale, etc., yet I should have thought its rarity, especially as a hand-reared British specimen, would have given it precedence over such common and easily kept species as a Nightingale, Blackcap, and even a Redstart, in however perfect plumage the latter may have been. On this showing plumage counts for everything, rarity and enterprise for nothing at all. With apologies for again trespassing so largely on your valuable space,

Gerald E. Rattigan.

In Defence of the Management.

Sir,—Perhaps I may be permitted to say a few words re Mr. Rattigan's complaint against those responsible for the welfare of the birds at Clapham Show. I was a visitor to this show, and happened to be there the first day, when the soft-bill birds were being fed, and I can assure him that it was not any fault of the management there that was responsible for the death of his Flycatcher; the food those birds were being fed on was fit for the most delicate and valuable birds.

I think he must look elsewhere for the trouble. The vessels his food and water should have been placed in were certainly not at all easy to get at, and if the food which was in the food vessel was mildewy when he received his cage back, it was his own fault for using food which does mildew after so short a time. The food which was being used at Clapham Show would not have done so in twice the time, so he cannot blame them for his loss.

I may say I have no connection with the above show in any way, neither do I know anyone connected with it, but what I saw there convinced me that every care was being taken of the exhibits under their care. There was only one fault that I could see, that was the light; it was very bad for some of the classes, especially those where it was greatly needed so as to show up the colours, etc., namely, Hybrids and British birds, but no doubt this will be put right before another season.

Warming a Bird-room.

How to Avoid Trouble with the Heating Apparatus.

Sir,—I regret my absence from home made me miss Mr. Wooldridge's letter referring to his trouble with the heating apparatus described in my letter in Cage Birds of Sept. 23. His trouble is obviously caused by the very unnecessarily long pipe he is using. If he cuts it down by rather more than half the apparatus will work satisfactorily. My theory is that the great length of small gauge piping is too much to get a good draught through. I notice his iron funnel or cylinder is six inches in diameter while mine is only 2¾ inches. Never leave the oil reservoir and lamp under the piping when not in use, or the water of condensation is sure to drop on to the wicks and cause smoke, also it will work better and give more heat in a short time if a duplex burner is fitted to the lamp. Finally, be very sure the wicks are properly set, as they sometimes become smoky after burning a short time, and keep your eye on it during windy nights.

J. W. Gordon Stewart.

Different Kinds of Oil and their Properties.

Sir,—In Cage Birds of Oct. 21, I see that Mr. Wooldridge desires some assistance in getting a stove to burn in conjunction with a heating apparatus for a bird room, and if I can help him I shall be pleased.

It appears from what Mr. Wooldridge stated in his letter that the fumes from the stove failed to pass away through the chimney when the length became more than 7 feet. He omitted from his letter the kind of oil he was using. Some oils are more volatile than others, that is, they give off fumes from the oil vessel as well as from the burner directly the lamp is lit, and this is the case with such oils as paraffin, consequently if the flue is small it cannot pass away in time to allow ordinary combustion to ensue.

I have written this answer, assuming that Mr. Wooldridge is using a highly volatile oil or spirit, and to bring matters into good working order he must use different oil, or increase the area of his chimney pipes, say to 1½ or 2 inches diameter.

May I suggest that without going to any further great expense, he tries to burn pure colza oil in the stove, and proceed as follows:—Blow out the pipes to see they are clear. Light the stove with all pipes in their proper position, using only a small flame at first, and quietly increasing it until the chimney feels warm. Then put the flame on full, and not before, and I hope he will find all in working order. If not, then if the stove was made to fit one inch pipes, he should get an increasing tube, some call it a reducing tube; it should resemble a small horn, and be one inch diameter at one end, and one-and-a-half or two inches diameter at the other, and in this he must fit the larger pipes. In conclusion, if my letter proves of any service to him I shall be more than satisfied.

Proposed New Society for Ferndale.

Sir,—In answer to Mr. Tom Jones's letter, I should like to ask him what has become of the Society that was at Ferndale some years ago. I think I know Mr. Jones, and that he will remember me, as I guess we were members together of the late society. I know that we did not dissolve the club, and that there is still some money in hand, so I hope that they will again wake up and keep the old flag flying, as they were a keen lot. I hope fanciers of Ferndale will again rally together and get a good Society. I think they will not want much coaxing.

Quick Growing Plants for an Aviary.

Nasturtium Petals as Colour Food.

Sir,—I am building an outdoor aviary, and was wondering if any readers knew of a good fast growing plant which would resist the attacks of the birds, it being my object to keep British Finches and Canaries. Also could any reader inform me whether Skylarks would do in the same aviary. I have noticed that birds like nasturtium leaves and petals, and I was wondering if there was any colouring matter in them.

What a fine thing your correspondence page is! It seems to me to be a grand idea for fanciers to help one another in their little difficulties. I feel sure it has been the means of bringing fanciers and bird lovers closer, and many have made friends by it. I forgot to mention that my aviary flight is 8ft. by 4ft. by 7ft. high.

A Nightingale that Missed the Moult.

Sir,—Mr. A. Gregory's experience, as given in Cage Birds of Oct. 28, is certainly unique, and I hope will end satisfactorily for him. Might I ask Mr. Gregory when the bird commenced his song, and for how long he has been giving him 15 to 20 mealworms a day?

I have kept Nightingales for nearly 40 years, and must say I have never come across two birds exactly alike in their habits, although kept under exactly the same conditions. Some, after moulting in July, would commence to sing in November, some about Christmas, and this year I had one which did not start singing till the end of March and kept on till the end of June, but I have never had a bird to miss the moult and sing in October.

What greatly surprises me is that Mr. Gregory's bird does not bathe himself. My birds can hardly wait the time to take their plunge when the bath is hung on to their cage every other day, and if I had a bird not fond of his bath I should certainly surmise that he was not in good health. But there, Nightingales will do nothing invariably.

Liverpool Show.

Thanks to All and a Gentle Hint to Some.

Sir,—We beg to offer our sincere thanks to all exhibitors who so generously supported our venture this year. By their splendid entry we look like making a profit instead of a huge loss which was anticipated.

To the local fanciers we owe a great deal for their untiring efforts in unpacking and packing up of exhibits. As in the past, we had the services of Mrs. T. R. Jones and Miss Bratherton; it would not be a Liverpool show without these ladies.

There is one item on which we should like to appeal to exhibitors. After entering birds, an exhibitor, if he does not send them, should at once notify the show secretaries that his birds will be absent. This year we had three lots not sent, and if the parties who did not send had had our worry on their own shoulders, it would have taught them a lesson. When we found we were short we kept 'phoning the Railway Companies, and then, to make sure we had not missed them, we set to and unpacked every case in the hall, a matter of only 280. Afterwards, those three fanciers received the blessings of Meeting, Newall's Restaurant, Oak St., Abertillery, Oct. 28. Officers elected: Chair, H. H. Mortimer; Vice, S. Butler; Treas., B. Silverthorne; Assist. Sec., J. Jones; Sec., W. J. Baker. Next meeting, Nov. 8, at 6.30.—W. J. Baker, Hon. Sec.

STANLEY (Empire) F.F. & C.B.S.

Meeting, Oct. 22, R. Peart presiding, and a good attendance. Final arrangements were made for show, Nov. 18 and 19. Schedules are ready and can be obtained from steward or sec. Cage bird entries close Nov. 12. Members are requested to get as many spls. as possible, as we would like one for each class.—R. Hutchinson, Sec.

FALKIRK (Good Intent) C.B.A.

Meeting, Oct. 28; decided to hold annual show in Lesser Oddfellow's Hall, Dec. 9. Mr. Geo. Arnott, Sinclairtown, judge. In the meantime, till we see how the membership stands, intending members kindly forward contributions at your earliest convenience to allow us to get on with the arrangements.—W. Clarkson, 130, Victoria Place, Falkirk.

FIFE C.B.L.

Meeting, League, Drill Hall, Lochgelly, Oct. 28; Mr. Smith, president, in the chair. Agreed that £1 be taken from the League funds for specials, along with 10/- got from three members of the League, to go for most points over League shows; 5/- each for most points, 2nd most points, 3rd most, and so on till the 30/- are used up; other business of the League left over. Next meeting, Minto Hotel, Lochgelly, Dec. 23. Vote of thanks to chairman ended the meeting.—Joe Sneddon, Sec.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C

Meeting, Old Boar's Head, Manchester, Oct. 28; Mr. Warcing presiding over a well-attended meeting. Patronage was granted to Bacup and Birmingham Roller Clubs on the latter club altering date to avoid clashing with Wigan Roller contest. Several valuable specials were promised, and a splendid schedule is being fixed up, including three cups as specials in champion and novice yonng bird and amateur any age. Several birds were present, and the tours were explained.—J. T. Smith, Sec.

PENYGRAIG C.B.S.

Meeting, Butchers' Arms, Oct. 24. Mr. Morris presided over a nice little party. Mr. Hollinshead and sec. gave a washing exhibition. Mr. Williams could not come as promised, because of an accident, but the wash was a success, and so were a few sound words of advice from that old fancier, Mr. L. Hughes. Decided to hold a members' show, Nov. 18; friends wishing to join come and have a say in the matter. Meetings will be every Tuesday now until further notice; friends invited, especially new members; subs. due.—G. Padfield.

WEST STANLEY F.F. AND C.B.S.

Meeting, Oct. 28, Mr. J. Armitage presiding over a good attendance. Members' show date fixed for Dec. 30. Election of officers: Chair, J. Armitage, vice-chair, R. Peart; treas., W. Platten; assist. sec., J. Nicholson; sec., R. Hutchinson, 58, Joicey-terr., West Stanley. We have made the radius seven miles and only want the support of fanciers in the district to make it a successful society. Fifteen new members were enrolled, and many more for our next meeting, Nov. 11, at Victoria Hall. A good number of spls. promised are for novices.—R. Hutchinson, Sec.

SCOTTISH CRESTED C.C.

Committee meeting, Melson's Temperance Hotel, Ingram Street, Glasgow, Oct. 21, Mr. John Noble, Kilmarnock, chair. Applications for patronage from Glasgow and Dist., and City of Glasgow open shows were considered and granted. Agreed to run annual club show in conjunction with City of Glasgow on Jan. 3 and 4, when full classification, with gold and silver medals, etc., will be offered. Members elected: Messrs. James Tweedie (Glasgow), J. A. Grant (Lossiemouth), Wm. Harris (Carluke), and W. R. Boyd (Cambuslang). Vote of thanks to chair closed meeting.—John Young, Hon. Sec.

MIDDLESBORO' AND TEES-SIDE.

Meeting, Oct. 28, Crown Hotel, Mr. J. Carr, chair, and a grand attendance, with plenty of young blood coming forward. Arrangements were made for first members' show, Princess Alice, Nov. 18; birds staged 2.30. Messrs. Cook and Hood, judges. Specials of 2s. 6d. each in all varieties, also a splendid cup to be won outright for novices, jointly given by Messrs. J. Carr and T. C. Deans. Three new members were accepted, bringing the total membership up to well over fifty. This being question night a very interesting discussion took place, and questions were ably answered by the chairman and others. The chief question was: Colour, and how to produce it—a matter that was well gone into and experiences given by capable and reliable fanciers. Next meeting will be at the Princess Alice, when a washing exhibition is to be given by special request of Mr. Wanaker.—F. Stothard.

AYR C.B.C.

Meeting, Wallace Tower Hall, High St., Oct. 19, Mr. P. McQuiston presiding. Members present Messrs. McQuiston, Wason, McLachlan, Jos. Wilson, Lovie, T. Erskine, W. Erskine, Telfer, Tait, Gribben, Cameron, Girvan, Redmond, Tait, and Ferguson. Office-bearers elected: Hon. Pres., John Forbes; Pres., P. McQuiston; V.-P., D. Wason; Stewards, Wason and McQuiston, for Norwich; Tait and Girvan, for Borders and Yorks; McLachlan, T. Erskine and W. Erskine for Scotch Fancy, British and For.; Committee, the Club; Sec. and Treas., H. M. Ferguson.

Secretary intimated the following: Y.M.C.A. Hall engaged for Red Cross Show; permission from Red Cross Committee; judges fixed—R. Martin, Norwich; J. Hamilton, Borders and Yorks; and J. F. Dewar, Scotch Fancy, British and Foreign; patronage of S.P.C.; patronage of B.F.C.C.; gold medal from President, for British section, and silver medal from "A Friend," for Border section. A handsome donation in the form of 5 very rare Foreign birds was also intimated from Mrs. F. Villiers, The Shieling, Ayr, for the Gift Class at the Red Cross Show, the birds to be sold by auction. Sec. was instructed to engage the services of "The Observer" for printing schedules, catalogues and tickets; Messrs Spratt for entry forms, wrappers, etc., and Messrs. Garbisch for model cards. Specials were intimated from Bailie Robertson (Troon), Mr Jamieson (Glasgow), and other local supporters, in addition to 16 special prizes presented by members. Owing to the untiring efforts of loyal members, the Club was pleased to learn that there was every likelihood of its being able to hand over to the Red Cross a sum of about double last year's donation. The annual show is to be advertised in CAGE BIRDS on three dates prior to show.—H. M. Ferguson, Sec.

EDINBURGH C.B.S.

Meeting, Cairns Memorial Hall, Oct. 17, Mr. W. B. Adam, chair. Decided to accept the offer of the Western O.S. for use of their staging, etc., for annual show, and to ask the Leith Printing Co. and Warwick and Son for quotation for catalogues. Price of admission to annual show was left in secretary's hands pending word from Custom and Excise Office. Next meeting Nov. 14 ten days before the show. Vote of thanks to Mr. A. Thomson, who judged table show, was accorded. Nor. Yell.: 1, 4, Charlton; 2, Muir; 3, Staines; 5, McMorrain. Buff: 1, 3, Staines; 2, Thomson; 3, Muir; 5, McMorrain. Gr. or Var. Yell.: 1, Thomson; 2, Wilkie. Buff: 1, 2, Staines; 3, Thomson; 4, Muir. Cinnamon Canary: 1, 2, Charlton.—J. C. Charlton, Sec.

NEWCASTLE (East End) C.B.S.

Meeting, Oct. 25, Mr. G. Armstrong's, 149, Shields Road, with a fair attendance. Three young Border Fancy classes were added to compete for Bowl at our show. Stewards were selected for show. Mr. Robt. Henderson was elected on the committee. Five shillings per class to be given in addition to entry fee, divided as follows, 2s. 6d., 1s. 3d., 9d., 6d. We will be glad to see any member at the show hall on Friday, Nov. 24, an on the show morning, to erect staging and put the birds in position, etc. Specials which have been collected will be drawn for at first meeting after the show. If any member has collected any specials, either in money or in kind, please be good enough to let Sec. know as soon as possible.—Ed. Coltman Sec.

QUEEN'S PARK (Glasgow) C.B.S.

Meeting, Y.M.C.A. Rooms, Eglington Toll, Oct. 25, Mr. R. B. Cairns chair, and a large attendance. Before business, Mr. W. Connelly treated the members to a very masterly exhibition of hand washing, which was much appreciated. After having washed two birds, Mr. Connelly asked for a volunteer from amongst the novice members to try his hand. Mr. Knox complied and succeeded in making a very creditable effort, which went to show that the lecturer had succeeded in his efforts to impart knowledge to the younger members. A vote of thanks was awarded the lecturer. Admitted 5 new members, Messrs. Graham, Grant, Mathewson, Bishop and Procter. Sec. read a letter from Mr. J. W. Ramsden, promising a special for the best colour fed bird on Ramsden's pure pepper at our annual club show; also a letter from the Scottish Painbird Club promising patronage and a silver medal. The following promised specials: Mr. W. G. Hamilton (2), Messrs. A. McLellan, W. Robertson, W. Steel, and W. S. Ross. These, added to the list already collected, give a very creditable number. Stewards and doorkeepers were elected, and the chairman announced that the next meeting would be held on Nov. 22, a week earlier than the usual monthly meeting, owing to the following Wednesday falling in our show week.—A. K. Hunter, Sec.

CITY AND COUNTY OF PERTH.

Annual exhibition, Good Templar Hall, Perth, Oct. 21. Owing to the fact that many members are on military service there was a considerable decrease in the number of entries, although competition and quality were nevertheless good. This was particularly noticeable in the Norwich, Borders, Scotch Fancy, Yorkshire, and British bird section, where many fine birds were shown. The arrangements made by Mr. J. L. Smith, the secretary, were all that could be desired. Young Crest Ck.: 1, cup, Brough; 2, Bruce. C.-B.: 1, Brough. Old Crest: 1, 2, Allan; 3, 4, 5, Dott. C.-B.: 1, spl, Dott; 2, Bruce. Nor. Yell. Does the British Bullfinch Migrate?

A TILT AT "CABINET NATURALISTS."

JUDGING by the specimens one sometimes sees on our show benches, Continental Bullfinches are believed by some to visit us as migrants, for when a question is raised as to their nationality they are invariably said to be "British caught."

It has been left to a correspondent of the "Liverpool Daily Post and Mercury," however, to suggest that our own sturdy little Britisher exchanges visits with these reputed wanderers from the other side of the North Sea, and in the issue of that paper of Oct. 17 he writes as follows:—

"Dodging through the elders, halting for a second on the bramble patch, where the ripe berries caught its sharp eye; then passing on to the rose-clump, adorned with scarlet hips, went a smart Bullfinch (says 'F.Z.S.') Its oft-repeated calls ('Whib, whib') drew my attention to it, and then I watched the white patch, so conspicuous on the retreating bird, as it passed down the wood. A little later I heard another, and still a third, and later in the day the keeper remarked to me that there had been an unusually large number in the wood. I should have thought little about it, but a friend who lives some five miles away from this wood told me that Bullfinches had been regularly in his garden for some days. Few of us think of the Bullfinch as a migrant, but there is no doubt that it is to some extent a spring and autumn traveller, and a passing wave of the birds has touched the district. Further on in the same wood, half a mile in extent, the sharp calls of Tits pierced the foliage, and I found a party of a score or more of Blue Tits with a few Coals travelling through the undergrowth. Naturally one would say more migrants, but all depends upon what we mean by the word. The Tits were nomadic wanderers, travelling from place to place in England, perhaps no further than to and fro in some few square miles of country; whereas the Bullfinches, though not in a flock, were probably on a much longer and more direct journey, and might possibly reach southern counties. It is not supposed that our British Bullfinch ever leaves England, but the "splitters" of species into sub-species are not always correct in their suppositions."

CANARY KEEPING FOR BEGINNERS.

By J. NORTH.

Helpful Hints on Management, Pairing, Breeding and Rearing, which should make the Hobby of Canary Keeping easy of pursuit by the amateur, and containing information of interest to older hands.

THE "London Breeder" has been pronounced "complicated" by some, and "old-fashioned" by others, while many find it almost impossible to keep them free from insect pests, so that other breeding-cages more simple in construction have been brought into use.

A very nice make of cage, one that can be used in the summer as a breeding-cage, and in the winter as a store cage or a double-compartment cage, is made box-shape, that is, all solid deal or pine-wood except the front. It is 30 inches long, 14 inches high, and 11 inches from front to back. It is divided in the centre by a sliding partition from top to bottom, also made of wood, but this should have a wired grating in it coverable by a slide of wood. It must also have two doors and two sliding sand-trays.

Do not have any up and down sliding-doors, they are either always sliding down when they are wanted up, or else they jamb when they are required to slide down. Have your cage-doors made to hinge on a wire. The fronts of either these modern breeders or of the "London breeders" may be made detachable.

The Insides of Cages.

Some fanciers do not colour the insides of their cages, but Canaries look very insipid and unattractive with a wood-coloured background. Others lay on two or three coatings of lime-wash, but we do not recommend it, feeling convinced that small portions of lime may eventually become detached and give rise to inflammation of the eyes, and this may lead to serious trouble.

Another plan is to make a distemper-wash of whiting, size, and a little alum, to which may be added some ultramarine blue to any desired shade; this may be laid on when warm or it may be allowed to get cold, and then, if too thick, be softened with the addition of a little warm water.

Where only one or two cages are in use the insides can be coloured very nicely with enamel, although we think its polish detracts from that of the plumage of the occupants, and causes them to look dull, and it also appears, and probably is, cold-striking. For the majority of fanciers, who may have ten or twenty cages to work with but neither time nor money to expend on enamelling, it will be found that non-poisonous paint that is made to dry "flat" or without polish is the best for general purposes.

With the modern breeders, either the square wooden nest-boxes, the circular earthenware nest-pans, or the tins may be used, and are suspended from hooks, screws, or flat-headed nails driven into the cage walls. Sometimes a stout wire runs round the rim of the nest-tin and finishes in two legs that slip into two staples or screw-eyes so that the nest stands away from the cage wall about half an inch, the idea being to get away from marauding insects. For the earthenware nest-pans these stout wire frames are, of course, made separately, and the pans drop into them.

Modern versus "London" Breeding Cages

These modern breeders are simple in construction, light and roomy inside, easily taken to pieces, cleaned, and put together again, and usable all the year round. Their greatest drawback is caused by the unprotected state of the nest, permitting as this does the risk of a young one or an egg being thrown overboard by the hen, as she bursts off after something she would seem to have forgotten, and then suddenly to have remembered.

If the cock bird is in the cage he quickly finds the youngster, but does not as quickly restore it to its nest. One can only charitably suppose his misguided pecking at it is evidence of the desire to restore it, but the tender limbs cannot stand such rough usage, and the chick is soon dead.

Now in the "London breeders" the hen sitting on the eggs or young ones in a box or pan that is situated in the centre of one of the nesting compartments cannot rush off in such a mad way, but has to rise gently and pop quietly out of the little room, and even if an egg or a chick momentarily adhered to her plumage it would probably drop from her before she got into the cage space, and could be restored if found.

It is very risky work leaving the cock in the cage with the hen after she has commenced to incubate, and some fanciers never chance his being all right, but either take him away or shut him off with the partition until the youngsters are a week old.

It also sometimes happens that he is wanted for pairing with a second hen, but we do not think that there is anything gained by this method, because it often happens that the first hen will pine or otherwise neglect her eggs, or starve her progeny. There can be no doubt the most natural way is the best, the only difficulty being to get it observed and fully carried out under artificial conditions.

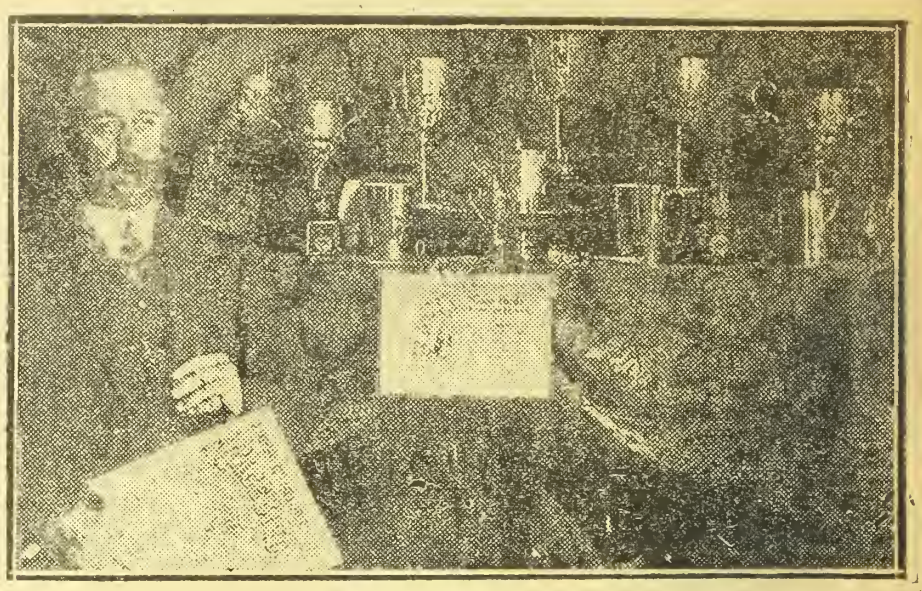
If, when the hen commences to brood her eggs, the cock will stand at a convenient distance, so that he can be seen or spoken to by her ladyship whenever she might feel so disposed, and if he will assist to feed the chicks almost as soon as they are hatched, nothing could be nicer; but for some reason, or for no reason, he will not always act thus, his instincts seem blunted, he looks in the nest, seems very much surprised, forgets that there is anything to do, then gets something to eat for himself alone.

The hen may have seen him standing on the side of the nest with his head drooped down, and may have taken it for granted that he had fed the baby, being just as well qualified for the task as herself, so she hastens back, and to keep it warm, pops on it while it has already started on the road to starvation in the land of plenty.

About Perches.

A great deal of discomfort is often given to the bird through the perches in the breeding cages being set in unsuitable positions, as, for instance, just over the egg drawer, thus permitting the droppings to be caught, and to contaminate the egg-food, or sometimes they are placed one over the other with the same disagreeable results. Each perch should have an inch or two of wire run into the centre of one of its ends, leaving about a quarter of an inch outside, this should fit into a bradhole in the back cage wall, and the other end should run for about an inch outside the cage-front, so that the perch may be withdrawn and cleaned without one's hand being thrust into the cage to disturb the inmates.

When the birds are first put up for breeding, one should be placed in each compartment, and the smaller slide withdrawn so that they can see each other but cannot fight or quarrel, as they are apt to do at the commencement of the season, and occasionally afterwards. If a misunderstanding should occur after they have been put together, and it is not soon ended, the birds should again be separated for a time.



As soon as they are run into the breeding cages, they should have a little egg-food supplied almost every day, also green meat in the form of watercress, or any of the other salads previously mentioned, or some genuine rape seed may be sown in some sand in small pots or tins and placed in the cage so that the birds can peck the seedling-plants when they are about an inch high.

The lowly sand-trays, also, are not to be lightly passed over without attention. Some cages are made without any, and some have only a "turn-rail" at base of front-stay, and through which, when opened, the refuse has to be scraped forward with a hook—and, would it be credited, there are some breeding-cages that have no arrangements made for cleaning out, but that sometimes—nearly every Bank Holiday, we will suppose—have all the accumulation scraped up by hand and fished out through the doorway.

The very fine red or yellow sand used by builders is too small in grain for cage-birds, they require something more gritty, so that the stones may be picked out by them and passed into the gizzard, where they are used for milling or triturating the corn they get from their Canary-seed into digestible matter. Washed river-sand or coarse sand from the sea-shore is splendid for the purpose; the former must be well washed and dried, but the latter may be used as found.

The chemical composition of the various seeds usually given to Canaries has been often investigated and published, and the feeding value established by tables showing percentages of this and that elementary substance, such as sulphur, which is abundant in the seeds of most of the Brassica family, or cabbage tribe, of phosphorus and its phosphates, Nitrogen and Nitrates, besides such organised compounds as fat or oil, starch, vegetable-albumen, woody-fibre, and ash.

The Training of the Roller Canary.

By G. SMITH, Wigan, President of the Wigan Roller Club.

A successful owner of long experience tells how to feed, how to teach, and how to prepare the Roller Canary for contest singing.

AS a successful breeder and exhibitor of Roller Canaries it might not be out of season at the present moment to give to my brother fanciers a little advice, and explain the methods I adopt in order to prepare my birds for the singing contests which are held about the end of each year. I have noticed that articles on this subject do not often appear in CAGE BIRDS, so I trust this short instruction on the most interesting and difficult part of the Roller fancier's hobby may be found interesting.

First of all, in order to train the young birds so that they may have some chance of success at a singing contest it is absolutely essential to procure a good tutor, or, as it is sometimes called, "schoolmaster." He must be of the same strain as the young birds that are to be his pupils; in other words, his tone and range of tours must be similar to theirs. This is of the greatest importance. Bear in mind that to use a tutor of a different strain is equal in effect to a crossing of blood.

In my opinion a tutor is far better than any bird-organ. These organs may serve a useful purpose at times, as, for example, to encourage the youngsters to persevere in their efforts when the tutor, being in moult, has lapsed into silence. But on the whole I am not at all in favour of organs.

By a "good" tutor I mean a bird with a good hollow roll, good bass roll, hollow bell, nice flute notes, water Glucke, Shockel, deep Glucke, water roll, bell tour, and bell roll. These rolls form, to my mind, the best part of the Roller's song.

The Most Desirable Tour.

As an old fancier of many years' experience it is my opinion that the hollow roll and flute notes are gradually dying out of the Roller's song. One seldom hears at the different contests nowadays a real good hollow roll, yet when given in what I might term "a rise and fall" key it is the most beautiful of all the rolls. The "straight" hollow roll is common enough, and, as its name implies, is sung in a level key. I might mention that at the last British Roller C.C. contest in London a bird of mine had the somewhat rare honour of getting full points (8) for hollow roll.

The great point to keep in mind in choosing a tutor is this: don't select a bird that has any harsh notes, or which sings with open beak. Choose the quiet, even songster, the bird which very seldom rises to the sharp bell roll or Aufzug. Remember the best rolls are always produced with the beak closed.

The tutor or tutors selected (I use one tutor to every dozen young cocks), the next move is to cage off all the youngsters in cabinets or shutter cages. Either kind of cages will do quite well.

After a fortnight, during which time they will have become accustomed to their new surroundings, begin to darken them off. Do this very gradually, until the cages are all closed. Now their training begins in earnest. The complete darkness of their cages causes them to keep still and to listen very intently to the song of their tutor, for they have nothing to distract their attention.

The tutor's cage door is now opened, and he is given time to go through his tours several times, for a quarter of an hour or so. Then, closing him up again, open the cabinets of the young cocks, so that they may endeavour to imitate the rolls that they have heard. Do this for about an hour twice a day.

Should any of the young cocks get too loud, keep him closed a little more, but any bird that begins to bring out harsh notes should be removed at once. Listen intently to them when they are at practice, and be sure to remove the faulty ones, or otherwise all the others will be spoilt. You will always get some faulty ones, and if darkening and lowering the position of their cages does not improve them, remove them out of hearing of the others.

A word here might be put in as regards the proper kind of feeding for the birds. I feed all my Rollers on three parts rape to one part canary seed. If it were possible to get the pure summer rape seed I would even increase the proportion of rape. But three to one will be found best for the time being, when there is so much adulterated rape on the market.

Preparing for the Contest.

When the young cocks are in full song, I like to get them very tame. This is very important for those birds which you intend to enter for contests. I have known many a good bird that has not sung whilst it was before the judge because of shyness. There is much in getting your birds tame and willing to sing as soon as the doors of their cages are open.

To train them in this way you must get them accustomed to singing whenever they are placed on the table and the cage opened. Try them every evening. If in half an hour they refuse to sing close them up and give the others a chance. Should you be visiting a friend, take a couple of your birds with you and try them in a strange house.

You cannot get your birds tame if you do not move them about. Keep them constantly on the move in your own house. One day put the cage in one place, the next in another, and so on. And when the contest is close at hand keep them well shut up, and try each bird every night for ten minutes. In this way you will prepare the birds, so that at the contest they will start to sing as soon as the doors of their cages are opened, and this, I know, pleases the judges.

To sum up, I would advise my readers to pay attention, first to the selection of their tutor, then to the proper feeding of their birds and the method of training which I have outlined; finally, and to this I attach great importance, to getting the birds very tame. The breeding and training of Rollers has been my hobby for many years, and I have, by the methods here given, had the satisfaction and pleasure of carrying off numerous prizes at singing contests throughout the country.

ROUND THE BIRD SHOWS.

MANCHESTER.

A SPLENDID ENTRY OF OVER 1,000 BIRDS.

34th annual show of the Manchester and Northern Counties O.S., at the Caxton Hall, Chapel Street, Salford, Oct. 27 and 28, with a splendid entry of 1,014. Norwich Canaries alone numbered over 400. The entry in this section was a record one, and quality, independent of numbers, was of the highest order. Yorkshires did not turn up to expectations in numbers, yet these comprised some of the best. A somewhat general question was: Where were the Sheffield men? So there would seem to have been some disappointment in this station.

Borders were exceptionally good for quality and made a very good show. Winners were to be seen belonging to owners from far and near. Mules and Hybrids were few, but the winners were of good merit.

Britishers were very nice and are coming on by degrees. Another week or two will see many more of the finished article on view.

Crests and cinnamons were below the average, but the quality of the latter was quite satisfactory. Lancashires were only small classes, yet some representative specimens were on view. We noted that Messrs. Fuller (Teddy), Stansfield, Blincoe, and Collinge were still upholding the variety. Lizards were the best seen for some time and averaged 14 per class, which was very pleasing. Many really grand specimens were here shown by Messrs. Rukin, Hamer, Hampshire, Hardy, Ford, and Barnes. The award in the first competition for the Kingsweir challenge cup, presented by Mrs. Burgess, of Bristol, for the best 1916 Lizard, was secured by Mr. Rukin with an elegant Gold Lizard hen.

The President (Mr. Kiarns) was unavoidably absent, but the Chairman (Mr. John Raynes), together with Messrs. S. Cook, W. Moorbey, J. Turner, G. Bruce, E. Dooley, J. Colbeck, F. Hayward, A. G. Smith, F. Wilson, W. Hubbard, Bowden, Broughton, Fairhurst, were an admirable working committee, attending most assiduously to their duties. The show management, under the direction of Mr. J. Green, a secretary of pleasant and agreeable disposition, was all that could be desired.

On Saturday, among the visitors from a distance, we noticed Messrs. Bastock (Birmingham), Howe (Wellingboro'), Dr. Craig (Sheffield), Bradley (New Mills), Johnson (Southport), Teddy Fuller (Glossop), with a new clay pipe, and many others. The show was well patronised all day. Sales totalled about £30. There was evidence of it being a most successful show. The judges were: Lancs. and Lizards, B. Clegg; Norwich, H. W. Battye; Yorks, J. Greaves, and the remainder, C. Houlton.

Mr. Barker Clegg's Classes.

LANCS. COPPY (6): 1, 2, Fuller, clear, beautiful frontal, well up on legs, well shown, grand cond., 2nd tkd. buff, typical Lancs., stands well up, good pos.; 3, 4, Collinge, 3rd cl., more subs. of body, long-sided, not so good on legs; vhc, hc, Stansfield. PLAINHEAD (6): 1, Blincoe, buff, really fine matured bird, good Lancs. properties, easy win; 2, vhc, Fuller, buff, good pos., long-sided, good cond.; 3, Stansfield, yell., good feather and size, loses in pos.; 4, Clark; vhc, Fuller; hc, Collinge. COPPY OR PLAINHEAD, 1916 (5): 1, Stansfield, Plainhead, fine subs., grand pos., very promising; 2, 3, Clark, 2nd yell. Coppy, grand pos., nice Coppy, loses in subs., 3rd Plainhead, nice qual., good stand, close up; 4, Collinge. HEN (4): 1, 3, Fuller, cl. buff Coppy, nice frontal, well-filled back, pos. grand, well shown; 3, 4, Collinge, 3rd grand subs., long-sided, fails in pos. LIZARD, GOLD, CLEAR CAP (7): 1, Barnes, full cap, nice bold work, rich ground col., sound wings and tail; 2, Hardy, bold Spangle, rich col., fails in butts; 3, Rukin, grand bird, rich col., lost feather in wing or would have been higher; 4, Hamer; vhc, hc, Hampshire; c, Howard. SILVER (9): 1, Hardy, fine bold Spangle, good head and cap, splendid cond.; 2, 4, Hamer, neat cap, beautiful work, close up; 3, Barnes, grand bird, bald Spangle, nice cap, fails on butts; vhc, hc, Rukin; c, Hampshire. BROKEN CAP GOLD (16): 1, hc, Rukin, bold in spangle, rich ground col., fine bird all round; 2, Ridgard, not so bold in work, nice qual., close up; 3, Hamer, bold work, rich col.; 4, Bosworth; vhc, Barnes; c, Moorbey. SILVER (14): 1, Ford, fine bold work, nice ground col., bouncer for a Silver, nice lacing; 2, Hamer, another good one, little to choose; 3, c, Hampshire, fails in evenness of spangle, though plenty of work; 4, hc, Rukin, nice underwork, on good ground col., not so even in work on one side; vhc, Barnes. GOLD HENS (17): best class in the section for quality: 1, cup, vhc, Rukin, clear cap, one of the first water, a gem all round; 2, c, Barnes, another good one, fine bold work, runs close; 3, Ford, not so rich in ground col.; 4, Hardy, broken cap, bold spangle, good col.; hc, Ollerenshaw. SILVER (19): 1, Hamer, smart lady, fine spangle, sound col.: 2, 4, Hampshire, 2nd close up, not quite so bold in work: 3, Rukin, fine hen, big bird, close on; vhc, Barnes; hc, Hardy: c, Ollerenshaw.

THE YORKSHIRE CANARIES.

Judge, Mr. J. Greaves.

CL. TKD. YELL. CK (3): 1, c, Brooks, cl., grand pos., nice length, good col., feathered like a Java; 2, Bulmer, cl., nice pos., fine length, nicely braced; 3, Hartley, not quite so shapely, a bit stout; 4, Knowles, rich col., nice pos., fine style; vhc, Potts; hc, Hirst. BUFF (16): 1, Dooley, cl., grand pos., rare length, well braced wings and pipe tail; 2, Hartley, a little more subs., grand pos., beautiful feather; 3, Thomas, very smart, loses in length; 4, Spencer, a good bird, excellent pos., nice feather and cond.; vhc, Brown, we liked very much, will do better; hc, Hirst; c, Wilcock. VAR. YELL. CK. (3): 1, Young, mkd. wings, extra fine style and pos., nice length, rich col.; 2, Burke, not quite so smart, more subs., fine length, nice feather; 3, Evans. BUFF (2): 1, Hartley, fine upstanding bird, plenty of subs.; 2, Potts, nice head, grand length, close up. YELL. HEN (9), a grand class: 1, Radley, smart in pos., grand length and col.; 2, Brown, another good one, some thought might have won; 3, Thomas, typical, fine feather and pos.; 4, Brooks, close up, nice style and length; vhc, Johnson; hc, Hartley; c, Broughton. BUFF (6): 1, Hartley, grand style, feather and pos.; 2, Knowles, more length, smart in style; 3, Wilkinson; 4, Dooley; vhc, Broughton; hc, Spencer. YELL. 1916 (13): 1, 2, Baldwin, leader clear, very typical, good col., nicely braced wings and tail, 2nd clever bird, well placed; 3, Young, rather more subs., not the length; 4, Dooley, right good style; vhc, hc, Hirst; c, Brooks. BUFF (14): 1, Hartley, topping youngster, easy win; 2, Potts, not so clever, yet a good one; 3, Balmer, fails in carriage and cond.; 4, Knowles, we thought might have moved up; vhc, Spencer; hc, Radley; c, Brooks. GREENS, SELF OR FOUL YELL. CK. (9): 1, Handley, foul tail, right col., a good one; 2, Rowlands, almost a self, good col. and feather; 3, Postlethwaite, fine feather, nice style and sound col.; 4, Young; vhc, Jones; hc, Roberts; c, Evans. BUFF (8): 1, Rowlands, self, sound col., nice style and pos.; 2, Roberts, more subs., not so clever; 3, Hickson, nice col. and style, well up; 4, Jones; vhc, Postlethwaite; hc, c, Evans. YELL. HEN (6): 1, 3, vhc, Rowlands, leader beauty for tone of col., a good one, stylish; 2, Jones, fine col., pos. and style, well up; 4, Roberts; hc, Postlethwaite. BUFF (8): 1, 4, Rowlands, pretty hen, grand style and pos.; 2, hc, T. Evans, sound col., nice style and pos.; 3, Handley, well up to 2nd; vhc, E. Evans; c, Hickson.

THE NORWICH PLAINHEADS.

Judge, Mr. H. W. Battye.

CL., ETC., YELL. CK. (12): 1, Turner, grand size and col., large head, a little browed; 2, Hathaway, we preferred, lovely feather, nice wing and tail, really smart; 3, Wharton, warm in col., beautiful feather, nicely carried wings and tail; 4, vhc, Peters; hc, Gough and Loach; c, Hargraves. BUFF (26): 1, 2, vhc, Cook, all that can be desired for a Norwich, though perhaps a little too much on head, 2nd similar, not quite so round and full; 3, Baldwin, nice entrance, beautiful feather, beaten in col.; 4, Chilton, nice feather and carr.; hc, Hartup; c, Beswick. TKD., ETC., YELL. (15): 1, 4, Crawshaw, splendid shape of body, beautiful feather, hot col., fine cond.; 2, Turner, grand col. and cond., runs very close, well known winner; 3, Thomas, warmer col., lovely feather, smart bird, well up; vhc, Braybrook; hc, Stubbs Bros.; c, Wilson. BUFF (21): 1, 2, c, Crawshaw, nice entrance, lovely feather, well-filled back, easy win; 2nd well up in size, nice soft silky feather, well placed; 3, Cook, another good one, well up; 4, Turner, grand cond., fails on head; vhc, Grainger; hc, Stubbs Bros. HEN, YELL. (22): 1, Hirst, nice feather and col.; 2, Brown, good col., shape, nice wings and tail; 3, Thomas, more subs., bit slack 4, Stafford, beaten in wing carr.; vhc, Sharples, a grand hen, might have gone up considerably; hc, Turner; c, Hathaway. BUFF (24): 1, Clayton, grand shape, well carried wings and tail, beautiful feather, claimed at catalogue price of £10; 2, Peters, another good one, close up; 3, Heap; 4, Kayberry; vhc, hc, Cook; c, Leese. 1916 YELL. LANDORE AND PLASMARL.

400 BIRDS AT A FIRST OPEN SHOW.

The first annual open show of the Landore and Plasmarl C.B.S. was held at George and Dragon Hotel, Landore, Oct. 28. Entries totalled over 400, a very gratifying result for the first venture, and the committee were highly delighted at the success. The birds were staged in the club room in tiers, and looked very comfortable, their wants being well attended to by a good band of stewards. The show managers, Messrs. Alf. Hitchings and R. Isaac had everything well prepared, and judging started promptly. They were ably assisted by a hard-working committee, Messrs. W. Hart, W. Llewellyn, H. Marshal, J. Slee, A. J. Bowen, A. Coleman, G. Edgington, J. Watkins, D. C. Jones, and J. Dutton. The sec., Mr. Hy. Fry, carried out his duties in a very able manner, and was well assisted by Mr. D. Rees, a very capable official. Everything went off without a hitch, and at the close the birds were promptly packed and put on rail with the least possible delay. The long-journey birds were kept over until the Monday.

Norwich were a nice collection, some really good exhibits heading the respective classes, Messrs. Hitchings, Thomas, Greaves, and Heath putting down some good teams. Yorks were rather disappointing in numbers; nevertheless a few good birds were staged. Borders were a fine collection, the greens and cinns. classes alone containing 32 exhibits, Messrs. Jenkins, Owens, Edgington, Messer, Hitchings, and Nicholas putting down some really charming exhibits. British made a fine collection, the Goldies, Bullies, Linnets, and Brambles, etc., being well up to the Welsh standard, Messrs. Chick, Davies, Lucas Bros., Bancroft, Gregory, Raven, and Mrs. L. E. T. Dalton staging some real champions. Mr. Jas. Hocking judged Canaries, and Mr. J. E. Jeffreys Mules and British.

NORTHAMPTON.

The show held at the famous town of St. Crispin, Oct. 25 and 26, if it did not come up to some of those mighty gatherings of the eighties and early nineties, was yet a good show, and rewarded the members for their efforts to keep the flag flying. The difficulties of carrying on during the war have been tremendous, and a week ago it was just a toss up whether the show would be held or not. The military are in possession of the property to which the skating rink is attached, and lighting restrictions and one thing and another only last week made it look as though the whole thing would have to be cancelled. We were told that had it not been for the energy and enthusiasm of Mr. Woodman, the secretary, the whole idea of a show would have collapsed. It did not, and great praise is due to the faithful few who have seen to it that despite enormous difficulties the Northampton Good Intent O.S. has been one of the societies that have kept their end up. Mr. Woodman made a most excellent secretary, and he was ably assisted by the chairman, Mr. L. J. Beltham, and Mr. A. Dickens, the treasurer, whilst the committee did what they could to keep things going. The entry was better than last year, and the quality was quite up to the average. Mr. C. A. House judged, and his awards were generally well received. To save expense and so augment the fund for the local war hospitals, no catalogues were printed, but cards with the winners' names were affixed to the cages.

EDINBURGH & EDINBURGH WESTERN.

Joint show, 60th and 31st annual shows respectively, in Buccleuch Halls, Oct. 28. The hall is of nice size, fairly well lighted, and the birds were nicely staged round the sides and one end. Entries were slightly down in both shows this year owing to a large number of members having joined the colours. Scotch Fancies in both sections were of very high standard, and contained the cream of the Fancy, and the same applies to Borders, but in Norwich there was nothing very outstanding or extra special. Both societies had a grand staff of workers; from the presidents downwards one and all worked with a will and were very obliging. The secs., Messrs. Lile and Weston, had all the business in apple pie order, and as a pair would be hard to equal.

It was very gratifying to see such a turn-out of fanciers in the afternoon; many Perth faces were present. The judges for the Edinburgh were Messrs. Steward and C. Sykes and for the Western Messrs. Patterson, Duncan, and Dewar, who all appeared to give general satisfaction. The cup winners were Messrs. Allan and Dalgleish.

THE EARLY MORNING FEELING.

Bonnie Doon.—I think there may not be much wrong with the bird, except, perhaps, being a little run down by the moult. At the same time you would do well to make sure that the bird is not exposed to an excessive drop in temperature during the night. Keep it in a bright and fairly equable place, and do not allow it to hang in or very near a window, high up near the ceiling, nor near or over a burning light in the evenings. Let the staple diet consist of a mixture of three parts, by measure, of good sound, sweet canary seed to one part maw, summer rape. In addition, give every second day for a fortnight half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of the following seed mixture, which will be a good improvement on the mixture you are now using:—Two parts each, by measure, of hemp, white millet, and broken groats; one part each niger, teazle, and black rape; and just a slight sprinkling of linseed and yellow mustard in the bulk. After the first month give this mixture twice a week only. In the water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and after this give four drops each of tincture digentian, tincture of calumba and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight. By this time he should be resuming his song, but in case he is not write again and repeat particulars, and I will advise you further.

THE COLONY SYSTEM.

Roller.—(1) There should be little or no difficulty in arranging the room to make it suitable for breeding Canaries on the colony system. You do not mention the aspect, but I take it that it must be so somewhere by north, or otherwise blocked in by other buildings to account for the darkness at the end where the door is, which, though not an insuperable difficulty, is certainly not an ideal condition. To minimise the defect it is most advisable to limewash or distemper the walls and ceiling all over white to make the best of what light it does get. Before doing this you should strip off the newspaper covering and then put on two or three coats of whitewash to get a good level hue, and also leave as few harbours for insects as possible. Then fix securely to the walls at intervals small bushy branches of Scotch fir, this variety being the best for retaining its needles, and here and there short perches, a foot or so long, attached to small brackets for fixing on the wall. Long straight perches should be avoided, not only because they are unsightly, but they are apt to be monopolised by quarrelsome specimens and give rise to squabbling. For nesting sites fix up a number of the small wicker cages in which Roller Canaries used to be imported, removing the short bars from one end, and the seed-box and water-pot. These make ideal nesting sites, and if a sufficient number are not available they can be very quickly made by anyone, or something similar to them. Put up a dozen nesting sites for every eight breeding hens you intend to employ. Cover the floor with cheap felt, or thick brown paper at a pinch, and on top of this spread a layer of clean sharp sand an inch or so in depth. Builders' sand, or clean river or sea sand will do very well, and need be renewed only about twice a year. It will be a good plan to make a kind of table of a board fixed on a single upright support, and nail a strip of tin closely around the upright six inches wide, and about a foot from the floor to circumvent any mice getting at the food and water supply, which you will place on the top. Two strong vigorous young cocks and six or eight hens will quite suffice to stock the room. (2) It is not really essential to partition the room in any way, but you might anticipate the possibility of a crowd of obstreperous youngsters being something of a nuisance to the nesting hens by placing nesting sites only in the better lighted half of the room, so that you could put up a wire partition across the middle if necessary, to separate from the parents the young which were able to care for themselves, and fix up their end of the room the same as the other except for the nesting sites, which would not be necessary. The young would be all the better for living loose until the moult was over, when you might cage up the cocks to start them on song earlier than they would otherwise begin. (3) Feeding pots, nests and floor, etc., are all answered in No. 1, but if there is anything you do not understand do not hesitate to write again and ask. Self-supplying fountains and seed-boxes would be best for you to use, and, of course, should be kept on the improvised table suggested. In such a colony the hens may be turned in as soon as the room is completed, and allowed to fly loose through the winter, but the cocks should not be introduced before next March or the beginning of April, according to the weather prospects at that time.

PERSISTENT DIARRHŒA.

C. B. (Waterloo).—The excessive thirst is merely an effect of the looseness and will disappear as the diarrhœa is overcome. In addition to a staple diet of three parts of canary to one part good mild summer rape give every second day half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp (see that it is quite sound and sweet in the kernel), teazle, maw and either crushed arrowroot biscuit or broken groats, given dry in the egg drawer, or in a small vessel on the cage floor if the cage is not fitted with an egg drawer. On the alternate days give about the same quantity of well-boiled summer rape and a morsel of banana. Strain the rape and allow it to stand on a towel for a few minutes to absorb moisture before giving it to the bird. Do not give any succulent green food until the droppings have become quite normal again. In the drinking water two days in every three until the droppings are normal, add five drops each of tincture of opium and dilute sulphuric acid. If the looseness is not corrected in the course of a week or so, stop the boiled rape and give instead on these days a morsel of bread the size of a hazel nut scalded in hot milk, drained, and then well dusted with carbonate of bismuth. It would be advisable to well wash out the cage with a solution of Jeyes', or some similar disinfectant, as a preliminary to treatment, and again at the close, and keep floor and perches as clean as possible meanwhile. A dessertspoonful of disinfectant in half a pint of water would make a good strength to use for the purpose.

WEAK TOE BETTER.

H. R.—Thanks for report. Am pleased to hear that the foot is so much better. You would do well to continue the treatment occasionally until the toe appears to have a good gripping power, and instead of the ointment one or two drops of a mixture of equal parts whisky and olive oil gently rubbed in after the bathing would help considerably to strengthen it now. Do not be in a hurry to take away altogether the small perches, but when the foot seems to have acquired a little more power of gripping you may give one perch of the ordinary size and type and retain one of the thin, round ones for at least two months afterwards.

ABNORMAL FEATHERS, ETC.

Three Bad Bargains. — (1) Wait until the two feathers are quite matured and the moisture or "sap" dried out of the quills at the base, and then gently withdraw them, when new and normal feathers will doubtless immediately be reproduced in place of them. Nothing else is required for this case. The bird is probably a gross feeder and needs a limit put upon its dainties. Besides the staple diet give not more than half a teaspoonful of the seed mixture once or twice a week—once as long as the weather is nothing out of the ordinary for the season, and twice when it becomes severe during the winter. The wheezing will probably yield to a dose or two of six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea in the water. If you use a fine powdery kind of sand on the cage floor the bird's apparent desire for an abnormal quantity may be due to what is supplied being deficient in gritty particles suitable for use in the gizzard. The obvious remedy would be to use a proper sand with a fair proportion of gritty particles in it. Otherwise, stick a piece of cuttlefish or a small cube of hard common salt in the wires for the bird to peck at, which may correct the desire for consuming sand in excessive quantities. (2) the proper time to begin to give the birds a tonic to tighten up the plumage after the moult is just after the feathers have quite ceased dropping and the new quills are getting well through on the head. (3) Yes, Parrish's Chemical Food is an excellent tonic for general purposes, and is quite suitable for all ordinary cases after the moult. (4) Catch the bird with the overgrown beak, and holding the beak, closed, firmly between the thumb and forefinger of the left hand, carefully snip off the overgrown portion of the upper mandible with a sharp pair of nail or embroidery scissors. You cannot do any harm by shortening it back to the level of the tip of the lower mandible. To prevent a recurrence keep a piece of cuttlefish or hard common salt, or even a piece of lump sugar stuck firmly in the wires for the bird to nibble at. (5) Of the two samples you send the small reddish-brown seed is the proper kind for you to use with the staple dietary. It is just a fair sample of summer rape; not bad for the times. The larger seed is more suitable for use in a seed mixture for occasional use. Don't apologise for troubling again. Only too pleased to be of any service at any time.

CHAFFINCH WITH LEG TROUBLE.

A. Garnham.—I am surprised that your bird has not moulted, especially as he was in such good condition during the summer. Healthy birds generally get through this trouble quickly. Your treatment appears to be quite in order as regards feeding, but you do not say the size of your "Finch" cage; anyway, I would advise a large one, and have two or three perches of various thicknesses, so that in gripping them he will be obliged to exercise his claws. Bathe the leg and foot in fairly hot water, apply Old Jacob's Oil and massage with the finger and thumb to increase circulation. Be careful in your feeding; let it be rather nourishing than stimulating, that is, discontinue hemp, give a little soft food or soaked seed and increase the supply of insects. A mild aperient such as a small teaspoonful of effervescing citrate of magnesia in three tablespoonfuls of water given occasionally will assist, if he is at all inclined to constipation. See that the cage is hung in a dry position.

SEED DIET FOR MULES.

F. H.—I fancy I have answered this query rather frequently of late; perhaps if you look up back numbers it will assist you. As a staple diet make the following mixture: Canary 3 parts, teazle 2 parts, hemp 1 part, rape and linseed half a part each. Give a few grains of sunflower twice a week, and fresh greenfood and wild seeds, as you gather them. The above food should keep them in good condition, and they should start singing soon after the moult. Any very backward ones could have a few extra grains of good sound hemp. A crystal of Glauber Salts the size of a pea in the drinker is a good aperient, and may be given when you think it necessary. Hang the drinker on the cage overnight and remove in the morning, when the birds have had a good drink.

BREEDING MULES IN SPARE ROOM.

Bay-Rum.—Put the half-dozen hens in your spare room, and as partners for them two healthy cock Goldfinches. If you have not the Finches in stock, when you get them, keep them caged up until they are fairly steady. Perhaps you could hang them somewhere near you during the day-time. In fitting up your room have plenty of perches and nesting places. Wicker cages, small boxes, half cokernut shells and nestpans, are all suitable and allow a choice. Have many more than you think they require. Be sure to fix the seed hoppers in a position so that mice cannot get at it.

BULLFINCH WITH LEG WEAKNESS.

W. J. Bazeley.—It is rather singular that I should have two queries in one week of the same trouble, and that of a kind that does not occur very frequently, but generally in the autumn, which suggests that the moult is in some way responsible, if not for the commencement of the trouble, anyway, for its continuance. Your case is a similar one to that of "A. Garnham" in this issue, and I would advise the same local treatment. I am sorry you did not send me your seed diet, as the feeding of the bird is a matter of some importance; it should be good without being too stimulating, and wild food and berries should be given freely. Exercise should be encouraged, and the perches fixed at different distances, and they should vary in thickness. Leg and foot trouble in caged birds generally requires considerable treatment before a cure is effected.

SEED SAMPLES.

Mac.—The "Rape" is certainly not the summer rape which we knew as "German" rape before war time. The latter is smaller and varies in tint from a golden brown to a reddish black. The kind you send should only be used in strict moderation; in fact, you would do better to make sure that you get genuine summer rape. The other seeds seem to be all that could be desired; the canary seed is clean, ripe and full, and the hemp seed also is perfectly sound. Of the two samples of maw seed the one at the slightly higher price is well worth the difference.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

WHAT BIRD

J. Cowdell.—Your birds are Madagascar Lovebirds (Agapornis cana), but if both their heads are alike, and they are adult birds, then they are both of the same sex. The cock has the whole of the head and part of the neck pale grey; the female, except her tail, is a study in green. They are natives of Madagascar, but have been introduced to Mauritius and neighbouring islands, and are commonly found there. Your diet is correct as far as it goes; I am assuming, of course, that you also give grit, cuttlebone, and water. They should have a little greenfood, and, if they will take it, a little sweet apple.

PROTRACTED MOULT.

E. L. S.—I take it that though the moult seems continuous, yet the bird is in good feather and has no bare patches; if this assumption is correct, then there is not much the matter. Keep the temperature of the room as regular as possible. We have had a very changeable season, and a sudden change of weather often throws a bird into moult or checks it in the midst of one. Your treatment is perfectly correct. Get a bottle of Allen and Hanbury's Byno-phosphates and put ten drops in its drinking water regularly for a time, and if there should be any signs of costiveness, then give a little Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water till it disappears. If circumstances permit, your birds would be greatly benefited by a daily fly round the room; they would return to their cage when hungry, and there is no reason why they should not be out together. Except in extreme cases, it is not well to administer remedies to small birds direct to the beak. When such has to be done, only a drop at a time should be given, and no more till this has been properly swallowed.

IS IT A COCKATOO?

J. Hayward.—Your description leaves no room for doubt, it is an Australian Roseate Cockatoo (Cacatua roseicapilla); they are frequently called Rosy Parrots by the ignorant or the too knowing. I hope you will both shake hands on the matter.

PURPLE SUGAR BIRDS IN SECOND MOULT.

Purple.—The climatic conditions have been freakish of late, and to some extent these upset the best regulated conditions, at any rate, temporarily, and to some such cause the double moult is doubtless attributable. To your syrup mixture add one teaspoonful of cod liver oil emulsion to each cupful of your syrup, put it in with the other ingredients and well mix all together, continue this till your birds are in quite normal tone.

COVERING A PARROT'S CAGE AT NIGHT.

E. Lilley.—Unless the room contains a fire day and night during the winter, the bird is better covered; the screen need not be a thick one, and a portion of the centre of top of cage must be left uncovered. A bird that is covered up at about 9 p.m. gets better rest than one not so treated. So long as the cage stands below the level of the gaslights there will be no harmful effect.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. The Post Office regulation is that bodies of birds must be sent at the letter rate of postage, and must be packed in hermetically-sealed receptacles which must themselves be enclosed in strong wooden, leather, or metal cases. If this regulation be infringed the packets may be destroyed by the authorities. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

PIED FLYCATCHER AT CLAPHAM.

C. S. Montague.—You seem to have misread the correspondence. The bird was taken to the show personally and called for personally, so that the particular point of your letter is lost altogether. Your statement that judges could not explain their awards because of their knowledge being limited to a few well-known species is of much too sweeping a nature. Some judges know a lot more than you seem to give them credit for knowing. Your allegation that, in 20 years of showing, your birds have only once been fed at a show seems to indicate that you have no idea of the care that is given to the birds at every show of any consequence. If the statement is true, according to your own experience, then your experience is a very unfortunate one. If there were any real grounds for such a statement, it is quite evident that bird shows would cease to exist, for no one would send their birds.

HYBRID WINNER IN A BRITISH CLASS.

J. T. Vickers.—As so often stated, we cannot publish letters which are not authenticated by the address of the sender. A class for A.O.V. British is intended for any other species of British birds. A Hybrid is not a species, but a cross-bred, and in a show of any importance would be "wrong classed" by the judge if entered in a class headed "A.O.V. British."

"THE SMALL GARDEN." The Book of the Moment. How best to utilise small spaces; simple but complete instructions for the novice gardener, especially for the amateur who wishes to turn a little plot of land to good advantage. List of vegetables and flowers. A most valuable little book for all who wish to grow their own food. Price, 7d., post free.

"IN-BREEDING"—What it is and what it does. Deals comprehensively with one of the most fascinating problems of the live stock hobby, by the celebrated Fancy authority, C. A. HOUSE. Of equal value to the breeders of any kind of stock. Explains what prepotency does. The first steps to take; how to make the weak strong; breeders' experiences, etc. Price, 10d., post paid.

"EVERY WOMAN'S BOOK OF POULTRY." By the Hon. Mrs. Lionel Guest. Most favourably-reviewed book of poultry for the season. The problem of the food supply is a great and growing one. The author writes delightfully and instructively on a subject of which she has made herself a perfect mistress, and the result is a book that can be cordially recommended to every woman who can and ought to take up the industry. Price, 8d., post free.

"WEE GEMS" FROM NORTH AND SOUTH.

The "Wee Gem," as the charming little Border Fancy Canary is popularly called, is becoming more and more of a favourite with South-country Canary Breeders. The three birds in our picture are all winners at London Shows. On the left is the Buff Border, winner of 2nd at the London and P.O.S. Show, the property of Mr. G. Bennet, Kelso, Scotland; at the top is the Buff which won 1st at the Show of the City and Suburban A.C.B. for Mr. T. L. Sayer, London, and the Marked Border won 2nd at East Ham Combined Show for Mr. H. Withers.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and are charged at two words a penny up to 48 words; after that 1d. per word. No single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 9d. 1/-, 1/6, 2/-, 2/6, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona-fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

MEDICINES.

AIDS TO SUCCESS.

Our Books and a Common-sense Application of the Advice therein MUST bring you Profit as well as Pleasure.

All the experience of years of careful study by experts is at the disposal of readers.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 2/2.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lauder, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2. "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge. Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

IMPORTANT.

we are prepared to pay the very highest cash prices for large or small quantities of Canaries, including Norwich, Yorkshires, Borders, Rollers, etc.; also Mules. Do not dispose of your surplus stock until you have received our offers. All our birds are for retail trade—not for export—therefore we can pay the very highest prices in the trade. All Canaries we purchase are retained in this country. Do not be misled with idle boast and exaggerated statements. Send your offers to a reliable firm, where you will receive a genuine offer and your cash.

5, 10, 50, 100, or 1,000 pairs.

More than 20,000 (twenty thousand) Canaries passed through my hands last season. I purchased more Canaries from Norwich and Yorkshire breeders than the rest of the trade together. Everyone was paid cash. Enquire of any recognised Norwich or Yorkshire dealers or breeders.

CANARIES WANTED.

Will give 10/6 per pair for surplus stocks of

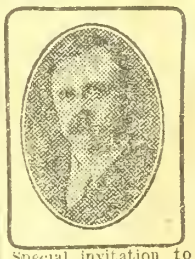
YORKSHIRES, NORWICH or ROLLERS.

12/6 to 15/- per pair for CRESTS, and will deposit cash with Editor.



I am also open to consider offers of good class birds at higher prices.

I also require BORDERS, MULES, etc. Will pay top prices and deposit cash.

H. GLEDHILL,

Fleet Lane, Queensbury, Bradford

BRITISH BIRDS.

Highest prices paid, and will deposit cash with Editor. Remember, 40 years same address. The largest breeder, exhibitor, and dealer in England.

Special invitation to anyone interested, Editor included, to come and view my place and see who has the largest business and stock of Canaries in England.

JOE THOMAS,

AMBLER THORN, HALIFAX.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

I wish to thank the Canary Breeders of Great Britain for their magnificent response to my advertisement "Wanted to Purchase." It will interest the Canary World to know that a record arrival has been made during the last week—7th October to 14th October. Over 1,100—one thousand one hundred—Canaries were received during seven days, and paid for same day as arrival.

Ask any Canary dealer if any deductions were made, or if any delay in payments. To have paid out £400 in one week, and given satisfaction to every sender is a fact to be recorded, and congratulated on.

The Canary branch of this business is conducted solely by my wife. I assure every sender they will receive fair and prompt attention at Mrs. Hamlyn's hands.

JOHN D. HAMLYN,

221, ST. GEORGE'S STREET, LONDON, EAST.

BRITISH BIRDS and How to Keep them

ALTHOUGH I have kept British birds for about fifty years, it is with some diffidence I address you on this subject. At all the bird shows held in Sheffield the British classes invariably command most attention, and the largest crowd gather around them. There are some people who protest against keeping any bird caged, saying it is cruelty to do so. Well, how are we to see these birds that we so much admire? It is only by caging them, and overcoming their fear of us by kindness and attention to their requirements. I have no hesitation in saying that the knowledge that most fanciers have of how to treat our pets, enables us to put them on the show bench in their best possible condition, in all their beauty and loveliness, to be examined at your leisure; they are in no way afraid of your closeness, but return your look as if they were proud of their excellence.

As to the charge of cruelty, I maintain there is no foundation for it; otherwise, how would our birds live so long in captivity? I have at the present time a Skylark over 18 years old, a rare feathered Starling (silver coloured) 12 years, and a Chaffinch 12 years; each of these birds has won at the Crystal Palace, and has appeared in CAGE BIRDS' illustrations. I have also a Nightingale over nine years of age.

All these old birds are in splendid condition. At your last show, recently held, the Chaffinch won first prize in the any variety class, beating many noted winners. I am only stating these facts to show there is no cruelty in caging birds. No doubt other fanciers have similar experience.

Cleanliness a First Consideration.

I have said that in order to keep birds for any considerable length of time they should be kept under proper conditions, and I will now give you my idea of what proper conditions are. First and foremost are cleanliness and plenty of cage room, so that the bird may be able to get plenty of exercise; without this no bird will for long keep in good condition. The next thing is plenty of baths during the summer months. Two or three times a week I run my birds into a large bath cage, take them outside, and I have a hosepipe with a roso on, and give each bird a good spraying. I then hang them up in a warm spot in their own cages where they will soon dry. It is astonishing to see, after a few times, how ready they are to enter the bath cage for a spraying, and how they seem to enjoy it.

In the winter time the days are short, and, being away during daylight, I give them a spraying in a milder form. Instead of the hosepipe I use a fine sprayer, and, of course, I do not wet them so much. When back in their cages they shake and preen themselves, and seem thoroughly to have enjoyed the process.

Twitterings.

We hear that Mr. Bastock has sold to a Cardiff fancier, at a good price, his light Mule "Moseley Gem," 1st Clapham, etc.,

Halifax O.S. Schedules are out, writes Mr. J. J. Dunn, sec., 67, Hartley Street, Ballinson Road. If anyone overlooked will kindly send entries on we will classify; entries close Nov. 14.

We are informed by Mr. P. H. Morris, secretary, that the cage birds at the show of the Aberavon Port Talbot B.F.A., on November 23, will be staged in a room separate from the poultry and pigeons.

We have been successful in arranging for St. James's Hall, Pontypool, on Jan. 4, writes Mr. W. D. Lewis, hon. sec. Pontypool C.B.S. The hall is one of the finest in the town, well lighted, free from draught, and capable of staging well over a thousand birds, and is within 300 yards from two stations. Schedules will be sent to all known fanciers as soon as received from printers; others please apply from advertisement.

In place of an open show, writes Mr. W. Furnandiz, hon. sec. Hull C.B.S., we are holding a members' show, Nov. 11, at the Oddfellows' Hall, Charlotte Street. The judges are: Yorks. and British, Mr. F. F. Potter, Hull; Norwich, Mr. H. Harding, Grimsby. We exceedingly regret we are unable to hold an open show again this year owing to the war, but are looking forward with confidence to the future, when we hope again to take our place amongst the front rankers. To keep the flag flying is our ambition. We are also making a presentation to our late treasurer (Mr. F. Howe), who has joined the colours. He has held the office for the past seven years, which I think is sufficient testimony to show the confidence in which he is held by our members.

Mr. C. Morrison, Brighouse, writes that the thirteen Yorkshire Canaries he sent to Barrow and Sheffield shows arrived back in the best of condition after covering about three hundred miles, bringing home 4 1sts, 4 2nds, one third, two fourths, two vhc's and special for second best bird at Barrow. Best thanks to the secretaries and officials for the careful handling and prompt dispatch.

Additions to Larkhall Schedule.

Larkhall C.B.A. members please note, writes Mr. T. McGregor, sec., that F.M. Linnet and F.M. Greenfinch classes have been added to schedule.

A Novelty for Swansea Show.

The Swansea C.B.A. at their open show Nov. 16, writes Mr. J. H. Ford, sec., will have on exhibition a reputed Yellow Bunting-Canary hybrid which is being exhibited by a noted fancier.

How Bird Shows Assist Charity.

We hear from Mr. Laidlow, secretary of Newcastle C.B.S., that about £28 will be handed over to the Red Cross Society as a result of the recent show of the society. Bravo! Newcastle.

Bumping Entry at Ardwick.

Just as we are going to press we hear from Mr. Thorpe, hon. sec. of Ardwick and Manchester C.B.A., that the entries for the show of to-day, Saturday, are nearly 300 more than those of last year.

Return of Birds from Brechin.

Owing to the depleted staff of the railway, writes Mr. John Dalgety, sec. Brechin C.B.S., they would not undertake to deliver birds at a distance on Saturday night: therefore we were forced to keep a great many boxes until Monday. Trusting every bird arrived home safely.

An Object Lesson in Roller Canary Singing.

At the meeting of the British Roller Canary Club on Nov. 14, at the "Cock and Lion," Wigmore Street, W., at 7.30, British bred Roller Canaries will be heard singing, and the song tours explained. The hon. sec., Mr. Norris, writes that those interested are cordially invited to be present.

Thanks to Cheltenham.

Kindly allow me to heartily thank the management of the Cheltenham C.B.S. for the splendid care and attention given to my birds, writes Mrs. Lilian Dalton. The attention given to the packing of exhibits will, I think, commend itself to the most fastidious, and it is a feature I shall remember when supporting their next show.

Who Bought the Norwich at Clapham?

I should be obliged, writes Mr. T. J. Hose, hon. sec. Clapham C.B.A., if you would kindly mention that all prize money has been paid out; also I should be glad to know the purchaser of exhibit No. 10 in limit Norwich, as I have no record of the birds being sold, and the owner wants the cash for them.

Scottish Plainhead Club Specials.

At the Glasgow C.B.A. show, Nov. 10. 11. writes Mr. E. Barron, sec. Scottish Plainhead Club, the club's specials for the young birds should read: J. 10s. 6d., 2nd best young cock; J., 5s., 2nd; K., 5s., 3rd; etc., and specials for young hens likewise. The patronage of the S.P.C. has been granted to Ayr show; Mr. R. Martin, Kirkintilloch, judges. Irvine and Larkhall shows may also become patronage shows.

THE PROPOSED FEDERATION OF ROLLER SOCIETIES.

Important Meeting at Leeds.

It will no doubt be remembered that letters have appeared from time to time in our columns regarding the proposal to federate the fanciers of the Roller Canary hobby.

As we go to press we hear that an enthusiastic meeting of clubs' delegates took place on Saturday last at Leeds. Details must await another issue, but it appears that the mist which surrounded the first intimation of "affiliation" has been dispelled; it leaves the present bright and clear, with a promising future before the Federation of Roller Societies.

Every member of a federated club is to have a voice and a vote in matters appertaining to his hobby. His desires will go forward for discussion, etc, through his club delegates, to the annual meeting, or to any other meeting that may be convened. We understand that it was unanimously decided that every club, large or small, shall send two delegates to the board's meetings, or, in the event of a club only sending one delegate, he will be allowed two votes.

It was firmly resolved to support, and make a success of each other's annual exhibition, and it would seem that there will be no loss of dignity or prestige on the part of any Roller club joining such a Federation.

Mr. J. Stanger, hon sec. Pelton Fell C.B.S., writes that the Pelton Fell C.B. winning numbers were 17, 578, 240, 846, 862, and 83.

Free Exhibiting for Soldier Fanciers

At the last meeting of the North West Glasgow C.B.C. a resolution was passed that members of the society on active service should be granted remission of entry fee on any birds entered in their name at the annual show. This is an example which might be followed by other societies.

Special Winners at Manchester.

Prize money has been paid for Manchester and N.C.O.S. show, Oct. 27 and 28, writes Mr. J. Green, hon. sec. The following won the section specials:—Lancs. and Lizards, Rukin; Yorks., Rowlands; Nor., Crawshaw; Bord., Johnston; A.O.V., Godley; Hyb., Brit. and For., Raven; Yorks. Amat., W. H. Green; Nor. Amat., Hampton.

A Liverpool Winning Norwich Comes to London

You may be interested to hear, writes Mr. A. C. Brotherhood, Newport, Salop, that my unflighted yellow Norwich, 1st Liverpool, which your representative in his report says is a perfect one, and a study of an ideal Norwich, is sold to a well-known London exhibitor for £15 15s. I would like to say that the bird is an illustration of what may be accomplished by careful line breeding, in which I am a firm believer.

Kindly state, writes Mr. A. S. Thomas, hon. sec. Cheltenham C.B.S., that we regret there is a printer's error in our catalogue. In class 29. No. 3, Thompson, won 1st, and No. 2, Ellis, vhc. We had a capital show, and beg to thank all those exhibitors who supported us. We had a number of visitors from Sheffield, Birmingham, Aberdeen, Bristol, etc., and the Welsh fanciers turned up in force. Our total sales amounted to the respectable sum of £110.

A Boy Fancier Breeds a Sensational Hybrid.

A Yellow Greenfinch-Canary Hybrid, almost clear, shown at Leicester, created something of a sensation in winning special for best bird in the Hybrid and British sections. We hear from Mr. Bastock, Moseley, that it was bred by a boy, and that the hen from which it was bred cost only a shilling. Mr. Bastock says that it is the best Greenfinch Hybrid ever seen, that everybody was seeking for the owner, and that all sorts of offers were being mentioned.

OBITUARY.

It is with the deepest regret, writes Mr. W. Furnandiz, hon. sec. Hull C.B.S., I have to advise you of the death of Mrs. Pepper, the wife of our esteemed and late chairman, Mr. T. Pepper. Mr. Pepper is well known throughout the country as a Norwich breeder, and I feel sure his brother fanciers outside this district will, along with the Hull members, extend to him the deepest sympathy in his sudden and sad bereavement.

REVIEW OF SCHEDULES.

Halifax O.S.—Friendly and Free Trades Hall, Nov. 17-18. Judges, C. A. House, H. W. Battye. 34 classes: Yorks 17 (9 Nov.), Nor. 10 (4 Amat.), Brit. 5, Sell 2. Prizes 10s., 6s., 4s., 2s. Fee 1s. 6d. Ent. close Nov. 14 to J. J. Dunn, 67, Hartley Street, Battinson Road, Halifax.

West Bromwich and Handsworth C.B.S.—Ivy House, Soho Road, Handsworth, Nov. 18-20. Judge, J. H. Payne. 35 classes: Nor. 12 (4 Nov.), Yorks 10 (4 Nov.), A.O.V. 1, Sell. 3, Mules 2, Brit. 5, For. 1, Gift 1. Prizes 10/-, 5/-, 2/6. Fee 1/6. Ent. close Nov. 1 to H. T. Collier, 5, The Cedars, Highfield Road, Hall Green, Birmingham.

An Address Wanted.

The prize money due to Mr. Arnison, winner of second prize in class 77 at Sacriston show, held Oct. 7, writes Mr. W. Dodd, hon. sec., has been returned by the Postal Authorities marked "no such address." The money was sent to Mr. Arnison, 30, Walker Street, West Hartlepool, the address given on entry form. If Mr. Arnison will forward his proper address the money will be sent him.

TO JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS.

In View of Our Next Annual.

Cage Birds Annual for 1917 is now in course of preparation, and in order that our annual list of judges of cage birds should be up to date, and correct in detail, we shall be obliged if judges who wish their names to appear in next year's Directory of Judges will send us on a postcard their present address and the varieties they are prepared to judge, naming, if any, those in which they specialise. No charge whatever is made for the insertion, but only the names of those who send us the particulars desired will be included in the list. A specimen entry (fictitious) is as follows:—

Goldfinch Stolen on the Railway.

My Goldfinch was stolen from his cage, which was enclosed in a travelling case, on the way home from the Manchester show, writes Mr. J. O. Williams, Machynlleth. I am willing to pay 10s. reward to anyone who will give me any information that will lead to the apprehension of the thief. If the bird is exhibited at any show in England and Wales it can easily be identified by myself and several friends, and we shall make it our duty that one of us will visit the shows where he would possibly be shown.

Entries Extended.

We are extending entries till Nov. 12th, and all entries bearing Saturday's post mark will be accepted, writes Mr. J. Alderslade, sec. Eastleigh C.B.S., 64, Desborough Road, Eastleigh, Hants. Exhibitors are requested to dispatch their exhibits early, so as to make sure of birds arriving in good time. We have a good railway service, and everything possible will be done to dispatch birds in good time after the show. If we find it impossible to get them through to their destination the same night, they will not be dispatched till Friday morning, and every attention given them.

Charity Show at Chester-le-Street.

The proceeds of the Chester-le-Street show, Nov. 17, writes Mr. R. Ward, sec. Chester-le-Street C.B.S., will be given in aid of the lads of the town who have been disabled in the war. The hall, which is a very suitable one, and has been given gratis for the occasion, is only three minutes' walk from the station. Mr. Ward says that the show is not in any way connected with the show of the Chester-le-Street C.B.S., but is being run by a strong committee of fanciers belonging to various clubs in the district, and if it proves a success it is proposed to make it an annual event. Exhibitors should write for a schedule to the secretary, Mr. J. P. Conn, Butcher's Arms, Chester-le-Street.

YOUR COMPETITOR.

Some wise maxims intended for the guidance of traders, and which have been sent to us by an old reader with a note that they may be of use not only to dealers but to exhibitors and to fanciers with stock to sell.

"Your competitor is not necessarily your enemy. He can be your friend.

A common mistake is that there is just so much business to be had, and that the rival cuts your trade in half.

That is not true. As a rule the more tradesmen the more trade. A good, lively competitor will increase your business.

Two first-class competitors in a community are better for both than a monopoly would be for either.

No one man can get all the business possible in any community. His personality attracts some, repels others. There's always a lot of business for somebody else.

Competition does not kill trade. It builds trade, makes new trade, stimulates trade.

Don't shy from your competitor. Don't assume he's your foe. Get acquainted with him. You may learn something.

Beat your competitor if you can, but remember the surest way to beat him is to sell better goods, to use fair methods, and to be more courteous.

Don't knock your competitor. Don't encourage busybodies who bring you tales of him. Be a good sport. Play the game. Keep good-natured.

If your competitor lies about you, or uses underhand means to harm you, never mind. You go on and be on the level, and look pleasant. You can't fool people all the time. Straight business wins out in the long run. There's business for you both. Go after it.

Your competitor will do you a deal of good. He will make you energetic, careful, more attentive to affairs, and altogether he will bring money to your pocket if you use him right."—Dixie Miller.

The November issue of "British Birds," Messrs. Witherby and Co., High Holborn, one shilling monthly, is especially welcome as containing a continuation of the invaluable article by the editor, Mr. H. F. Witherby, "The moults of the British Passeres." The labour of getting together the facts presented must have been immense, and no student of British birds can afford to be without the information conveyed. We are greatly indebted to the author for his kind permission to republish parts of this comprehensive article, and we know that the portions we have already published have been keenly appreciated by our readers.

Correspondence.

Every week a Prize of Ten Shillings is given for what, in the opinion of the Editor of "CAGE BIRDS," is the best letter published under this heading. The letter may be on any subject; it may be a comment, for or against, on anything which is published in our pages, an opinion on the policy of our paper, or may have no reference whatever to anything which has already appeared. So long as it is on a "birdy" subject, and is original, it will be eligible to compete for the prize.

How it Can be Removed.

Sir,—If our friend G. Taylor would paint the enamel cage over thickly with equal parts of slaked lime and common soda, made into a creamy paste with water, and let it stand for an hour, he will be able to wash off the whole of the enamel, and when the cage is again dry it will be ready for re-enamelling This will also remove paint.

Chas. S. Latham.

The Hon. Sec., Mr. A. Silver, in Khaki.

Sir,—Will you kindly state for the benefit of the Committee of the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League that as I am almost sure to be drafted on foreign service next week I must formally resign my secretaryship. All books are in possession of the chairman, Mr. T. R. Trower, and full particulars of the statement of accounts. It would be advisable for the committee to meet soon, and appoint a secretary, but as Mr. Trower is exceptionally busy, he probably would not have time to call a meeting, so in order to know exactly how matters stand perhaps those who see this will communicate with Mr. Trower, 442, Caledonian Road, N., and arrange a place and time of meeting.

Pte. A. Silver.

Further Valuable Suggestions.

Sir,—Often when seeing birds sold in the open market to persons obviously amateurs in the keeping thereof, and sometimes even of the species they are buying, I have wished that some information could be given the purchasers respecting the feeding and keeping of their purchases. I was not only glad then to see Mr. McMillan's suggestion on this subject in to-day's issue of your paper, Oct. 14, but doubly so to see the weekly prize had been awarded to him. He only mentions the Canary, and doubtless on account of this bird being such a general favourite it is perhaps the class which suffers most, but I should like to see the project carried out with all birds kept in captivity, British and foreign alike, for there is no doubt much cruelty is practised by really kind-hearted people through sheer ignorance, and there is no need for it these days. If every dealer on parting with his "wares" would tell his customer of Cage Birds, or the little books of the "Nutshell" series, each embracing one particular bird, much might be done to ameliorate the lot of the feathered captive, and its owner would be repaid by its cheery little ways and beautiful song.

Border Fancies at Sheffield.

Sir,—I have been following with great interest your correspondence re the above, but Mr. Patterson's letter in Cage Birds of Oct. 28 cannot be allowed to pass unchallenged, as his remarks re breeders and exhibitors as judges are erroneous in the extreme. He states point blank that "when once a fancier stops being a breeder and exhibitor he should also retire from judging." Now I consider that when a fancier has been a breeder and exhibitor of any particular breed for a number of years, he must have got "the ideal" well established in his mind's eye, and is therefore an ideal man to act as judge of the particular variety.

On the same night that I read Mr. Patterson's letter I received a schedule of Haddington Red Cross Show, and on opening the same the first thing that caught my eye was "J. Patterson, Esq., Chirnside, will judge Scotch fancy classes." How does this tally with Mr. Patterson's preaching? Surely it is a contradiction. Please note that I do not question his ability to judge Scotch Fancies. I have known Mr. Patterson from boyhood, and I will leave it to him to tell readers of Cage Birds how long it is since he ceased to be a breeder and exhibitor of the Scotch Fancy Canary.

Birds in the Mixed and Foreign Classes.

A Plea for Names in the Catalogue.

Sir,—As a visitor to the Manchester and N. Counties show, I was disappointed when I found the catalogue did not disclose the parentage of the Hybrids or the names of the exhibits in A.O.S. Hardbill and Softbill classes. We were left wondering, too, as to the names of some beautiful Foreign birds, but, as a few of them were labelled, the officials apparently had done what they could, and my object in writing is not to criticise the management of this excellent show so much as to ventilate the matter, in the hope that exhibitors at coming shows will supply all possible information on entering their birds, and that officials will embody it in their catalogues, thus adding to the pleasure and knowledge of those who attend. Many patrons are more curious about the birds than they are about the exhibitors, especially in the "tricky" classes.

The Pied Flycatcher at Clapham Show.

The Views of a Lady Exhibitor.

Sir,—I have read Mr. Rattigan's letter of complaint of the treatment of his exhibit at the Clapham Show. I had an exhibit in the same class, a pair of Bearded Reedlings, and I must say. I was more than satisfied at the way in which they were looked after. On the last day of the show, Thursday, I went to fetch them home, and they were in absolutely perfect condition, and I am sure it was only on account of the exceptionally keen competition they had that the Reedlings did not stand higher. Certainly they did not go down because of condition; the food vessel when I examined it, which, of course, I did immediately on entering the hall, was quite full of clean, sweet insectivorous food, and the water vessel had plenty of clean water in it. This proves that the exhibits were well looked after, because, as no doubt you know, there are few birds that show neglect more quickly than Bearded Reedlings.

I am very sorry to hear of Mr. Rattigan's loss, for I was most interested in his exhibit; and I can understand that he feels a little sore about it, but this is only one of the little trials which exhibitors have to bear. I should very much like to thank those who looked after my birds at the show, and to say that I at least have not the slightest cause to regret showing my birds at Clapham.

(Mrs.) Ethel A. Huggins.

The Secretary Explains Previous Mishap.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Rattigan's further letter, the Pied Flycatcher was not in our custody three days, but scarcely two, so this lessens my intelligent practice by one third, and as Mr. Rattigan visited the show within 24 hours of dispatching this fragile little thing with its makeshift food vessel, it doesn't show much for his own superior intelligence that he did not notice that the old mildewed food which the bird had sent to the show with it had not been cleaned out. Had he done so, and called a Committeeman's attention to it, the matter could have been rectified at once, and so saved this unpleasantness.

As I only had a few hours in which to reply to Mr. Rattigan's previous letter, there was not sufficient time for me to refer it to my Committee, but in the interval I have done so, and find that the trouble at the previous show to which he refers was caused by Mr. Rattigan's carelessness or ignorance in sending birds to a show in a cage which had to have the door opened to give clean water, and, of course, the inevitable happened, a bird slipped out. As he says, it is a simple enough matter to open a cage door. If a bird slips through, and is lost, in four years' time rake up the grievance and slam the show executive and everybody else because another bird doesn't get a prize. Same old thing—"disappointed exhibitor."

Proposed Society for Ferndale.

A Meeting to be Called.

Sir,—In answer to Mr. Grylls I may say that, having been out of the fancy for some time, and not having any live stock of any kind, I ceased being a member of the old Fanciers' Society, and I find that some of the money that was in hand from the old society was given to start the Mardy Society and some to the Soldiers' Society, so I do not think anybody has any cause to grumble as it has been given to a good cause. It has given birth to a new society, and has helped the dependents of our brave lads. I hope this will be satisfactory to Mr. Grylls.

I may say that I have received the names of about twelve fanciers who are willing to do all in their power to start a society in the district, and am sure if we will all do our bit we will be able to start a society that will be beneficial to all, and that once we start we will be able to draw some more recruits into the fancy. I intend to get all the addresses of local fanciers and call a meeting some evening to talk matters over, and I hope anyone that has any interest in the matter will send me their addresses and let me know anything that will be beneficial to starting a society.

How to Spend a Pleasant Evening.

Sir,—We have in this town (Skipton) a military camp holding about 1,700 men, and I have often wondered if there are among them any fellow Roller fanciers or sons of the same.

I would like you to make it known through your valuable paper (I have taken it regularly for about six years, and it has never been more interesting than at the present time) that if there be any such I should be glad to welcome them to my home during their brief stay here. I know they would appreciate it if they knew, as I have proved from the friends I have taken home from the P.M. church to which I belong.

I am over military age, so I try and do my bit by endeavouring to make those who are doing their as comfortable as possible, for under the lighting restrictions, which are abominable here, it must be hard lines for the lads that, after a hard day's work, there is no place to go to except either the picture palace or public house. An evening by the fireside talking over their favourite hobby would be gladly welcomed by them and myself. I thank you in anticipation of you mentioning the above in your next issue.

Fresh Fields for Fanciers.

Why Not Cage-bred Greenfinches?

Sir,—We read that our present Canary is descended from a little soberly clad bird, originally brought from the Canary Islands. Unfortunately we have but little information of the earlier steps in the process of evolution which gave us our present specimens of the race. We need only look, however, at the pictures of show birds of a few years ago to see that that evolution is still going on. If such great development has been possible in the case of one species, it occurs to one to ask why it should not be possible in another.

Is there anything to prevent fanciers from raising a cage-bred strain of some British finch, and by careful selection in pairing, developing it into something larger and more brightly coloured than the original stock? Assuming it were possible, the Greenfinch perhaps offers the easiest and most promising material for an experiment of the kind, owing to the general reliability of the hen as a mother.

Can we interest a sufficiently large number of fanciers to go in for the scheme to give us a basis for selection? It may be objected that the infrequent and casual hatchings of British finches in cages usually produce puny and weedy youngsters. It may be so. It may have been so at first with the Canary birds. But get a thoroughly domesticated race, established on a wide basis, and who knows what may result? Though it is to be feared that the present generation would not see the full fruition of the experiment, it is not possible to forecast the limits of the development that may take place eventually. Fancy a "Greenie" as big as (what shall we say?) a Starling!

[It should be a comparatively easy matter to produce in a very few years Greenfinches, Goldfinches, and other British birds which would be a considerable advance on our present wild birds. The wonder is that it has not long ago been accomplished.—Editor, Cage Birds.]

Alleged Discourtesy at Sheffield Show.

Should Shows Close Before Time?

Sir,—Please allow me space to air a complaint against the conduct of one of the officials of the Sheffield O.S. After buying two tickets for admittance to the show, my wife and self arrived at show at about 7.20 p.m., only to be met with a point blank refusal to enter, as they were turning out, although the time of closing, as printed on the ticket, plainly said 9 p.m. On my mentioning this to the official he replied that exhibitors with birds value £50 wanted their birds away, and would not run the risk of their getting "pinched."

After this outburst he turned away, but met us again at the door and politely promised to throw me out if I did not get, but he got no further than threatening, for I think I am a bit too "small" for throwing out purposes (nearly 6ft.). Now, sir, I think the officials of the show ought to have some consideration for the public, and stick to the times as printed on their tickets, and as for the party concerned, he might have the decency to admit he was in the wrong, as it created a bad impression amongst several friends who overheard the altercation.

Should there be any answer to this I will append my name and address in full in reply.

Further Hints on How to Keep Them.

Sir,—Mr. T. W. Tooney's article on the keeping of Parrots, and how to derive pleasure in keeping them as pets makes very interesting reading, and I think if most fanciers knew how lovable Parrots can be, many more would be kept in our homes.

I have kept Parrots (mostly greys) for a number of years, and at present have one just like the Grey Mr. Tooney writes about. But, strange to say, it is my wife he is fondest of, and she can make him do or say almost anything, but he is not particularly fond of gentlemen. He is allowed out of his cage every day, and insists on getting out every night before going to sleep to fondle round my wife's neck and kiss her. He is a great talker, and asks for almost anything he wants. We feed him on Spratt's Parrot mixture, but we never leave the water in his cage, as I believe the reason of so many parrots dying soon after they are bought is drinking too much water, which brings on diarrhœa. Once or twice a day is often enough to give a drink, and tea or milk is better than water in my opinion.

If you find the bowels loose there is nothing better than a small piece of powdered chalk in the drinking water (or tea). Fruit is very good for them, and, like Mr. Tooney, we always give ours a piece of stick to play with. Never give meat, cooked or raw, of any sort, as when "Polly" once has tasted meat he soon starts plucking out his feathers, the ends of which contain an oil which he likes after getting the taste of meat, and this is a very difficult habit to break off. "Polly" likes a good deal of petting and talking to, and if Parrot lovers would spend a little time daily speaking to their birds they would soon have their reward.

The price paid for a Parrot is not always a criterion of the best way to get one that will make a pet; I bought mine eight years ago for 12s. 6d., and honestly would not take twenty pounds for him to-day. Paying attention to his wants, talking to him, good plain food, not too much to drink, plenty of exercise, teaching him to come out of his cage, and avoiding draughts and cold will make "Polly" worth much more than you pay for him.

I have a Yorkshire Terrier bitch, and "Polly" and she are great pals, and are often on my wife's arms together, "Polly" calling her by name, and telling her to go to her basket. If any fancier is paying a visit to Inverness I would be pleased to show "Polly" to him, and he will be surprised at what the bird can say and do.

Parrots are very quick at learning a tune when whistled to them. Ours can whistle several, and imitate cats and birds' calls so well that sometimes we think it is the real thing. I enjoyed reading Mr. Tooney's article, as it helps to make the good points of "Polly" known, and I only hope my endeavour to tell your readers about ours will bring more articles or letters. Like Mr. Tooney, I also am a lover of cage birds of all kinds, and have a bird house in my garden, though my chief love is for the "Wee Gems" and Mules, Goldfinches, etc.

I have been fairly successful in breeding youngsters this year, and for anything I know about Parrots and birds I have to thank Mr. Arthur's book on Parrots and Cage Birds for my interest in them. I hope other lovers of Parrots will give us the benefit of their experiences in keeping Parrots as pets.

The Pros and Cons of In-breeding.

The Highway to Success.

Sir,—I have been very much interested of late with the letters, etc., appearing week by week in your valuable paper Cage Birds, and especially on inbreeding. I keep a few pairs of Yorkshires for a profitable hobby, and my experience is that if one wants to be among the firsts and specials one must not introduce fresh blood into one's stud any more than he can help it; if so he will drop behind in points that perhaps he has been years in making.

If a fancier has half a dozen pairs, and works them the right way, he will have no need of new blood for many years. Some say don't breed too close, but I have found that if you want a certain quality in your birds you have sometimes to pair father and daughter to get it, and in that way you will get everything that goes to make a good Yorkie. But one must know what he is doing in regard to pedigree; he should keep from year to year his stud book, and be able to trace each bird's parentage back to many generations if required.

With a little spare time, and these few details attended to, no one has any need to be afraid that it is not possible for him to put an ideal bird on the show bench. Many have come out of little rough wooden houses in back-yards to go to adorn the show bench by the side of those who came from more elaborate places, and have held their own and more than that. What cheers a poor man more than, when unpacking his birds, to find a cage or two with the highest honours on them? He is delighted, and customers are very numerous afterwards. They want a cock or hen from such a pair, or from such a bird, but my advice is to look around and see if such a bird can be spared or not. Oftentimes it will pay better to let the said bird remain in the flight for twelve months unused. Then sometimes they get the bird they require from you and put it up with one of their own; this often turns out a failure, and they wonder why it is. The fact is they have not been properly paired. What one should do is to get a pair matched for breeding, put himself into the fancier's hands, pay as much as he is able, and then he will have a foundation to build upon.

There are other minor points to be dealt with which are too numerous for me to give in detail here, about the management, feeding, cleaning, cages, position of house, green and egg food, etc., but anyone who wants to get on with this "perfect gentleman of the Canary family" should insist on getting Cage Birds every week, as there he will find much to help him on the highway to success. Then there is Battye's work on the subject, which every Yorkie fancier should have beside him.

An Objection to Noms de Plume.

Sir,—I am afraid your correspondent Invicta is too closely related to Mr. C. A. House. Anyhow, I do not intend to answer any one that has to get behind the wall of a nom de plume before he can fire. If "Invicta" wishes to have a go at me let him come out into the open, and I will discuss anything with him on Canary breeding, but please leave out white mice, cavies, cats, rabbits, poultry, pigeons, and all four-footed animals. I notice one of your correspondents says he has thought of trying inbreeding, but has refrained from doing so; my advice to anyone in this mind is, go on thinking, but don't do it.

J. Bastock.

[There seems to be a suggestion here that "Invicta" and Mr. C. A. House are identical, and it may be as well to say that Mr. House has no idea of the proper name of our correspondent "Invicta."—Editor.]

A Nightingale that Missed the Moult.

Still Singing and a Prize Winner.

Sir,—Just a brief reply to Mr. O. Puck's letter respecting my Nightingale.

I am afraid I cannot add much to my former letter of Oct. 28, except to say that it is literally correct. My bird has not yet moulted, his condition is very satisfactory, and he was awarded 2nd at Barrow Show this week.

He has sung with the utmost freedom during the present week. Mr. Puck asks when he commenced his song. As far as I can recall he began about last Christmas, and on New Year's Day, during the festivities at my home, he sang almost viciously, and from then up to now he has been at it more or less, hardly ever missing a day.

My Skylark, now moulting, was singing at 1.30 this morning in the gaslight, and this is a common occurrence; he and the 'Gale often have a duel of song, and the least excitement, for instance, the rustling of paper, often sets the 'Gale away.

He is a most intelligent bird, and is to be seen at my house in Manchester by anyone who cares to give me a call, but, as Mr. Puck says, they "do nothing invariably," and he may suddenly have a spell of silence and refuse to sing, or he may not; one cannot promise.

Should Rarity Alone Win?

Sir,—Will you allow me to make a very strong protest against the prineiple suggested in the latter part of Mr. Rattigan's letter re his Pied Flycatcher at Clapham? Of course, as an outsider I do not wish to meddle with the question of how his bird was treated at the show, etc., but what I take exception to is the idea that a rare bird should always win over commoner species, without regard to any other consideration. This is an idea which is only too general, and to my mind it is mainly responsible for the fact that, while the keepers of British number hundreds in every decently sized town, the exhibitors are only few in number, and pretty generally confine themselves to those kinds which usually get a class of their own or similar kinds, and consequently do not suffer from this sort of thing. It seems to me quite obvious that if the owners of the commoner kinds are to have no chance whatever they will cease showing, and the same will apply to species that are only moderately rare, until there are no entries except such extremely rare kinds as to preclude any possibility of a good entry.

I will freely admit that the showing of the beautiful and interesting birds should be encouraged by every possible means, but would it not be better to give good specials for them rather than to introduce methods that do away with that fair even chance for everyone which is the very essence of all forms of competition?

There is another point that should be remembered too, viz., that while an ordinary specimen of a rare kind can usually be obtained without much difficulty at a price, an exceptionally good bird of a commoner variety sometimes cannot be obtained at any price whatever, and the latter is in a way the greater rarity of the two. Of course, I am only protesting against the general principle; the question of whether this particular bird was in good feather or no is another matter altogether. Thanking you for the help you have given me in expressing my views in the press.

A Fancier's Bad Luck.

Nearly Yellowhammer Hybrids, and Nearly Young Starlings.

Sir,—I have read with great interest the letters appearing in Cage Birds about the breeding of Hybrids, for I have had some attempts at breeding them, but have never been lucky enough to succeed. I had a really tame cock Yellowhammer, one that would take a mealworm from my fingers, and follow me all over the cage for it. In the winter I kept him in the kitchen at night, and when the gas was alight he would sing his well-known "A little bit of bread and no cheese" to his heart's content.

I put him with a rich yellow Yorkshire hen about Christmas, leaving a partition between them. I managed to get the hen to partake of insectile food with some egg in it, and the Bunting followed suit. As the warm weather came on I drew the partition, and they were soon on friendly terms with each other. After a time, I noticed the hen building in the nest pan, and she finished off by lining the nest with feathers which she plucked off the Bunting's breast. She laid a clutch of four eggs, and the Bunting at night would perch on the nest pan as if on guard over the hen. These eggs, however, turned out to be clear.

Nothing daunted, the hen went again to nest, and this time I saw the Bunting in the act of treading her, so I had great hopes. Another four eggs were laid, and about the tenth day I tested them, and found two were clear, and the other two were full eggs. The next morning I went to feed them as usual, and found all the eggs gone. The mice had had them, as they overran the room at the time, it being an old room with a lot of cracks round the skirting. Some of the shells were on the floor, and pieces of them showed they had chicks in them.

I know it was not the cock, as I partitioned him off when I found they were good eggs, and I had seen mice coming out of the cage at night. So that ended the chance of breeding Yellowhammer Canary Hybrids, as the season was about over.

Alas for the hopes of next season; the Yellow Bunting was found on his back one morning in winter, though he had appeared in perfect health the day before.

About three years ago I had a pair of Starlings, which I kept in a small avairy to themselves. What a treat Starlings are in an aviary to themselves! I think they are ideal birds, and very cleanly, for they have a splash regularly every morning, no matter what weather. I fitted these up with a nest box, in which they would sleep at night.

I gave them bits of wool, string, straw, etc., and they took a lively interest in them. They soon carried these to the nest box, and made a good nest after their own untidy style. The hen laid one egg, which I left in, hoping she would complete the clutch. The next day I saw nothing of her, and as she never put in an appearance the day after, I looked in the box, and found she was dead. On examining her I found she had died of egg binding, as she had an egg she couldn't pass.

I put the egg she passed safely in a nest of wild Starlings with four eggs, and the one I put in made five. I visited this nest every three days or so, and in the end five birds hatched out, and all were reared. This shows that if I had had any luck I should have reared some Starlings.

I am up the line now, so of course have not the chance of keeping anything now, but you may depend I shall if I have the luck to get back go in for them again, and try my hand at foreigners as well.

Cage Birds is sent out to me regularly. I get it just a week after it is issued, and look forward to its coming nearly as much as a parcel from home, and that is saying a deal. Will close, wishing the old paper the success it so well deserves, as it is doubly interesting now the price is raised.

Excuse the mud, but France is like a sea of mud now the rain has started.

Alfred W. Ward.

Why Not Educate the Children?

Sir,—Having only started in the fancy this year, and being an absolute noviee, I decided to visit Liverpool show, to see what Canaries were really like. My motives were twofold; I wanted to find out which variety suited my fancy, and which would suit my pocket. Some friends had advised Norwich, some Yorkshires, and others Borders or British, and I was in a quandary which to adopt, so I started off to see my first show—a real green-horn.

I entered St. Martin's Hall, and paid my modest sixpence plus the penny tax. At the same time I was offered a catalogue, price sixpence, which I refused, thinking it unnecessary, but when I got in the show room, and saw each cage marked class so and so, I was glad to turn back for a catalogue to help me to separate the varieties.

What colour! What a twittering and chirping from hundreds of birds! Where must I start? I wanted to see them all at once, but seeing people walk up one row and down another I soon followed suit. The first were Norwich, big fine birds, and splendid colour, nearly red, and these were the birds for me, but I afterwards found out that the colour was artificial, and they lost favour with me from that moment. Next came rows of Yorkshires, fine upstanding birds, but, alas, these were also colour fed. The next lot, Borders, were in their natural garb, little gems, and far more becoming than the previous sets of bigger birds. The sight was worth walking to Liverpool to see, and I had come 36 miles by train. I stayed gazing a long while here, and I would have purchased some there and then, but I was but a novice, and I must get a little experience first; then "Borders" would grace my cages still in the making.

I passed on to the British Birds and Hybrids (my catalogue said), and I was completely at sea here. I asked the name of one big bird, and was told it was a Hawfinch. I never knew we had such birds, for I had to ask the names of nearly all. My questions were freely answered, and I should have liked to ask more, but I did not want to give the show away. However, I had been through the room by this, and just having nice time to get my train back home, I departed, having a last look at those Borders, the delight of my eye.

It was a delightful outing, and praise is due to the management for the way in which the room was laid out, and to the exhibitors who tend these birds; they were a credit to their proud owners. If it were possible to get outsiders (non-fanciers) to shows like this, they would take up the hobby of bird-keeping very soon, and herein lies the solution of capturing the German Canary trade; get everybody doing it.

Another thought struck me. Why cannot day schools have a lesson once a week on British Birds, and how to know them? I am sure it would rub out a dull hour, besides being an education. Novices then would be few and far between.

C. H. Pratt.

Eighteen Young from One Pair in a Season.

Sir,—After reading the latter of R. W. Robbins in Cage Birds of Oct. 28, in which he says he reared ten young Canaries from one pair on his first attempt, I should like him to know that I also took up Canary breeding this year, without any book whatever, until I started taking in Cage Birds ten weeks ago.

From one pair of Norwich I have reared 18 young birds, all strong and healthy, from 22 eggs, in five sittings. In the first 14 birds I have ten cocks and four hens. The youngest four are now one month old, too young to tell the sex yet.

I might add that the information in Cage Birds must be invaluable to all lovers of caged birds, and I now have Battye's book on Yorkshires, which every novice ought to have.

I was very interested in your article, "Famine in Canaries," and next year I contemplate breeding from about twenty pairs, and hope to find a good market.

(Miss) H. L. Smith.

[The fact that a novice breeder has got eighteen young birds from one pair in a season shows what can be done with Canaries. All the same, only a novice would take five nests of young from one pair, and our correspondent, now that she has started getting information, will learn that two, or at most three, nests are all that should be allowed to a hen in any one season.—Editor.]

Rearing Young Birds Without Egg.

Chicken Meal as a Perfect Food.

Sir,—In reply to "Saxon's" enquiries as to rearing young birds without egg-food, I beg to give my experience of this season, and will take the questions as he has put them.

The kind of food used? Best chicken meal.

Did the hens feed readily upon it and were the usual number of young reared? The hens fed splendidly on it. I tried it on two nests with four young ones in each, at the same time, and I did not lose one. I state this, as it was really my first season at breeding.

Did the young ones thrive after leaving the nest; and how did the percentage of losses compare with other seasons? The young were thriving finely when I left home, and I have not lost one of them.

Was there any loss of size in the young? No.

I think I have answered the questions, and will now tell how I prepared the food. I got the chicken meal, put some milk on it at night, and let it soak until next morning, when it was nice and mealy. I then put it into the soft food pots and sprinkled it with a little sugar, and it was a treat to see the hens go for it.

When the young were ready for leaving the hens I put all the eight of them into a flight and gave them nothing else up to the time when I left home, on being called up. The birds were then six weeks old, and I had had no trouble with the young as to their feeding; they would gather round the food almost like a clutch of chickens.

When I was called up and had to leave my breeding in the hands of my wife and father-in-law, they started with egg-food, as they felt they could do better with it than with the meal, but if I had only been at home long enough I would have used meal only, as the young ones had done so well on it.

As to loss of size, I might add that the birds experimented on have made my biggest ones. I have a friend who has fed and moulted all his birds on this meal, and mixed his colour-food with it for two breeding seasons, and I can say that he has bred some really tip-top birds.

In comparing the difference in cost of feeding, the meal is a long way the cheaper, and if I am fortunate enough to come through the war I shall most certainly use chicken meal for breeding.

Soldier Members to Exhibit Free.

Meeting, Amalgamated Musicians' Hall, Napiershall Street, October 31, Mr. P. Thom presiding over a good attendance. Annual show business was the principal business, and all arrangements are well in hand. Quite a host of specials were promised. Agreed to allow members who have been called to the colours to exhibit their birds free at this show. Special meeting, Nov. 13, at above address, at 8; important show business, etc. —P. Houston, Sec.

PONTYPOOL C.B.S.

Meeting headquarters, Mr. J. Watkins presiding. Sec. read a mass of correspondence, and stated he had been successful in arranging with judge and for hall. Decided to accept the offer of patronage of the Welsh C.B.C. for our open show. Mr. Gameson offered to guarantee two classes, Mr. Lewis one, and Mr. D. R. Smith one. Specials were given by Messrs. E. Morgan, R. Jones, and J. Watkins. Decided that all specials be placed upon open classes unless specially earmarked for members. Members are expected to turn up in strong numbers to take share of work to make show a success. —W. D. Lewis, Sec.

Further reputed Song Thrush-Blackbird Hybrids coming to Town.

Meeting headquarters, "Feathers" Hotel, Great Chapel Street, Westminster, S.W., Oct. 25. Among other business dealt with was a letter from Mr. Anderson, of Darvel, in reference to his claim to have again bred Hybrids from a Song Thrush and hen Blackbird, and, as a member of the club, asking the Committee to allow him to place evidence of the accomplishment before them. The Committee decided to hear the evidence and to have one of the said Hybrids up for inspection at a special meeting to be held at the Feathers Hotel on Nov. 16.—E. Stephens, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW AND W. COUNTIES.

Meeting, Nov. 4, Good Templars' Halls, Ingram Street, Mr. Wm. Dinwoodie presided over a fair attendance. Treas. read financial statement, showing a credit balance of over £4. Mr. Dinwoodie (Bridgeton) was admitted a member. Decided to issue a catalogue of annual show, Jan. 27. Mr. J. H. Adam gave an exhibition of washing Canaries, which was appreciated, and it was ultimately agreed to have a washing competition at next meeting, Dec. 2, for prizes presented by Messrs. Anderton, Findlay, Pettigrew, Adam; and unless six competitors, no competition. Intending competitors to furnish their own bird and utensils and material required. It is to be hoped that members will do their best to make the competition a success. Schedule for annual show will be ready next meeting, Dec. 2, Good Templars' Hall, 122, Ingram Street, at 7.—J. H. Adam, Hon. Sec.

S. SHIELDS (Always Ready).

Meeting, Nov. 1, Hunt's shop, Ocean Road, Mr. J. S. Dixon presiding over a very large attendance. Decided, with respect of the two handsome bowls presented to our society that the T. T. Anderson bowl go to the best young bird bred by a member, and J. F. Curry bowl to be competed for by members who have never exhibited before 1916. We agreed to have a guessing competition, the proceeds to buy stationery, etc., for the soldiers who visit the institute where we hold our show. Mr. Armstrong is giving the bird, and Mr. Bird the cage. Stewards were elected for our show, Nov. 18, at St. Thomas' Institute. New members elected on Oct. 18: Messrs. J. Grey, J. Potts, and J. T. Conchman. L. Simpson, R. McVay. In the washing of birds, Mr. T. R. Baker washed the first bird and Mr. Armstrong the other two. Members watched with keen interest, and at the close of meeting a hearty vote of thanks was given to Messrs. Baker and Armstrong, which ended a very pleasant meeting.—J. W. Watson, Sec.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Membership advanced from 16 to 70.

Meeting, Nov. 2, Shields Cafe, Bigg Market. Mr. Espie presided over a good number. Letter read from from Mr. Heggie (Glasgow) in reference to his birds arriving too late for judging but not putting any blame on the society for it. He thanked the sec. and officials for delaying judging and making enquiries at the station. The birds were put in the train 6 p.m. Friday and did not arrive at the show until after 11 on Saturday. The case was broken completely in two, but the birds arrived none the worse for their rough handling, and we all hope Mr. Heggie will get compensated by the railway company. The sec. reported that the show had proved the least expensive of any held for years, and in spite of the amusement tax about £28 will be handed over to the Red Cross fund. A vote of thanks was passed to the sec. for his work, but I am sure others have done a great deal of work, and I only take a share of the credit due and I thank all who helped me, especially (Billy) Curry, the Gateshead sec., and T. Hall, who gave me good assistance when I took over the secretaryship. The society had only 16 members when I took over the books, and now we have a membership of over 70, which proves we are coming to ourselves again, and several others promised at the show to join next season. In the report of show the name of Mr. C. G. Petterson, who rendered great assistance as doorkeeper, was omitted. Next meeting, Dec. 7, we have an important item on the agenda.—F. W. Laidlow.

MAIDSTONE F.S.

27th annual show in the Old Tithe Barn, Maidstone, Nov. 3, 4—the most successful annual in the long record of the society. Mr. A. Day, one of the oldest fanciers in the south, acted as sec., efficiently assisted by Mr. E. F. Tadman, and every assistance was rendered by that fine old fancier, Mr. G. Barney (chairman), and a splendid body of committeemen. The show was opened in a felicitous speech by the Mayor, Councillor G. Tyrwhitt Drake, and the attendance, considering the unpropitious weather, was first-class. There were about 100 entries, and quality was excellent. Cup for best bird fell to a typical yellow Yorks. shown by Mr. Cranston. Mr. G. Gardner judged and his awards were well received.

Nor. Col.-Fed. Ck. (8): 1, spl, 2, vhc, hc, Cranston, buff, lovely feather, good shape and head, profuse bottom col., 2nd smart tkd. yell.; 3, res, c, Lynn, buff, rare feather. Hen (8): 1, 3, res, vhc, Cranston, a beautiful yell., correct feather, rich col.; 2, hc, c, Lynn, bonny var. buff. Nor. Cl. Nat. Col. (10): 1, spl, Rhodes, typical, good qual., nice head; 2, Hysted, buff, hardly so nice in head; 3, res, Lynn; vhc, hc, c, Cranston. Tkd., etc. (5): 1, 2, 3, Cranston, two bonny var. birds leading; res, vhc, Hysted. Yorks (11): 1, cup, 2, res, vhc, Cranston, grand team, leader well positioned yell., full of qual.; 3, hc, c, Rhodes. A.O.V. NORWICH CANARIES AT MANCHESTER SHOW.

BY SUB ROSA.

THOSE Norwich fanciers who did not get to the show on Oct. 28 missed the treat of their lives, and a few impressions on the exhibits will, perhaps, give some idea of their excellence to those fanciers who were unable to be present, although we noticed fanciers from far and wide, even to some Welshmen from Dimorphorthecaccklonii.

It is some years now since my first show at Manchester, and no show has been missed in the interim; but at no show have I seen a stock of Norwich equalling in numbers or quality of excellence those which were at this last event—not even at the Scottish National, and the Norwich at the National are "some" stuff.

A Battle of Giants.

The best were there from all districts, Lancashire, Cheshire, the Midlands, and the North, and it is only natural to assume that some well known winners were left out of the cards. Indeed, some of them which were lower down than is their custom seemed to feel their position very keenly, while, conversely, I feel certain I saw the first prize yellow cock wink his other eye and shake his tail like a tame lamb, and, like Maggie in "Hobson's Choice," he "held his husht." Any of the money winners and many of the honour winners could have won at big shows, but when we get a concentration of the country's best, some of them have to take a back seat.

It is no disgrace to be beaten at Manchester, at any time, but the competition was so keen at this show that many birds out of the cards were capable of winning at most shows. Weight seemed to have had a fascination for the judge, but the other essentials in most cases had not been overlooked.

The clear yellows were a good lot, and those fanciers who were disappointed may console themselves with the fact that the 1st Liverpool bird stood cardless—a bird which as an unflighted was the subject of a controversy some years ago. The Midland representative in this class was a good one, while the Accrington winner stood only third, and looked very sulky in consequence.

The clear buffs were absolutely great, 26 of the best. Friend Sam Cook held a strong hand here, and it is remarkable to notice that the prophecy that the Liverpool winner would take some stopping was not fulfilled, for he was stopped by his stable companion here, the old buff, surely "the titbit of the bunch, the gem of purest ray serene." Many very high class specimens were cardless here.

Winners all of a Bunch.

Each of the four leaders in the var. yellow class was worthy of first, and the winner is the well known Crawshaw yellow, a good all-round specimen. The second (Turner) is the equally well known wing mark, the unbeaten unflighted of last year. The third (Thomas) is a regular firebrand—a black-headed one—not a green-marked, be it noted by those fanciers who advise green blood for colour.

Variegated buffs were also extra strong, and Mr. Crawshaw seems still to hold the whip hand here, but I noticed the well-known breast-marked—which was the means of my friend Mr. Allsopp landing himself in trouble at Cardiff—stood second to his stable companion. Both are extra good, and typical of what a show Norwich should be, and surely Solomon in all his glory and war paint was not arrayed like these two.

Twenty-two yellow hens, and a remarkable lot! As an instance of the keenness, I might mention that the Liverpool winner stood hc, while a well-known var. hen (Smith), which has never to my knowledge been out of the money before, was cardless. The winner (Hirst) was a big one with a grand head, second (Brown) was a northern exhibit, and a worthy one full of Norwich properties, also a black-marked one and a hot colour. (Colour producers, please notice.)

Twenty-four buff hens and the Liverpool winner cardless, and Mr. Cook's well-known buff hens relegated to the cards, with tears in their eyes like a widow's pig. Truly a remarkable class. The winner was an amateur's bird (Clayton), the biggest hen I ever saw, good shape and quality of feather, but her body rather dwarfs her head.

The three unflighted classes contained 102 birds. Who said Norwich were deteriorating? Thirty-six unflighted hens, and all good. One would think that such classes as these should be divided into yellows and buffs, and considering that, reckoning the entrance fee at 1s. 6d., the Society made the handsome profit of £4 11s. on these three classes, if the Society will forgive the frankness that is ascribed to Dutch Uncles, I would hint that such a class could have been divided with no loss to themselves and much satisfaction to the exhibitors. There were some remarkable birds in these classes standing cardless, and there is no satisfaction to a judge when he must leave out so many good ones in a class of 36.

Are Judges Overworked?

Apropos of numbers, is it possible for a judge efficiently to handle so many exhibits in the time at his disposal? There are, perhaps, a few birds in a show of such dimensions which are, shall we say, "also rans," and a judge can soon pick them out, but at Manchester the majority are always in the running, and, to do himself and the birds justice, a judge ought to handle every cage and give every bird time to pose and to look its best, and I have wondered if it is possible for a judge to handle 400 birds in the time given him.

I well remember a show at Belle Vue, when the Norwich stood 40 in a class, and I was privileged to witness the judging The particular class which is fresh in my mind was on a top tier, and the judge walked along the row and picked out a likely bird here and there, and if they fluttered he put them back. Those which were acrobatic enough to stick on the perches, or too lazy to move, were carried to the judging table and had a run for their owner's money. The others were not looked at again.

Now I contend that that isn't judging. This particular instance was after lunch, and the judge was tired. A judge, to do himself justice, shouldn't be allowed to get tired, and he should be able to finish before lunch With such an entry it would be politic for a society to call in an auxiliary judge to give a hand.

"HOMING" SONG BIRDS.

REDPOLLS lend themselves well to the special education. I call to mind a pair of these which must have been caught a year before I experimented. On a dull, rainy winter's day, I hung the hen out of doors and set the male free; of course his companion called him back at every attempt he made to fly off. When he had reached the branches of the nearest tree, he, Redpoll-like, hopped about uneasily from bough to bough, incessantly uttering his alarm cry: we-ip, we-ip! called forth by the strangeness of the situation.

Presently he revisited the gravel path and responded to his mate's blandishments by the chattering call-note of the species; it did not take long after that before he had followed her invitation and returned to her cage. A short exchange of courtesies over, he re-entered his own white house for the first time in the open, the twine was pulled, and the pair reunited for the day.

The next day things went quite smoothly, and my Homer Redpoll overcame the severe test of returning from the front of the house, over the roof, to the second floor window at the back. After that he became quite reliable as a Homer.

A Perfect Homing Redpoll Hen.

The hen Redpoll proved a better bird even than her spouse. From the first she showed quite as much attachment to the spot as to her imprisoned consort, whom I, of course, never let out when she took open-air exercise. Even when he was not used as call-bird, she never strayed further away than an old elm tree some fifty yards distant, and could always be found inside her cage at nightfall.

This went on until the first spring-like day in April, when the male bird took French leave, a liberty which I did not begrudge him in the least, only I turned the hen bird into the room aviary for the summer months after he had forsaken her. My ambition to possess healthy Homers of my own training was so far satisfied.

On another occasion a Bullfinch Homer of one year's standing paired with a tame hen which finally built and bred in an adjoining garden, and I hope that sooner or later we shall see the day when house-bred finches will become sufficiently domesticated as to admit of their being treated as Homing Songbirds.

The following extracts from our Nutshell, by Mr. H. J. Fulljames, on the Siskin, Redpoll and Twite will serve, we think, as a fitting conclusion to the foregoing interesting article.—Editor, CAGE BIRDS.

THE REDPOLL AS A "HOMER,' AND HOW TO TRAIN IT.

One of the most delightful branches of the hobby of bird-keeping is the training of birds to return voluntarily to their cages after a spell of liberty in the open-air, and no bird offers such facilities in this direction as the merry little Redpoll. Failure means only the loss of a few pence, and the restoration to liberty of a hitherto captive bird, while success means the possession of an object of interest to oneself and one's friends for months, or, may be, years. "Performing" Redpolls may be bought ready trained, but "Homing" Redpolls must be manufactured for oneself.

Firstly, the bird, from its first coming into one's possession, must be treated with the greatest care and gentleness, so as to familiarize it in every possible way with the person and voice of its owner. Its cage should be of a striking colour, white being the best for the purpose, and the bird should have become used to going in and out of this while still kept in the bird-room.

How to Commence the Training.

For the first experiment out of doors a dull, even wet, winter's day should be chosen, and a second bird of the kind should be hung in proximity to the cage of the one which is about to be experimented with. They will soon show anxiety each to join the other in its cage, and if the door of the one is pulled gently open from a distance by means of a piece of twine, he will soon be found upon the other cage.

From here he will probably soon take a short flight, only to be called back by his confined relative. Of course, failure may immediately result, as the free bird may get so far away as to be out of call. Even at this, hope need not be given up for several days. The call bird and the empty cage should be hung out each day, and the wanderer may return after some considerable time; indeed, instances are not wanting of escaped birds having returned to their owners after having been away sufficiently long to have assisted in producing wild progeny.

If the experiment has been so far successful that the free bird remains in the vicinity, he will be pretty certain to return to his familiar cage as soon as hunger reminds him of the well-spread board therein to be found. To encourage him to enter the open door there should be strewn near the entrance such titbits as those of which he may have proved particularly fond.

As soon as the wanderer has re-entered his cage, the door should be pulled to by the string, and both cages taken indoors for the day. There will afterwards be little risk in repeating the experiment, and after a time the call-bird may be dispensed with, or himself trained in his turn.

When the Homer has become accustomed to return to his cage, it may be placed on the window sill; afterwards, a little way inside, and, ultimately, the bird will go and return to his cage through the open window while the cage is hanging in the ordinary place on the wall.

Siskins as Homers.

Siskins make the best of "Homers," and, like the Redpoll, are sufficiently inexpensive to lend themselves without a prospective heavy loss to the interesting experiment of allowing them their freedom after they have become accustomed to the shelter and good food provided for them in their captivity. In such case there is every prospect of the bird returning to its home for nightly shelter and food.

The directions which are set forth in treating of the Redpoll as a "Homer" apply equally to the Siskin, and should be read as referring to this bird also, and, indeed, to any other bird in respect of which the very interesting experiment may be tried.

With such birds not very much fear need be entertained of their straying at any time of the year, once they have become accomplished Homers; but all the wild birds are in some degree liable to be led away by free relatives of the opposite sex at the approach of the breeding season, and a little discretion at such times is necessary.

Besides this, winter migrants such as the Siskin, should be watched or kept indoors for a while in the early spring, for their migratory instinct may impel them to journey northwards at that season.

Roseate-Cockatoos (Galahs) and Budgerigars At Ninepence Each.

The Rose-breasted Cockatoo, so often sold in this country as an "Australian Grey Parrot," is such a nuisance in its native country that if it were not poisoned, shot, or caught by the thousand, wheat-growing in some parts of the island Continent would be an utter impossibility. For the following particulars of the method of catching these birds we are indebted to an article in "The Emu."

MAX EGGER, during a portion of the year, followed the occupation of bird-trapping; he sent large numbers of Galahs and Warbling Grass-Parrots (Melopsittacus undulatus) to dealers in Sydney, receiving for the former birds about ninepence each, and less for the Budgerigars. He asked me to accompany him and two assistants on a trapping expedition, and I accepted the invitation. My friend explained that if he did not trap the Galahs the birds would be poisoned or shot in thousands, as they were regarded as pests by men on the land.

The trapper's outfit consisted of a waggon surmounted by a large cage, divided into compartments, a jinker (a large vehicle drawn by two horses), nets, stakes, call birds, and so forth. Leaving Jerilderie early one morning, we travelled slowly northward across the plains, and towards sundown entered a farm paddock, where we outspanned for the night. The farmer welcomed us, and said that the "Galahs were eating him out." In the evening nets and poles, bagging, and other articles were carried to a crop paddock, and the trappers soon had everything ready for operations next day.

We were astir before sunrise, for only in the early morning can trapping be carried on with a good chance of success. Each net is controlled by a long rope, and the trapper, crouched behind a screen of bagging against the fence, holds the free end, ready to give a sharp pull at the right moment.

Soon after the eastern sky became flushed with rose-pink, the colour of the Galah's breast, small flocks of the birds came flying toward the paddock from the trees along Yanko Creek. Gradually the size of the flocks increased, till there were thousands of the birds in sight. The call birds, tethered to the nets, "spoke" to those in the air, and presently a flock of about 30 Galahs circled over the net I was watching, and then alighted. The trapper pulled the rope, the poles leaped together, and a babel of harsh cries arose. Eleven birds had been caught, and they were quickly transferred to a box.

A Bag of Eighty-seven.

In the course of an hour the nets were sprung three times, and the tally of captives was 87; this was not considered a particularly good result. The Cockatoos were transferred to the big cage on the waggon, where they huddled on the long bamboo perches. Sulky at first, they soon became resigned to their lot, and ate and drank. In addition to netting the adult birds, the trappers gather nestlings and rear them.

We moved toward fresh fields before noon, and spent the night at a farmhouse. One of the two ladies at the homestead was a lover of wild birds, and had tamed several Galahs without caging them. All day, she said, these birds were away with the flocks, but toward sunset they returned to the homestead, where they remained during the night. I was lucky enough to see three of these tame wild birds early in the morning, and secured photographs of them on their favourite perch.

The trappers, who had been at work before I awoke, reported an albino Galah, which they failed to capture. Max Egger, from a nest in the Jerilderie district, each season for three years in succession, took two albino fledgelings, and reared them all.

Budgerigars by the Thousand.

In very dry seasons Warbling Grass-Parrots travel far south, and small flocks were observed in the summer of 1915 amid the tea-tree at Black Rock on Port Phillip Bay. "Old Bushman," in his charming book, "Bush Wanderings of a Naturalist," mentions this species in the chapter on the ornithology of Port Phillip. "Occasionally, but very rarely, he writes, "a flock of the Budgerigar, or Shell-paroqueet, would pay us a visit; and I recollect, in the middle of the summer, 1854, our gum-trees swarmed with them. They stayed about a month, when they suddenly disappeared, and only an odd straggler or so has been seen in our district."

On the Riverina plains, in a good season, thousands of Budgerigars are captured by the trappers, and the market is glutted, with the result that the birds realise only a few pence apiece. I am a staunch advocate of bird protection, but I cannot truthfully say that trapping has any appreciable effects on either Galahs or Warbling Grass-Parrots.

By J. W. N.

A Series of comprehensive articles, embracing the proper management of all kinds of birds in captivity, their housing, feeding, general management, and diseases. The breeding of species and of Mules and Hybrids, and finally the birds themselves will all be treated of as the series progresses.

DISEASES affecting the respiratory system are often met with in a collection of birds, and are nearly always the result of ignorance and carelessness. In the combating of draughts many exclude all fresh air, with the result that the birds soon show symptoms of disease. The common fault of keeping birds in hot rooms is another sure cause of trouble, but one that may be easily remedied. British birds should always be in an unheated room, summer and winter, and only a few of the foreigners require an artificial temperature. Impure air and a high temperature are the two main causes of all respiratory troubles, and these two conditions must first be changed before internal remedies are used.

Some Common Complaints and Their Remedies.

Colds, fortunately, are not very severe as a rule. The cage should be kept in an even temperature. An aperient should be given and then the bird should be treated as for debility (which see). If the symptoms are severe, equal quantities of oxymel of squills, glycerine, and lemon juice can be given to alleviate them, the dose being half a teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of water. If desired two drops of whisky can be added, this is especially useful if the cold is severe.

Catarrh is an inflammation of the mucous membrane of the respiratory passages, and its result is that the cells which form the natural lubricating secretion are overstimulated, and a watery discharge takes place This is easily seen at the nostrils, and the condition should be immediately treated, as it is apt to become chronic. The nostrils should be washed with glycothymoline, and a drop of glycerine given morning and evening. Parrots are rather subject to this affection, and the secretion hardens round the nostrils. This should be removed, and the same treatment applied, with the dose of glycerine increased to half a teaspoonful.

Bronchitis and pneumonia are usually present concurrently, and may be distinguished from the common cold by the greater degree of prostration and difficulty in breathing. The sufferer must be put into a warm room, the air of which is kept moist by steam from a kettle. Mix an equal quantity of oxymel of squills and glycerine, and add one drop of paregoric to each tablespoonful of the mixture. The dose is half a teaspoonful in the drinking water. In cases where there is great debility a teaspoonful of brandy added to a tablespoonful of hot water should be at hand, and a few drops given direct into the beak every four hours. The diet while the symptoms are severe should consist of bread soaked in hot milk, squeezed free of superfluous moisture, and sprinkled with soft sugar and maw seed. As the patient gets better, great care must be taken to prevent draughts or extremes of temperature, and careful attention should be given to the food which should be of a nourishing order, such as bread and milk once a day, and the staple food for another, with a few live insects, and, in the case of seedeaters, one or two grains of cracked hemp.

Asthma or Chronic Bronchitis.

It is very doubtful if an asthmatic condition in birds is at all similar to that in human beings, namely, a spasmodic contraction of the muscular coats of the smaller bronchial tubes with consequent difficulty in breathing. More probably it is a chronic bronchitis and should be treated on the lines laid down for that disease. It seems very beneficial if the bird is put in an atmosphere of moist heat for a quarter of an hour occasionally, such as that obtained in a properly constructed drying cage, great care of course being taken to see that the cooling off process takes places very gradually. The main treatment consists in giving plenty of fresh air at a moderate temperature.

The complaints mentioned are the principal respiratory diseases and in their treatment it is most important to recognise the value of fresh cool air, both as a preventive and as a means of treatment, in the later stages of convalescence.

Loss of voice, although hardly a disease, is sometimes a great source of trouble with singing birds. The first sign is hoarseness, and, immediately this is recognised, steps to prevent a more serious condition arising should be taken. The vocal organs must have a complete rest for a few days, and to ensure this the cage may be placed in a subdued light, or even covered up if necessary. Mix equal quantities of glycerine and lemon-juice and add four drops of this to the drinking water. A plain diet, with a little bread and milk once a day for a few days is usually all that is necessary.

Maw Seed for Diarrhœa.

Diseases of the digestive system sometimes prove very troublesome, and are responsible for many deaths. The one most often met with is diarrhœa, which is a condition in which the excreta assumes a watery consistency and is increased in amount. It is mostly the result of unsuitable and tainted food or water, so these should be the first to be examined and corrected if necessary. It is very seldom that green food produces diarrhœa if quite fresh, but any that has been allowed to remain in cages for a day or two is a very likely cause. As there is irritation in the intestine a drop of salad oil should be given, and, if dealing with Finches, maw seed is the natural remedy. If the diarrhœa is severe, some of this seed should be crushed and added to a very little powdered bismuth and prepared chalk, the whole being mixed up with egg food and given to the bird in this form.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, &c., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

ROUND THE SHOWS.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

The 5th annual show took place Nov. 3rd and 4th. The historical Cutlers' Hall, which was engaged at great expense, is situated centrally, exceedingly spacious, lofty, and judiciously ventilated, and of nice light, and on the eve of the show quite a multitude of fanciers were as busy as bees, fixing up-to-date 3-tier staging, and seeing to all the details that an open venture necessitates.

The magnificent show room, splendidly lighted by electricity, filled with glorious exhibits, was a sight, indeed, and no wonder the great multitude of visitors (amongst whom were many wounded soldiers) were delighted by the fare provided. The entry of 1125 was upwards of 200 more than last year's number. Treasurer Dr. Craig is one of the greatest assets any Society could possibly possess. An enthusiastic fancier, and a very strong pillar financially, in many other ways his value is greatly esteemed. Chairman "Tom" Dawn, so well known throughout the bird world, works like a Trojan, and Vice-chairman Mr. J. A. T. Woodhall is a splendid deputy, a keen fancier, a worker, ever on the go, and worthy of many kind words. The Committee consists of practical, energetic and enthusiastic fanciers. Each and every one is an expert, and great credit is due to the following: Messrs. G. Fletcher, J. W. Farrow, L. G. A. Kuypers, J. Mace, G. Moore, J. Memmott, J. Milne, T. Ridal, P. Walsh, T. Tow, A. H. Waters, J. H. Richardson, W. H. Spencer and E. Simpson. Secretaries E. C. Job and R. Colton work with precision and promptness, and are courteous to the extreme, and much of the success of the show is undoubtedly due to their endeavours Last, but not least, of the officials comes the Show Manager, Mr. G. Fletcher. What a tremendous amount of work he does to be sure. He is never lacking where help is required, always doing the right thing at the right time. A great acquisition is G.F., in more ways than one. Throughout the entire show the organisation was wonderful.

THE ALL-NIGHT WORKERS.

The stewards, we must not forget them. One and all fulfilled their duties smoothly and correctly, very great credit being due to Messrs. J. H. Waters, T. Ridal, T. Dawn, T. Tow, J. A. T. Woodall, J. H. Richardson, F. Hartley, J. Peace, Roberts, Gifford Moore, J. Memmott, and L. G. A. Kuypers. Unpackers on arrival of exhibits and Saturday night packers for return journey of exhibits were Dr. Hill, Peace, Towers, Spencer, Allen, Linley, Graves, Ridal, Richardson, T. Dawn, J. H. Garnett, superintended by Mr. G. Fletcher. This work was expeditiously and efficiently transacted. All night stewards were Dr. Hill, Messrs. T. Ridal, J. A. T. Woodall, J. H. Richardson, and A. Willoughby, and these are all worthy of the highest praise. Messrs. T. Tow and J. Memmott were busy very early in the mornings, seeding and watering throughout, doing this essential work correctly and thoroughly. Messrs. T. Dawn and G. Fletcher provided drays to fetch and return exhibits to the stations, both drays working all Thursday night. No cases were left on the station platforms, therefore no birds were apt to get chilled.

Sales were excellent, upwards of £100, and the gate takings amounted to a good sum. Messrs. T. Dawn and Dr. Craig each were responsible for 400 tickets sold, previous to the show opening. Catalogues with awards were on sale early on the Friday, those ordered by away fanciers posted off same day.

The judges were Messrs. W. Cowgill (Yorkshires), J. C. Barnes (Norwich), J. Robson (Crests), J. Frostick (Brit. and For.), and their awards were well received.

Amongst the many well-known fanciers present were Messrs. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield), the well known judge and breeder of Norwich and Yorkshires, H. H. Towers (Keighley), President of the Y.U.C.B. Soc., Mrs. Montague Scott (London), the enthusiastic Crest exhibitor, T. Heath, and J. W. Ramsden (London), both world renowned, Bernard Steel (Sheffield), of Crest fame, J. Radley (Skelmanthorpe), Mr. and Mrs. L. Dykes, L. Ogden, J. Chittenden, J. Thornton, A. Haigh, T. Bennett (Bradford), S. Cook (Manchester), E. Fox (Long Eaton), J. Holmes and J. Boaler (Nottingham), D. Hunter (Scarboro'), J. E. Conway (Sec., Gainsbro'), J. Potts and J. Simpson (Worksop), A. Hobson (Sec. Sheffield C.B.S.), J. Sissons (Sec. Walkley S.C.), F. Jones (Chairman Sheffield C.B.S.), J. Warrender (Wombwell C.B.S., Sec.), W. Oxley (Treasurer Sheffield C.B.S.), C. Snead (Bradford), and a host of others. A huge gathering of the clans.

The patronage of the following specialist clubs was in evidence, bringing together a galaxy of talent: Y.U.C.B.S., Y.C.C., C.M.Y.C.C., G.C.A., N.G.M.Y.C.C., N.P.C., O.N.P.C., C.C.C., N,B,B,M,-C. and F.B.C.

AMONG THE BIRDS.

Yorkshires were a treat to observe. Lovely quality, wonderful length, straight as rushes, and stylish to a degree were many that one came across. The section provided many studies. Glorious birds were the cl. yell cock (L. Dykes), unflighted yell. hen (J. Thomas), unflighted buff hen, rose bowl winner (G. Snead), and marked buff cock (H. H. Towers). Dr. Craig took three firsts in the clnn. marks with a trio of eye-openers. Mr. L. Dykes' noted yellow marked cock, "Dreadnought," was down somewhat, and stood 2nd to a very fine marked cock owned by Mr. L. Hodgson, senr.

Norwich made a magnificent display. For type, quality, colour and substance the most fastidious must have been more than satisfied. Glorious specimens were to be observed in many of the classes, competition being as keen as "Coleman's." We did not envy the task set Mr. Barnes to separate such superb specimens. "Knock outs" were the cl. buff cock (S. Cook), ticked yell. cock (W. N. Turner), unflighted buff cock (T. Peters), and the unflighted var. buff hen (W. Crawshaw). Mr. J. Livingstone stood first in unflighted yell. cocks with a model of a clear, not a monster, but a demon; 2nd, also a stormer, owned by Mr. T. Wright, but for a little deficiency in tail most likely would have won.

Novice Yorks. and Norwich contained many quite capable of doing well amougst the "upper ten." Grand exhibits were benched by Messrs. F. Potts, P. Taylor, A. Taylor, H. Lodge, and G. H. Fisher (Yorks.), R. Dickenson, A. Smith, Jas. Rushton, T. Wallwork, F. Hammond, and W. Twells (Norwich).

In the Yorks. and Norwich Greens many well-known winners faced the music. Gems were put down by Messrs. T. Rowlands (4 lots, etc.) in Yorks., and F. Handley, E. Ball and J. Walker (Norwich). The response to this section was very meagre, 19 in 8 classes, and we heard the classes would have to drop out if not better supported.

Wonderful birds were to be seen in the Crest and C.B. section, and we question whether a choicer lot have ever been on view at this annual. The classification being so good, and the Crest Club's specials being offered, stormers were expected, and stormers we saw. Probably the finest collection ever seen in Sheffield, not only odd good ones, but good ones all through the section. Pride of place must be given to the buff marked wings D.C. owned by Mrs. Montague Scott. The crest as large as a crown piece, delightfully radiated, thickly thatched, correct centre, and magnificent droop. Another great exhibit put down by this lady was a marked buff Crestbred cock, a giant, with heaps of grand quality feather, massive width of skull, marvellous length of head covering, lashed to perfection. The team of birds shown by this lady enthusiast were staged perfectly, and her wins were, 4 firsts, 4 seconds, 1 third, 1 fourth, 2 vhc, and 1 c, with 14 entries, an achievement. Mr. Bernard Steel (Sheffield) staged in faultless condition a magnificent yellow green pied wing D.C., the best we have seen for many a long day. Mr. Geo. Colledge won in the 1916 class for Crests, with a buff var. D.C. of a very meritorious description, well up in substance, abundance of rich feather, crest grand right through; with luck should make a name; claimed at £25. Other exquisite specimens were put down by Messrs. W. Radley and Son, F. Peace, G. Dobson, J. Broad and J. Memmott.

Cinnamons were few but good. The representatives of Mr. W. H. Taylor from far away Sydney practically cleared the deck. Pity the competition was not keener, so as to have allowed his birds to have exhibited their true worth. Certainly a grand team.

Hybrids were not so meritorious as was to have been expected here. Still, one or two were really "top hole." Mr. Robt. Heggie (Glasgow) sent down his noted buff Goldie-Canaries, cl. and mkd., and took 1st and 2nd, both being gems, and greatly admired. Mr. R. D. Parlett won in the Darks with a superb yell. Goldf.-Can. The Greenie-Bullie shown by Mr. W. P. Campbell was real good, and deserved its win. Mr. S. T. Oldham won well with a lovely yell. Siskin-Canary in the pink.

The thirteen classes provided for British birds yielded a magnificent total of 174 entries, a little over an average of 13 per class. When it is noticed that men like Messrs. P. Walsh, H. J. Chick, W. Francis, W. H. Raven, Dr. M. Wilson, and R. D. Parlett had out some of their cracks, it will be seen that the quality was of the best, and the competition the keenest; in many of the classes two sets of winners could have been found without difficulty, and many grand birds had perforce to stand cardless.

A VETERAN CHAFFINCH.

Amongst the many remarkable specimens on view, Mr. P. Walsh's winning Chaffinch scored its 100th first prize; this bird has been in its owner's possession no less than 12 years, and looks fit to win many more honours; its marvellous record includes wins at the Crystal Palace and all leading shows. Dr. M. Wilson's charming Meadow Bunting was marked "wrong class." Although the bird has won numerous prizes elsewhere under other judges in British classes, that was no reason why, as the judge explained, he should award a prize to what was purely a Continental species, therefore he promptly marked it "w.c." The class for Small Insectivorous was a regular eye-opener, probably the best ever seen at a provincial show, containing no less than 12 different species, and not a duffer among them.

Foreign birds were not so numerous as they might have been, but this section always has, and always will continue to be dependent on strong local effort, and with so many of our best exhibitors now serving in H.M. Forces, it was perhaps too much to expect a large entry, but some gems of the first water were on view, thanks to Messrs. Colton and Dawn, who exhibited some exceedingly rare Parrakeets, including the New Zealand Red-fronted, which has not been seen in this country for quite 15 years. The judging generally was an arduous task, being somewhat delayed at the commencement, owing to late arrivals, and with the necessity of waiting to get full classes, was not finished until 4 o'clock, by which time the light, none too good throughout the day, was well on the wane.

SPECIAL WINNERS.

The splendid silver trophy presented by Mr. H. H. Towers (Keighley) for best 1916 Yorks., went to Mr. G. Snead with a magnificent unflighted buff hen. Mr. Bernard Steel's (Sheffield) silver cup, for Crests and C.B. (unflighted) was won by Mr. Geo. Colledge with his buff var. D.C., a real stormer, claimed at catalogue price, £25. Silver medal given by Mr. J. C. Barnes for best bird in Classes 30 to 53, went to S. Cook for his noted cl. buff Nor. cock, and the one for most points went to Mr. W. Crawshaw, who staged a grand team of birds. Ramsden's specials for best feds: Yorks, Dr. Craig; Nor., S. Cook; A.O.V., J. T. Livine. Crested Club specials: Best old Crested cock, Mrs. Montague Scott; hen, Colledge; C.B. cock, Steel; hen, Dobson; 1916 Crest, Colledge; C.B., Radley and Son; yell. Crest, Mrs. Montague Scott; C.B. Colledge. Norwich P.H.C. specials: Champ, best 2nd, Cook; best 3rd and 4th, Fox; best vhc, Peters. Amateurs, best 3rd, Rushton; best 4th, Hammond; best vhc, Parvin.

Sectional most points: Champ Yorks: 1, Dykes; 2, Hirst; 3, Dr. Craig. Nov.: 1, Potts (F.); 2, Hamlyn; 3, Lodge. Green Yorks: 1, Rowlands; 2, Richardson. Green Nor.: 1, Handley; 2, Ball. Champ. Nor.: 1, Crawshaw; 2, Cook; 3, Turner. Nov.: 1, H. Rushton; 2, J. Rushton; 3, Dickenson. Clnn.: 1, W. H. Taylor; 2 and 3 equal, Law and Varley. Champ. Crest and C.B.: 1, Mrs. M. Scott; 2, Steel; 3, Colledge. Novice: 1, Norwood; 2, Whyatt. Brit. Hard and Soft.: Walsh. Hard: 1, Walsh; 2, Raven; 3, Parlett. Soft: 1, M. Darlow; 2, W. Hailstone. Hyb.: 1, Heggie; 2, Oldham. Foreign B.C. medal: Colton and Dawn. Points: 1, Colton and Dawn; 2, F. Howe; 3, Baxby. Most entries: Colton and Dawn. Best true pair (large): Colton and Dawn; (small), do. Most entries: Colton and Dawn.

MR. W. COWGILL'S CLASSES.

CHAMP. YORKS, CL., ETC. (16): 1, Dykes, straight as a rush, rare length, lovely back, perfect wing carr., feathered like a Java, hot col., gem; 2, Bennett, superb qual., rattling pos. and length, well on leg, close on the heels of winner; 3, Dr. Craig, lengthy, superior feather, stands like a guardsman, plenty of leg; 4, H. Bingham and Furniss, capital feather, fine length, bit wild, which told against it; vhc, Crawhall; c, Heggie. BUFF (20): 1, Lunn, sweetly moulded, A1 qual. and col., rattling back, well filled, magnificent wing carr., pipe tail; 2, Dr. Craig, smooth as marble, straight as a gun barrel, richly fed, very lengthy, full of style, must have pressed; 3, Helliwell, capital feather and col., smooth as wax, straight and lengthy, clever legs, close up; 4, Dykes, lovely salmon tint, tight as a Java, rare pos. and length; vhc, Thomas; hc, Heggie; c, Price. TKD. YELL. (8): 1, Dykes, mkd. wing, ablaze, beautiful pos., very lengthy, full of swagger, best of backs, gem; 2, Heggie, mkd. wing and head, longest in class; rich qual. and col., well on leg, not quite the outline or character; 3, Farrall, mkd. cheek, stands well, A1 qual., pale col.; 4, c, Spencer, mkd. wing and cheek, capital feather and col., very lengthy and full of style, might have gone up; vhc, Hirst; hc, Hammond. BUFF (11): 1, A. Radley, mkd. wing, stands well, superior feather, nice col., good back and wing carr., plenty strong enough; 2, Dykes, mkd. wing, better col., A1 qual., rattling pos. and length, full of style, our choice; 3, Dr. Craig, mkd. wing, for qual., col., pos. and cond. all one need desire, wee bit shorter, yet a beauty; 4, Crawhall, mkd. wing, pale col., well clothed, shows nicely; vhc, Hartley; hc, Taylor; c, Dyson. YELL. HEN (15) 1, Dykes, mkd. wing, not a feather wrong, magnificent pos., lovely expression, real charmer; 2, Snead, richly fed and beautifully clothed cl., fine pos and style, shows to perfection, hardly so lengthy; 3, Helliwell, mkd. head, more length, good col. and feather, stands well; 4, Radley, tkd head, straight, smooth as a bottle, A1 col., very; vhc, Spencer; hc, Crawhall; c, Heggie. BUFF (22) Bevy of beauties: 1, Myers and Thornton, cl., as though chiselled out of marble, perfect pos., lovely expression of head, well filled back, grand wings and tail; 2, Dykes, cl., straight, superb feather, nice length, good legs, capital wing carr., just beaten in col.; 3, F. Taylor, cl., tight as wax, very fine length, shows to perfection, bit low on leg, yet good one; 4, Thornton and Robertshaw, capitally fed cl., graud head and neck, neat right through, close up; vhc, Spencer; hc, Bray; c, Crawhall. UNFLIG. YELL (32) Rare class; easily two sets of winners could have been selected: 1, Helliwell, cl., very lengthy and slim, good in feather and col., nice pos. and style; 2, Bennett, mkd. wings and head, red hot, stands perfectly, rare length, fine head expression, best of back, very charming wing carr., clever legs, our choice; 3, Dr. Craig, beautifully feathered cl., straight as a rush, smooth as a bottle, well on leg, good 2nd we thought; 4, Sharpe, thigh tick, capital feather and col., stands well, nice carr. of flights, neat tail, not the length; vhc, P. Hirst; hc, A. Hirst; c, Snead. BUFF (30) Topping lot: 1, Dykes, mkd. wing and breast, best of pos., superh feather and col., rare length, stylish; 2, P. Hirst, cl., straight as a pencil, feathered like box, wonderful length, shows to perfection, gem, and close up; 3, Clegg, mkd. wing and head, for style, qual., pos. and col. all one need desire, not of the longest but of the very smartest, worth its place; 4, Amblers, wonderful length, A1 qual., stands well, put down in fine fettle; vhc, Bingham and Furniss; hc, Middleton; c, Spencer. UNFLIG. YELL. HEN (29): 1, Thomas, cl., marvellous merit, hard to find fault with, charming; 2, P. Hirst, cl., rare feather, capital pos. and length, lovely outline, staged to the moment, pressed hard; 3, Bingham and Furniss, warmly fed cl., grand feather, delightful pos. and length, very stylish, good 3rd; 4, Dykes, nicely clothed cl., neat head and neck, good body, wings and tail, not quite so stylish; vhc, Bray; hc, Towers; c, Heggie. BUFF (27): 1 and rose bowl, G. Snead, cl., one of the most typical and most stylish hens we have seen for many a day, should do some winning; 2, vhc, Hirst, cl., wedge shaped, smooth as box, straight as a rush, full of col., grand style, wee bit shorter; 3, Middleton, cl., slim and lengthy, A1 qual. and col., good pos., clever legs; 4, Thornton and Robertshaw, cl., not one of the longest, but in almost every other point perfect, good 4th; hc, Bennett; c, Spencer. EVEN, ETC., YELL (14): 1, L. Hodgson, very lengthy var., beautiful feather and col., neat and narrow, stands like a rush, twists a little front of neck, yet grand; 2, Dykes, mkd wings and eyes, his noted "Dreadnought," bit down at judging time, or might have won; 3, J. Taylor, mkd. wings, head and tail, teeming with qual., richly fed, slashing pos. and style, shade shorter; 4, Clegg, mkd. wings and head, straight as a rush, smooth as wax, A1 col., again bit shorter; vhc, Towers; hc, Bennett; c, Middleton. BUFF (10): 1, Towers, mkd. wings and eyes, feathered to perfection, magnificent col., lengthy and slashing pos., gem; 2, Dykes, light var., hardly so rich in col. or so lengthy, yet full of true characteristics; 3, Hartley, mkd. wings and eyes, superb feather, good back and wing carr., nice length, beaten in style; 4, Amblers, mkd. wings and eyes, wedge shaped, tight as wax, very stylish, not quite so lengthy; vhc, Heggie; hc, Radley; c, Hall. YELL. HEN (11): 1, Gledhill, mkd. wings and eyes, delightful col., fine pos. and length, bonny; 2, Dykes, mkd. wings and eyes, ran a close race, staged in fine form; 3, Chittenden, mkd. wings and eyes, stands well, capitally gowned, rich col., neat wings and tail, little shorter; 4, Midgley, mkd. wings, head and tail, full of style; vhc, Snead; hc, Middleton; c, Heggie. BUFF HEN (13): 1, Towes, mkd. wings, breast and cheeks, beautifully drawn, smooth as a Java, fine length, sweet expression, gem; 2, Dykes, mkd. wings and eyes, feather like wax, A1 col., nice length and cond., delightful stand, close up; 3, Hartley, mkd. wing, head and cheeks, capital feather and col., grand pos., little lower on leg; 4, Gledhill, mkd. wings and head, not so lengthy, but rich qual. and col., taking pos., stylish to a degree; hc, Midgley; hc, J. Taylor; c, Clegg.

CINN. TKD. YELL. (10): 1, Dr. Craig, mkd. wings and head, magnificent col. and qual., lovely pos. and length, beautiful back and wing carr., real stormer, 2, Brown, mkd. wings and eyes, superb feather, hardly so rich in col., nice pos. and length, well on leg; 3, Morrison, mkd. wings and head, stronger in build, A 1 qual. and col., lengthy and leggy, well shown; 4, Dykes, mkd. wings and head, all there for col. and qual., rare length; vhc, Hammond; hc, Towers; c, Sutcliffe. BUFF (7): 1, Dykes, mkd. wing and eye, tight as box, lovely col., grand length and pos., shows for all it is worth; 2, Morrison, mkd. wings and head, red hot superior qual., rare stand, excellent length, well on leg, close up; 3, Sutcliffe, mkd. back and eyes, well clothed, A 1 col., straight and shows leg nicely, little shorter; 4, Dr. Craig, mkd. wings and head, erect and lengthy, A 1 qual. and col., grand back and wing carr., might have gone up one; vhc, Towers; hc, Spencer. YELL. HEN (11): 1, Dr. Craig, var., one of the finest hens we have seen for a long time, bordering on perfection; 2, c, Spencer, var., smooth as glass, straight as a rush, full of style, not so lengthy, yet close up; 3, Dykes, lightly var., capital feather and col., stands nicely, good length and cond.; 4, Midgeley, mkd. wings and head, full of qual. and col., capital pos. and length. BUFF (10): 1, Dr. Craig, mkd. wings and head, gem for qual. and col., lovely pos., fine length, full of style; 2, Chittenden, mkd. wings and eyes, lengthy, A 1 pos., grand back and wing carr., beaten in col.; 3, vhc, Towers, mkd. wings and eyes, shade shorter, teeming with qual. and col., straight and well on leg, good 3rd; 4, Morrison, mkd. wings and neck, A 1 qual. and col., nice back and wing carr.; hc, Midgley; c, Spencer.

(6): 1, vhc, Francis, Hawfinches very large, good col., in fine bloom; 2, Raven, good Hawfinch, grand col., trifle smaller; 3, Pool, still another Hawfinch, and a good one, fails only in bloom and finish; 4, Wilson, C.M., Crosshill now in its coat of green; hc, Walsh, Hawfinch. INSECTIV. SMALL (14). A wonderful class, worth going a journey to see, quite the best seen this year, reminding one of London's best talent, up to the highest standard of perfection; 1, 3, 4, Darlow, Spotted Flycatcher, Willow Wren, and Redstart in order named a magnificent trio, all in the most immaculate condition, a credit to the owner, who must be a past master in the art of keeping and staging delicate softbills; 2, Walsh, charming little Golden-crested Wren beautifully staged; vhc, Wellings, really good Yellow Wagtail, fine col.; hc, Arnott, clinking good pair Bearded Tits, staged in masterful fashion; c, Dyson, excellent Blackcap—other species shown were a Wryneck, unfortunately rather "soft" during judging, Garden Warbler, Tree and Meadow Pipits, and Great Tit. LARGE (7): 1, Hailstone, very handsome Chough, absolutely perfect condition, wonderful sheen, great depth of col., nice size; 2, Darlow, very fine Waxwing, good size, col., and distinct markings; 3, Green, bonny Missel Thrush; 4, no name, another Chough, considerably behind winner; vhc, Wellings, good Blackbird; hc, Brush Song Thrush. HUNS (12): 1, Raven, lovely Hawfinch, in rare trim, perfect in every detail; 2, Macpherson, delightful Corn Bunting, beautiful col. and markings; 3, hc, Chick, very fine Yellow Bunting and rich col. Bramble; vhc, Pearson, good Bullie; c, no name, excellent Greenf.

THE FOREIGNERS.

PARROTS (5): 1, 2, 3, 4, vhc, Colton and Dawn, New Zealand, Yellow-bellied, Barraband, and Crimson winged Parrakeets, and Scaly-breasted Lorikeets in order named, all in exquisite condition. The first three extremely rare, every bird fit to win anywhere, a sight rarely equalled at any show, and certainly never surpassed. COMMON WAX-BILLS, ETC. (8): 1, 2, 3, Howe, Golden-breasted Waxbills, White-headed Mannikins and White Java Sparrows, all well known winners, shown in the most perfect manner; 4, vhc, Colton and Dawn, Zebras and Three-coloured Mannikins; hc, Baxby, Zebra; c, Colton, Orange-cheeked Waxbill. A.O.S. Finch, etc.: 1, 2, 3, Colton and Dawn, exceedingly rare Peale's Parrot Finches, a perfect blaze of col., nice condition and well shown, a good common—so called—Parrot Finch, now unfortunately very scarce, and an excellent pair of Pintail Nonpareils; 4, Baxby, nice cock Melba Finch; No. 5, two beautiful Long-tailed Grassfinches, disqualified for being two cocks. GROSBEAKS, ETC. (1): 1, Arnott, very rare Afghan Rose-winged Bullfinch, a very charming bird, first we have ever seen on the show bench. INSECTIV., ETC. (1): 1, Arnott, a delightful pair of South African Zosterops, could win in a good class, beautifully staged.

LEICESTER SHOW.

A Splendid Entry Again Secured.

All Records Broken.

The Seventeenth Annual Show of the Leicester Hand in Hand C.B.S., was held Nov. 4 and 6. Entries came up splendidly, and quality was of the best. Norwich were quite a show in themselves. The 13 classes containing some noted birds, but Yorkshires, although given two more classes than usual did not turn up to expectations, we are afraid the Yorkshire men will lose their classes if they do not support their section better.

Hybrids came up well, and a good collection of special quality birds were shown. A fine yellow Greenfinch-Canary, almost clear, flowing with rich level lemon colour all over it, won in its class, and took special for best bird in the Hybrid and British Bird section.

British birds were a strong collection, and good standard birds were to be seen throughout. The whole show was up about 50 entries more this year over all sections. The Committee are of the best, every man to his post, and hard working. The secretaries, Messrs. Day and Roberts, their first year at this new venture, are two capital men in the right place, and were most obliging to everyone present, nothing being too much trouble, and they were ably backed up by the committee.

Pres., Mr. W. A. Gibbins; vice-pres., Messrs. Hulse, Allen, and Gilbert; treas., W. Moore, and Messrs. Freestone, Bent, Neal, Deakin, Herbert, Wholton, Pole, Jolley, Henry, Brookes, Kilsby, and Smart.

Special best Canary was won by Mr. J. Houghton's noted buff. Best British, etc., Parker. Members' cup, Gilbert. Runner up, Pearson. Best colour-fed, Gilbert.

The attendance broke all previous records at Leicester, the room being packed with fanciers from all parts, who enjoyed the treat provided, as every bird was splendidly staged, and all could be seen at a glance. Mr. H. Battye judged Canaries, and Mr. C. Houlton, all other classes.

NOR., NAT. COL. (9): 1, Sharman, large typical green, grand shape, good head, lovely col. and feather, in fine cond.; 2, Hathaway, cl., lovely shape, fine size, grand col. and qual., beautiful cond., very close up; 3, Eaton, c., beautiful feather, nicely carried wings, rare shape and size, rare cond.; vhc, Godley; hc, Growdridge; c, Wilmot. YELL., COL. FED. (10): 1, Buckingham and Sons, cl., rare type and body, grand head, nice even col., lovely feather and cond., faultlessly staged; 2, Gough and Loach, cl., lovely col., shape, size, and qual., good head, neatly carried wings and tail, well across perch, close up; 3, Vardy, lovely bird, just a shade long in body, but grand type and cond., grand tone of col., beautiful qual., very close up; vhc, Houghton; hc, Hathaway; c, Hulse. BUFF (16): grand class: 1, Houghton, lovely cl., grand shape, size and qual., faultless cond., grand head, well filled in neck, grand feather, very fit; 2, Elliott, cl., rare col. and type, nice broad head, grand shape, big, typical body, lovely qual., rare cond.; 3, Vardy, cl., very nice shape, warm in col., grand size, good head and neck, neat wings, and tail, well cut behind, in fine feather; vhc, Hulse; hc, Hathaway; c, Silk. TKD. YELL. (10): 1, Gough and Loach, eye and wing mkd., beautiful col. and qual., lovely cond., rare head and neck, grand body, in full song; 2, Turner, varieg., lovely col. and qual., good body and size, nice shape, very smart bird, and well staged, beautiful feather; 3, Vardy, varieg., lovely feather and qual., well filled back, hot col., good shape and size, rare cond., good wings and tail, fit; vhc, Houghton; hc, Judd; c, Hathaway. BUFF (11): 1, hc, Hathaway, eye and neck mkd., good broad head, well filled in neck, good front, nice hot, even col., grandly carried wings, lovely feather and qual., wins in a good class; 2, Vardy, beautiful head and neck mkd., lovely frosting, grand col. and qual., nice shape, size, and cond., very close up; 3, Gilbert, grand wing and eye mkd., lovely type and body, nice shape, good feather, shade smaller, very fit; vhc, Hulse; c, Buckley. UNFLIG. YELL. (13): 1, Houghton, right wing mkd., faultlessly shown, beautiful col. and qual., in fine feather and cond., rare shape and size, good head and neck, popular win; 2, Hathaway, cl., lovely head and shape, beautiful qual., perfect feather and cond., nice size, good body and shape, very close up; 3, Fennell, right wing mkd., very hot col., nice shape, capital size, lovely qual. of feather, beautiful cond., nice head and neck, well shown; vhc, Vardy; hc, Wright; c, Gilbert. BUFF (14): 1, 2, Elliott, lovely clears, both in fine cond., and very little to choose between them, grand col. and qual., nicely frosted, good heads and wings, well filled in back and neck; 3, Taylor, wing mkd., lovely shape and size, nice broad head, good feather, qual., and cond., nice type, well shown; vhc, Tweddle; hc, Hathaway; c, Hewitt.

PAINT ON BREEDING CAGE.

Canary Novice.—(1) If you allow the cage to stand empty until the paint is quite dry and hardened, there will be no risk whatever in putting birds in it, either for breeding or otherwise. (2) It is not possible to say with any certainty merely from a description of colour whether the hen is a pure-bred Norwich or not. But there is no doubt that what you term brown colour is due to cinnamon marking, in which case you will find that the bird has pink eyes, though it may be necessary to catch her and hold her so that the light is reflected from them at a certain angle, when the ruddy pink hue will be quite unmistakable. This cinnamon colour, in all probability, shows a more or less remote kinship with the Cinnamon, which cross is sometimes used to give increased quality to the feather of the Norwich.

OVERWORKING THE HEN.

J. Ayres.—You evidently have an exceptionally good breeding hen which you are in a fair way to ruin by mismanagement. Besides beginning much too early, you have aggravated this error of judgment by keeping her mated much too long at the end of the season. You ought certainly to have gathered from the pages of "Canary Breeding for Beginners" that you should have stopped her breeding, even at the cost of sacrificing a clutch of eggs, before the moult was commenced instead of keeping her breeding until the moult is completed and she begins to think of nesting again. Anyway, you have done the right thing in separating her from the cock now, and your best course is to keep her in a flight cage, or some good-sized cage in which she can get a fair amount of exercise through the winter months. Give a plain diet for a few weeks, allowing only a pinch of mixed seeds twice a week, and just a morsel of egg-food or any substitute you may prefer once a week, and a morsel of sweet fruit or raw or boiled carrot twice a week when green food is not available in a fit condition to use. Keep all nesting receptacles and material out of her sight and reach, and, if possible, keep her out of hearing of the cocks for a time. Then I should say she will be very well worth trying again next season, but do not mate her before the middle of March at earliest, or from that time up to the beginning of April according to the weather prospects at the time, and limit her to three broods at most—two would be better, but a hen of this type may often be allowed three with perfect safety. By so doing you may so conserve her energies as to have a very useful hen for the following season's breeding.

CRIPPLED FOOT.

L. H. H.—Bathe the foot for a few minutes each evening until the inflammation and soreness has disappeared in a luke-warm solution of wych hazel—a teaspoonful of the extract in a saucerful of warm water. After bathing, dry carefully and gently anoint with a little Lanocyllin ointment, but do not leave on any surplus grease to collect dirt and sand from the cage floor. After the soreness has disappeared, if the middle toe seems mobile and supple, carefully bind it alongside the outer toe opposite the direction in which it turns, using two separate ties of very thin yarn—ice wool, or something similar—making one tie near the claw of the outer toe, and the other about the middle, and making the knots underneath where they will form less attraction for the bird to pick them out. Tie firmly, but not too tightly. The object is to get the outer toe to support the middle one for a few weeks until it has regained some strength to retain its normal position.

LOST USE OF LEGS.

T. Watts.—Although you say you have tied back the hind toes, you do not say what was the object of doing so, and I fail to see what it could be unless the hind toes were what is sometimes termed "slipped," and curled under the feet towards the front. If this was so, and the trouble came on suddenly, the probability is that they were strained by some means, and in that case the chances of recovery are rather remote. Try the following treatment for a fortnight, and if not better in that time write again and repeat particulars, and say if, and in what way, the hind toes were affected that caused you to tie them back. Give round perches just a little thicker than an ordinary lead pencil. Bathe the feet once a day in a fairly warm solution of boracic acid—a small teaspoonful of the acid in a saucerful of warm water, dry gently, and then carefully massage each foot with one drop each of some stimulating lotion, such as Elliman's Embrocation. If the claws are overgrown, cut them back to the proper length during the first bathing, but be careful not to cut back to the "quick," which you can easily see by the thin pinkish streak that extends a little way beyond the end of the fleshy part of toe down the centre of the nail. If the toes were not curled under the feet remove the ties at once; otherwise, you may leave them on for a week and then remove them. Twice a week, in addition to the staple diet, give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed, and on two other days a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, teazle, white millet, and broken groats. In the water, every second day for a week, add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, and in the next week give instead four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day.

NO NEW FEATHERS.

Querist.—Continue keeping the bird in a fairly warm atmosphere as long as it is so bare of feathers; allow it to bathe quite freely, and it would be well to just take the chill off the water when the weather is very cold until its body is better protected. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape, and in addition give separately every third day a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, linseed, and broken groats. On the intervening days give first half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake dusted with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with maw seed, and next a morsel of banana or carrot, the latter either raw or boiled. In the water on the days following those on which you give the sponge cake give five drops of syrup of saffron and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence, for a fortnight, then omit it for a week, and resume and give it again for another fortnight. Report result at end of this course, repeating particulars, and I will advise you further if necessary.

NORWICH HENS AILING.

M.—Possibly the hens had been accustomed to a warmer temperature than yours before you had them, which, combined with the climatic conditions just lately, would account for the symptoms. Still, if you intend keeping the birds in a cold room in future I would not advise you to move them to a much warmer place now, as I see no reason why they should not get acclimatised all right in a few weeks. See that they are kept in the coolest part of the room for the present, and are not exposed to direct draughts nor great extremes of heat and cold. Also stop using the dusty seed as soon as possible. In addition to the staple diet of plain canary seed, give about half a teaspoonful per bird of summer rape every second day, and twice a week on the alternate days give just a pinch of mixed seed. For the next fortnight give also on each day you do not give the rape half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. Give a spray of watercress four times a week whenever you can get it, and at other times keep a morsel of raw or boiled carrot stuck in the wires for them to peck at. In the drinking water every second day for a week add ten drops of lemon juice, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and after this give instead five drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine and sweet spirit of nitre every second day for a fortnight.

TREATMENT OF WHINCHAT.

Mowgli.—Although the Whinchat is one of our Spring migrants, leaving us again in the autumn, like several of the Warblers, it can be kept in an unheated room during the winter months, but during exceptionally severe weather it should be kept fairly cosy for comfort, and it is a good plan to cover the cage with a cloth or an old shawl on cold nights. Its food should consist of a good brand of insectile mixture, and a liberal allowance of insects. See that the insectile food does not contain an undue portion of biscuit; if it does, add an extra quantity of ants' cocoons and preserved yolk of egg. Your birds should do quite well flying loose in the room, the extra exercise would keep them fit. In mid-winter and severe weather give them half an hour's feeding by artificial light during the evening. In Warblers steadiness is generally regulated by age. The younger the birds the quicker they settle down. Our Nutshell, No. 26, on the keeping of the smaller insectivorous birds, would interest you.

LOSING LINNETS (J. Black).—I am sorry to hear of your loss of birds, but I cannot agree with you as regards your seed being the cause, as I have carefully examined each variety and think it is a particularly good sample as far as quality is concerned, but I think it contains too much rape for Linnets in confinement, and I would advise you to increase the quantity of canary and teazle, so as to make it nearer the following stock mixture:—Canary 3 parts, teazle 2 parts, rape, charlock and linseed, 1 part each. I see you add just a little hemp, which is quite right if the bird does not waste the other seed hunting for it. As regards the diarrhœa, I fear you will have to look for some other cause than the seed. Be very careful to keep your water vessels perfectly clean, washing them out in water with a dash of Sanitas in it, and give the birds boiled water to drink. An aperient will sometimes check diarrhœa, and Epsom or glauber salts is as good as anything, as it can be given without handling the bird. Follow this up with an iron tonic. Get an oz. of crystals of citrate of iron from the chemist, and dissolve daily in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water as much as will just lie on a threepenny piece. This will correct the looseness and tone up the birds. Give it a little stronger if it seems necessary, but watch the excreta carefully and don't overdo it. Add a little maw seed to the daily feed or give it separately. Be very careful to keep everything clean, giving fresh sand and clean perches daily.

FEEDING A MIXED COLLECTION.

Bird Lover.—Your present method of feeding is not at all an ideal one for a mixed collection. You must have more canary seed for your Canaries, and I would suggest a hopper containing this seed with say a sixth part of rape added. Reduce the supply of hemp to half the present quantity, and double the quantity of sunflower seeds. The other mixed seed can be offered, also a little good wild seed mixture if you can obtain it. Some well-known firms put this up in packet form, containing many varieties, and it is much relished by the different Finches, including Canaries. (2) As to your 1914 hen breeding, it is just a matter of health and condition. If she has gone through her moult satisfactorily, and looks well, there is no reason why she should not do well another season. There is no hard and fast rule, some hens last twice as long as others and do more work.

BREEDING MEALWORMS.

J. S.—Procure or knock up a stout wooden box about the size of a 2lb. biscuit box. Bore some holes with a bradawl in the lid or in the sides near the top. Some breeders use tin biscuit boxes or jars, but I have had most success with wooden boxes, which are warmer and not affected so much by changes in the weather. Cut some pieces of coarse canvas rather smaller than the floor space of the box, then procure some bran and barley meal. Put a layer on the bottom of the tin about an inch thick. Put a piece of sacking of double thickness on this. Then put another layer of bran and meal, then another piece of sacking, and so on until the box is about three parts full, finishing with a piece of sacking. Then turn in a pint or so of mealworms. Do not add anything else, in the way of dead birds, bones, etc., as some do. Place the box in a fairly warm dry corner, such as a cupboard near the fireplace. Disturb the worms as little as possible, only occasionally putting in a handful of fresh meal under the top layer of canvas. It takes about twelve months for the contents to get into full breeding swing—that is for the worms to turn into beetles, beetles to lay eggs in the sacking, eggs to hatch, and young worms to grow. They can be bred in a cold room, but will do far better in warmth. A keeper of softbills should have several boxes going, and should change the contents (when necessary) during the winter, sifting out the dust at the bottom and throwing it away. The breeding of mealworms and other kinds of live food is dealt with in our Nutshell booklet, No. 26 price 2½d. post free.

FEEDING A MERLIN.

E. B.—All the Hawks require a meat diet when in captivity, but this need not be butchers' meat only, freshly killed Sparrows and mice or young rats can also be offered. They are fond of cockroaches and beetles, and a trap for these should constantly be set if one has a Hawk in captivity. The Merlin is one of the easiest of the family to tame, and makes quite a nice and interesting pet. The size of cage is quite a matter of choice; have it as large as possible, say three feet in length with a couple of good stout perches. If you advertise in our "Wanted" column you should be able to get what you require.

BREEDING MEALWORMS.

C. L. Lacour.—This same question of breeding mealworms is dealt with in an answer to another reader. It would no doubt pay if one went into it properly and had the convenience for breeding quantities, as there is always a demand at a good price.

SAMPLES OF WILD SEEDS.

A Novice, W. A. S.—The samples sent are both very good ones, and I think you are fortunate to get them. No. 1 is a very good assortment, and is quite suitable for Linnets as it contains many of the seeds they are particularly fond of. I do not think there is much in it that would appeal to the Goldfinches, but No. 2 is quite in their line, and is the choicer sample of the two. I would not advise you to mix them with the stock food, but give them separately, say a spoonful at a time, and let them sort it over and take what they like; any left in the bottom of the dish or cage should be thrown away.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

RED-HEADED FINCH EGG-BOUND.

S. W. B.—As it is so late in the year, and you already have had trouble with egg-binding, I think it would be better to separate them and so prevent further breeding operations till spring. On the other hand, if you can keep them in some place where a minimum of 60 deg. F. can be maintained, then you should have a reasonable chance of rearing any young that may be hatched out. If you let them go to nest, all you have to do is to supply a nest receptacle and some hay, and a little moss, as building material. If any young are hatched out supply a little soft food and some live insects in addition to the ordinary menu. It has been the treacherous changeable weather we have been experiencing lately that has been responsible for the trouble. If you have any recurrence of the egg-passing trouble, put the bird into a small cage and keep it over your kitchen range till the egg is passed, and then the bird must be gradually hardened off before being put into cold quarters again.

WHAT BIRD?

Novice, D. M.—These popular names are too variable and too promiscuously used to be reliable I do not like guessing, so I am not answering your query this week, but am keeping it by me, as I want you to tell me at what port or place your friend procured the bird. I think then I can name the bird for you. In future, please get from your friend the place he got the birds at and supply this in your letter with your description of the birds.

BREEDING BUDGERIGARS IN CAGE.

Bud.—Budgerigars breed in cages, but much less freely than in an aviary, and often one's patience is sadly tried before they settle down to nesting. I once saw, many years ago, a brood of young Budgerigars in an all-wire cage, 12in. square, in a dealer's shop in a Midland town, and the young were all fully reared in due course. A pair in your cage should be certain to ultimately breed. You can only put them in, give them good seed (canary and white millet), plenty of seeding and flowering grass while obtainable, then later a small sweet apple for them to nibble at. You must, of course, keep grit, cuttlebone and water continually in the cage. Put two husks in straight away in the two back corners of the cage, but the openings of the husks must face the light. It is best when weather permits to put in a small turf of longish grass, the grass having been thoroughly wetted first from the rose of a water can. The birds will roll about in this and take a bath in a natural manner.

GREY PARROT WITH GROWTH IN MOUTH.

An Old Reader.—Give this bird one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia every fourth day in its drinking water, and on the intermediate days, that is, when not giving the magnesia, put half a teaspoonful of byno-hypophosphites in the water. Get a box of honey and borax from your chemist and give the bird a little once or twice a day. You can give this either from the end of a stick or feather, or lightly spread on biscuit, stale crust, or piece of plain cake. The method you administer it by does not matter, so that you give the bird a little once or twice daily. You know the bird's mannerisms and habits. Give the honey and borax by any method you can which will be least distressful to the bird. Recovery cannot be immediate; it will be gradual, and you must continue the treatment as a whole till the growth ceases to appear. Diet to be given as usual. Shall be pleased to hear how the bird progresses a few weeks hence.

BUDGERIGAR WITH CUT WINGS.

Constant Reader.—Unless the wing stumps are continually bleeding it is not likely to take any harm from the cut plumage. Of course, if it has been pinioned, that is, a joint of the wing cut away, it will never fly again; but this should not affect its health after it has once recovered from the shock of pinioning. If the feathers have merely been cut sharp back, then the wing will heal in due course, and the feathers will be reproduced at the next moult. In any case, as some little time must elapse before it recovers the power of flight, its present tameness should become permanent, but be careful not to allow strangers to scare it, or as soon as it possesses the power to fly away from any disturbing influence the tameness will soon disappear. As the wing has been made sore by cutting the feathers over-short I do not advise pulling out any of the stumps. Allow them to be reproduced in the usual way at the next moult.

AN AILING BLUE-FRONT.

A. M. E.—Keep this bird warm and in a room where the day and night temperatures do not vary much; yet any stuffy corner will not suit it. What is wanted is warm quarters, which are at the same time well ventilated and free from draught. So long as the voidings are not watery loose, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water every fourth day. The bowels must move quite freely, stopping short of abnormal looseness. On the intermediate days, i.e., when not giving the magnesia, put ten drops of Allen and Hanbury's byno-hypophosphites in the drinking water, and continue this treatment for some time. The general dietary can cover such things as, seed mixture, nuts, biscuits, dry crusts, pieces of plain cake, raw carrot and ripe fruit, grit, cuttlebone, and a chunk of wood (for it to exercise its mandibles upon) must be continuously in the cage. Ennui will be its greatest foe at the present stage. You must keep it as interested in things around it as you can, so as to counteract this as far as possible. Report progress in a few weeks.

GENERAL.

POINTS OF EXHIBITION CANARIES, ETC.

Novice.—The terms you mention, and, in fact, all the expressions commonly used, are fully explained in an alphabetical list give in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1916, a copy of which our manager would send you post free for sevenpence. Diseases and their treatment have been made the subject of a special Nutshell, entitled "Ailing Birds, and How to Cure Them"; this is 2½d. post free. Coloured plates of Canaries, showing ideal exhibition birds, are also published by us at 2d. each (see list on back page). We will bear in mind your suggestion of a chart. You did not send your name and address with your enquiry; please see Rules.

How 1/- To-day Will Make £'s for You.

DON'T keep Canaries; make them keep YOU—and pay you WELL. Canary breeding can be made very profitable. It can be made to bring you in large sums year after year. It is only a question of knowing HOW, and this book TELLS you how—tells you in a simple, clear and practical manner. There is no theory about it, its 380 pages are simply packed full of money-making facts—the practical experience and valuable breeding secrets of famous Fanciers. It is written by Experts—well-known Breeders who have won prizes throughout the entire Kingdom—men who have made big money from their birds. They tell you how they did it, what they did, and why they did it. It is a veritable encyclopædia of Canary Breeding, giving full information on every point, telling you what to do, how to do it, and when to do it. Here are a few examples:—

How to Test if Eggs are Fertile.
How to Wean the Young.
How to Destroy Parasites.
How to Breed for Exhibitions.
How to Feed for Exhibitions.
How to Exhibit to Win.
How to Judge Birds.
How to Breed for Markings and Colour.
How to Cure Diseases.
How to Give Medicines.
How to Cure Deformed Toes.
How to Defeat Egg-Eating.
How to Train Birds to Sing.
How to Treat Birds that Fail to Breed.

32 Coloured Plates

380 Pages

The book is so well divided into chapters, headings, and sub-headings that any subject can be referred to with ease. There are three indexes—one for illustrations, one for chapters, and one arranged alphabetically.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona-fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit system should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 2/2.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2. "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and mounting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge. Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

Odd cocks, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-. Hens, 4/6, 5/6, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-. Pairs of Crests and Crestedbreds, correctly matched, 21/-, 30/-, 40/-, 60/- upwards. All on approval. Cages, 4d. and 6d. N.B.—I am fully alive to the fact that you can purchase Canaries of a sort at lower prices; I am also fully aware that Hens are being sold as singing Cocks. That, too, may already be known to their sorrow. Now, let three or four others make their statements:—

Grosvenor Road, Belfast, 20th October, 1916.— Received the birds in first-class condition. I am greatly pleased with them. I could not have wished for better. The cock started to sing the morning after it arrived. You have been very fair in dealing with me. Everything is above board with you.—W. McAVOY.

Spooner Road, Broomhill, Sheffield, November 10th.—I received Buff Border hen safe to-day, and it gives entire satisfaction.—C. WELLS.

Cahir, Co. Tipperary, 11th November, 1916.—The bird arrived safely. I am very pleased with him, and he is, as you said, a splendid songster. Altogether a very fine bird.—J. E. KELLS.

C/o. Rear-Admiral's House, R.N. Barracks, Chatham, November 6th.—I received the birds all right. Well, all I can say is, I am very satisfied with them. I know this much, I visited the shops in London and could not purchase birds like them at the price. I am pleased I sent to you for them.—S. TURNER.

WHAT ELSE HAVE I GOT, DO YOU SAY

Well, at the moment of writing this, I will tell you. Here they are, to be seen, and undoubtedly to be fully appreciated they must be seen. High-shouldered Belgians, Scotch Fancies, Border Fancies, Lizards, Rollers, Bullfinches, Linnets, Goldfinches, Goldfinch Mules, Muling Hens, Budgerigars. A full list of all will be sent you on receipt of a postcard.

Twitterings.

Mr. J. Earnshaw, Nelson, Lancs., writes that he has removed from 51, Rook St. to 33, Charles St., Nelson.

In Sheffield show report A.O.V. dark Mule should read: 3, Twine, not Livine, as stated, and Mr. E. C. Green won 1st in F.M. Linnets, not Davies.

Mr. H. H. Towers, Keighley, writes that he has removed to Ivy House, Station Road, Crosshills, near Keighley.

My son has joined me in partnership, writes Mr. J. Hicks, and in future we shall exhibit as Hicks and Son, Holsworthy and Wadebridge.

Messrs. Smith and Lees write that three special prizes, 5s. most points in open classes, 3s. second, and 2s. third, were omitted from the schedule of the Codnor Park and Eastwood Show.

The hon secretary of the Guiseley Yeadon C.B.S. having been called up, all correspondence on society matters should be addressed to Mr. M. Scott, 4, Derby Road, Rawdon, near Leeds.

The show of the Cumnock C.B.S., is fixed for Nov. 25, writes Mr. A. Wyper, hon. sec., Manchline Road, Auchinleck, and the Scotch Fancy section will be open to Ayrshire. Schedules will be sent on application.

East Ham C.B.S. Annual Show, postponed from Oct. 28, writes Mr. F. Onslow, hon. sec., will be held in the East Ham Liberal Club (opposite Town Hall) Nov. 25. Mr. J. Robson judge. Schedules have been posted to members.

Schedules for the Provincial Roller Open Singing Contest, Dec. 1 and 2, have been posted to all known exhibitors, writes Mr. J. T. Smith, 11, Disley Street, Sudden, Rochdale. Anyone overlooked can have one on application.

There is a good classification for Reading show, Nov. 22. Details are given in an advertisement in our "Shows" columns, and entries may be made from the particulars stated. The hon. sec. is Mr. O. C. Smith, 73, Audley St., Reading.

I beg to thank you on behalf of our members for the splendid report of our show, writes Mr. H. Fry, hon. sec., Landore, and Plasmarl C.B.S., and also to thank outside exhibitors for their splendid support. We trust for a continuance of same, as we intend to make vast alterations in our show room for the next venture.

We hear from Mr. F. C. Knight, hon. sec. of the Highgate Hampstead C.B.S., that among the exhibits will be some White Canaries, the property of a lady exhibitor, Miss Dora Sulman. Intending visitors to the show, which opened yesterday, Friday, and remains open to-day, should book to Tufnell Park Tube Station.

We regret to hear from Mr. E. C. Last, Purley, that his son is seriously ill with appendicitis, and has just undergone a severe operation. Mr. Last says that the operation has been successfully performed, but that for the present he is entirely unable to give attention to any enquiries. We are sure that all who know Mr. Last will join with us in the hope of a speedy recovery for his son.

Entries Extended.

I will accept entries up till Monday morning, Nov. 20, writes Mr. P. H. Morris, Sec., Aberavon, Port Talbot B.F.A., 20, Arthur St., Aberavon, Port Talbot. We have at present only one entry in the cage birds section.

A Fancier Honoured.

I am pleased to inform the many friends of "Jamie" Mair, the jovial member of Cumnock C.B.S., writes Mr. A. Wyper, hon. sec., that he has been granted the Military Medal for resource and bravery. He is now in his second year of service, and his friends all hope that his luck may continue.

Extra Specials at Cardiff.

After our schedules, writes Mr. E. Thomas, Sec., Cardiff C.B.S., were printed I received the following specials from Mr. Alf Shellam, 2s. 6d. cash in each of the six Mule and Hybrid classes, 5s. for the best Mule or Hybrid in the show, and 10s. 6d. for most points in the Mule and Hybrid section. I trust exhibitors will appreciate the generosity of Mr. Shellam by giving us a bumping entry, as our show is run for charity. Last year we sent 40 parcels to prisoners of war, and this year we hope to do better.

"CAGE BIRDS" ROLL OF HONOUR.

It is with feelings of deep regret that we have to chronicle the death in action of Thomas Lambie, on 3rd Oct., at the Somme. He was the second son of Bailie Lambie, Whitburn, and came over to this country with the Canadians, and was in his 23rd year. To Bailie Lambie and his wife, along with the other members of the family our sympathy goes out. The Bailie is known all over Scotland as a keen member of the fancy, and his son, who has paid the supreme sacrifice, was also greatly interested in bird-keeping.

Birds Missing from East Lothian Show.

Two birds are missing from the East Lothian C.B.S. Red Cross Show on Saturday, one belonging to Mr. H. Bennet Kelso, class 10, No. 1, and one to Mr. W. S. Lambie, Whitburn, class 13, No. 1. If anyone has taken them in mistake will they please send them on to their owners to save further trouble, and also inform me, writes Mr. J. Fairgrieve, secretary, 10, Hope Park, Haddington.

How Good Things May be Missed.

I have taken CAGE BIRDS for a long time now, writes Mr. J. T. Logan, Govan, and would not miss it for anything, it is so interesting. One does not require to get it weekly for long before CAGE BIRDS puts you on the right track with one's birds. I have told many a novice like myself not to miss CAGE BIRDS weekly. They soon found that out to be good advice, for if they got it one week and missed the next it so happened that the very thing they wanted to know about was in the issue they missed.

Charity Show at Bristol.

The show of the Bristol F.A., Dec. 2, 4, is in aid of the "Harrison Fund," a subscription on behalf of the six young children of the late Inspector Harrison, who are now left motherless and fatherless. Mr. Harrison was an inspector in the Fire Brigade, and lost his life in the execution of his duty through the collapse of a burning building. It is to be hoped that a substantial sum will be raised in such a worthy object. There are several shows closely following Bristol, writes Mr. G. T. H. Maggs, Gen. Sec., and if exhibitors would like to have their exhibits sent on direct to later shows, we shall be pleased to do what is necessary, if they will state on entry that this is required, and send the necessary labels in good time. In such cases it might be well also to mark the return side of our own label with the name of the show to be sent on to, with class number.

Mr. Geo. Johnson, 6, Brunswick Terrace, Stacksteads, Bacup, writes that he will send on application a schedule of the Bacup Roller C.C. contest, Nov. 24-25, to anyone who has been overlooked.

My winning unflighted Yellow Norwich Cock at Glasgow and District Show, Nov. 10 and 11, writes Mr. J. Cuthbertson, Stonehouse, was claimed at catalogue price, £20 10s. by a well-known Scotch fancier. I wish both him and CAGE BIRDS continued success.

The following judges have been appointed for Hamilton show, Dec. 9:—Scotch Fancies, A. Allardice, Overtown; Norwich, Wm. Grewar, Lochgelly. Borders, T. Ritchie, Lesmahagow; W. S. Clark, Irvine. British, W. P. Campbell, Larkhall; A. Crawford, Cambuslang.

The show of the S.W. London C.B.S. will be held Dec. 2, at the Plough Hotel, Clapham Junction. 37 classes are provided, see advt. under Norwich Canaries. Local fanciers who would like to join the society should write to the hon. secs., Messrs. Lilley and Nason, 19, Mysore Rd., Lavender Hill, S.W.

Prize Money Paid.

We learn that prize money in respect of the following shows has been paid. If any exhibitor has been overlooked he should apply to the secretary concerned:—Leicester Hand in Hand, Clapham C.B.A., and Leeds Roller C.C.

"Cage Birds" in the Dutch West Indies.

We have received from Messrs. R. D. Galbraith and Co., East India merchants, Billiter Square, London, a cutting from CAGE BIRDS of Feb. 12 last, with a request from a reader in the Dutch West Indies for further information on the methods of dealing with mice in the bird room, which were at the time the subject of letters in our columns. Of course, we have had pleasure in sending the full correspondence on the matter, and also a copy of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1916, which contains an illustrated article on the same subject.

AFTER THE SHOW.

A Musical Evening at Sheffield.

"Life at the best is a great adventure, and only to those who venture most and fear least will it yield of its best."

"To fight for things, and to win them; that is success."

"Work never killed anybody; failure only kills, if we let it."

The officials of the Sheffield O.S. appear absolutely to stand by the above quotations, for who would ever have imagined that after all birds had been dispatched safely on their return journey on Saturday night, a "high-class" concert could have taken place?

After the strenuous days and nights passed at the show one would have thought all would have felt too weary to have participated in a "sing-song," but Sheffield stamina is great.

The pianist was an expert from Dewsbury, songs by "stars" from Keighley way, "Little Mary," etc. We heard that a doctor was in attendance in case of any "mishap" that might take place.

The ante-room close by was a popular venue, and all was merry and bright until "skedaddles" we made to catch the last cars home.

Bacup Roller C.C.—Annual Singing Contest, Park Hotel, Nov. 24-25. Judges, G. Wareing, J. Netherwood, J. T. Johnson, 4 Ch.; Champ. Young, Nov. Young, Champ. Any Age, Novice Ditto. Prizes: Young Birds, 10/-, 7/6, 5/-, 4/-, 2/6, 2/-, 1/6; Any Age, 10/-, 6/-, 4/-, 2/-; Cash Specials in all classes. Fee, 1/6. Ent. close Nov. 20. to G. Johnson, 6, Brunswick Terrace, Stacksteads, nr. Bacup.

Cardiff C.B.S.—Cory Hall, Nov. 29-30. Judges, J. H. Payne, H. Norman, H. C. Smith, A. Maggs. 63 classes: Nor. 16 (5 Nov.), Yorks. 17 (6 Nov.), Bord. 8 (2 Nov.), Scil. 3, Mules 6, Brit. 11, Stock 1, Gift 1. Prizes, 10/-, 5/-, 2/6. Fee, 1/6. Ent. close Nov. 22 to E. Thomas, 48, Craddock Street, Cardiff.

TO JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS.

In View of Our Next Annual.

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1917 is now in course of preparation, and in order that our annual list of judges of cage birds should be up to date, and correct in detail, we shall be obliged if judges who wish their names to appear in next year's Directory of Judges will send us on a postcard their present address and the varieties they are prepared to judge, naming, if any, those in which they specialise. No charge whatever is made for the insertion, but only the names of those who send us the particulars desired will be included in the list. A specimen entry (fictitious) is as follows:—

Singing Contests.

Announcements of forthcoming contests in the nature of advertisements must be paid for at advertisement rates, two words a penny.

PONTEFRACT.

LEEDS.

Linnet singing contest for quality, Clarence Hotel, Skinner Lane, Nov. 12; 18 birds. Very good singing was heard.

1, Marshall; 2, 3, shared Wigfield and Binns. Judge, T. C. Summers; timekeeper, Dobson.—T. C. Summers, Hon. Sec.

Linnet contest, Glassmakers' Arms, Saville Green, Nov. 12; 23 birds sang. 1, Marshall; 2, Oliver; 3, Newsome (dead heat); 4, Watson. Judges, W. Lacy, S. Butt. Roller Canary contest Nov. 12; 14 birds sang. 1, Hirst; 2, Butler; 3, Shaw. Judges, C. Bibs, T. Howarth. Open Canary contest Nov. 19.—W. Lacy, Sec.

Leeds Linnet and Canary F.A., Albion Hotel, Saville Green, York Road. Open contest for Roller Canaries, Nov. 11; 9 birds sang. 1, Thompson; 2 and 3 shared, Condliffe and Chippindale. Judges, Sissons and Naylor. Also Linnet contest Nov. 12; 18 birds sang. 1, Jim Chippindale; 2, T. Ward; 3 and 4, J. Sellers. Judges, Hardcastle, Naylor, and Grant. Also a Roller contest, Nov. 12; 10 birds sang. 1, Thompson; 2, Condliffe, 3, Chippindale. Judges, Naylor and Grant.—W. Naylor, Hon. Sec.

Club Reports.

CITY AND COUNTY OF PERTH.

Meeting Laidlaw's Rooms, Leonard Street, Nov. 6, Mr. D. Brown chair. Sec. read all correspondence, and the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the chair. Next meeting Dec. 4.—J. L. Smith, Sec.

WARRINGTON C.B.S.

Meeting, Headquarters, Oct. 26, Mr. Eckersley chair. Arrangements were completed for the members' show, Dec. 2, in the Blue Bell Sale Rooms. Mr. A. Wellings was appointed to judge. Classes: Yorks. 6, Nor. 10 (4 greens), Bord. 8, Brit. and Mules 9, scil. 3, gift 1. Specials best bird and for 1st and 2nd most points will be given in each section. Entries close next meeting, Nov. 30.—H. Warburton.

ABERTILLERY C.B.S.

Meeting Nov. 11, Prince of Wales Hotel, Mr. Jos. Partitt presiding over a good number. We had a very nice meeting and things are looking favourable for a strong society.

The principal item was our last open show. Everything has proved satisfactory, and we hope in a week or so to hand over a nice little sum to the penny fund. Wm. Briscoe was elected a member. Decided to have a washing exhibition at next meeting, when Mr. Newell will wash six birds and try to give a few useful hints to novices.—Wm. Newell, sec.

SOUTHAMPTON C.B.S.

Meeting Nov. 7, Mr. W. J. White chair. A fair number of members attended, considering the very heavy rain. New member elected, Mr. E. Baker, Cowes. A fine photographic group from India was on view, containing several members of the society. Final arrangements made for annual show (members only, again), Messrs. Chandler, Doyle, Methnish and Gentry being elected stewards, with Mr. Washer as judge's steward. The gift of a few more half-crowns brought the total of special prizes up to 21, which with the six cups should ensure a good entry.—G. J. Slade.

PORTH AND RHONDDA VALLEY.

General meeting held at the Llwyncelyn Hotel, Porth, Nov. 9, Mr. T. James chair. Assist. Sec. received specials for open show Dec. 14, and a goodly number came in. Mr. Legg urged the members present to give as many of CAGE BIRDS books as possible to the novice classes, and the novices will be well looked after in this respect. Whilst the meeting was proceeding Mr. Hollingshead (of Hollingshead and Edwards), Penygraig, gave a washing exhibition, putting a few birds through their bath in good style, every member watching with the keenest interest. Mr. Bevan also promised to give a washing exhibition, but was unable to turn up as promised. If members not present at the meeting wish to give specials in the shape of CAGE BIRDS books or any other way, or any outside fancier, I will be pleased to receive them.—A. H. C. Legg, Assist. Sec.

CLAPHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

A "Novice" Exhibitor Disqualified.

Well-attended meeting, Nov. 7. Secretary read a letter from Mr. R. J. Burt, protesting against Mr. J. B. Kerr showing as a novice Canary fancier, and alleging that Mr. Kerr had shown and won over several years at Holborn Hall, Barnet, Potter's Bar, Enfield, and other places. The sec. also read a letter from Mr. Kerr questioning the accuracy of some of Mr. Burt's allegations, and contending that some of the shows mentioned were not open shows. After careful consideration of the evidence the meeting decided that, judged by the rules of this association, Mr. Kerr must be considered a champion exhibitor, and his prize-money forfeited, although there was not the slightest suggestion of bad faith on the part of Mr. Kerr.

Sec. reported that he had paid out £44 18s. 9d. in prize-money for the recent open show, and that he hoped to produce the balance sheet for the show at the next meeting. Mr. G. H. Pickard was nominated for membership. Chairman handed over the prize-money won at the open show to winners present.—A. R. Coe.

By J. NORTH.

Helpful Hints on Management, Pairing, Breeding and Rearing, which should make the Hobby of Canary Keeping easy of pursuit by the amateur, and containing information of interest to older hands.

YET the proportion of this ash to the whole amount would afford a basis for calculating the quantity of useless matter in the seed, because a relative quantity of material would pass through the bird without yielding any nourishment, and if the quantity of ash were large it would be seen at once that the seed from which it was taken was not suitable, or not rich enough in nourishment.

But fanciers generally cannot be expected to fully interest themselves in such details, and are mostly satisfied to base their estimate of the food value of any seed, salad, or soft-food on the manner in which their birds thrive and keep in condition on any given material.

Seeds, Their Qualities and Their Uses.

Still we look upon it as part of our work to acquaint fanciers with seeds or foods that are valuable, and warn them against relying on such as have no natural worth, as well as against those that had it, but through one way or another have lost it.

It must also be noted that there is a difference between the food suitable for one season and that of another season. There can be no doubt that in the wild state all the Finches, and other birds, are guided in the selection of their food by inherent instinct, picking up the single grains here, and flying there for more, exercising in the meantime all their capacities of wings and eyes.

Although in confinement these faculties are to some extent dwarfed or undeveloped, yet their tastes are radically the same, except that when in cages they have not the facilities for leaving any kind they might not want, and seeking others that they did.

The food each tribe would select would be that most suitable for repairing wasted tissue of body and for strengthening exhausted energy, and it must be the aim of aviculturists to keep the supply up to normal pitch. It is quite possible that in past times this has been done and even exceeded, and may be one of the many causes that led to variation and ultimate establishment of the sectional classes as we see them in exhibitions to-day.

Speaking broadly, it may be said that canary seed is the "Staff of Life" to Canaries, rape seed is the Finches' "meat," and hemp-seed the "fat" of the strenuous workers. They must all have bread—canary seed. Some get mostly all meat—the rape seed; while the extra richness of such fatty seed as hemp has its constant use in such small quantities at ordinary time, and in full measure at periods of breeding, rearing and moulting.

Seeds for Occasional Use.

Other seeds that are in use are millet, niger and linseed. The former has very poor feeding properties and should not be used except as a diluent in those cases wherever plain canary seed is found to be too fattening, but in the form of millet sprays it may be given to Canaries as a means of employment and amusement.

Niger seed is obtained from a yellow-petalled daisy-shaped flower, very much like a diminutive sunflower, and belonging to the same natural order of plants. This order is remarkably free from poisonous properties, and we have never known anything but good results accrue from its moderate use, when in a fresh and sweet state, but like most seeds belonging to flowers of its class it contains a good percentage of fat, which, of course, if gone rancid, may become injurious, just as any other rancid fat might, such as pure olive oil, or butter, or neat-oil.

As for linseed, or flax-seed, we have never found Canaries care for it very much. Linnets, Goldfinches, and their Canary Mules like it better, and it is a useful seed to give in small quantities at the finishing of the moult for the purpose of giving the final touch to the polish of feather so indicative of high condition in show birds.

There is considerable difference in the quality of canary seed, so there is of hemp seed, and as to the variety in quality and colour, and size of grain in different samples of seed sold as "rape," there is no end to it.

As a rule the largest seeds in canary and hemp, supposing they are plump, are the best, That which is called "Spanish canary seed" is much better in appearance than the small sort known as "Turkey seed," but as the price of the latter is considerably less when compared to Spanish, there is no reason why it should not be used, providing always that it is sweet in odour and free from unpleasant flavour; in fact, it is chiefly the show birds that live on the large-sized Spanish canary and bold hemp.

The small red German summer rape seed is much to be preferred to any other. It is very mild and sweet in flavour, while much of the dark, large rape seed is strong and acrid, much too coarse in quality for delicately constituted cage birds, although for wild birds or occupants of spacious aviaries it might be serviceable.

THE JAY AS A PET BIRD.

By E. B.

Telling how to feed and house a beautiful British bird which makes a most intelligent pet.

WITH its fawn-coloured plumage, black and white markings on wings and head, and patch of bright blue on its wings, the Jay is decidedly a handsome bird; and, as it is also very intelligent, it makes a most interesting pet.

Though few of these birds learn to talk really well they are all good mimics. It is quite a mistake to suppose that their talking will be improved by splitting the tongue—this is a useless as well as a very cruel practice, for birds speak from the throat, and not with the tongue, and the idea that their talking powers are improved by such a brutal proceeding has long been exploded.

When at liberty Jays generally live in the woods, where their harsh voice and light colour make them very conspicuous. They are inquisitive and garrulous (hence their name Garrulus glandarius), and yet by their great wariness many of them escape the keepers' guns, and in some districts they are quite common.

The Fate of the Wild Jays.

These birds, though generally so noisy, become perfectly silent in the nesting season; probably it is owing to this that the nests escape the sharp eyes of the gamekeeper, who, if he be ignorant of their habits, thinks, no doubt, that all the Jays have left his woods. When he finds them within shot he shows no mercy, knowing their predilection for eggs and young birds; and many a Jay helps to decorate the "keepers' larder"; but as a rule they are too cunning to be easily stalked.

It is strange that such a common bird as the Jay, and one so frequently kept as a pet, should be so little understood; and yet there are probably few birds so woefully mismanaged. Many of those who wish to keep them think that all they need is a small cage, in which they can hardly turn round, and in which they certainly cannot expand their wings, a diet of bread, hemp seed and acorns, with an occasional lump of raw meat, and more or less dirty water to drink.

In spite of all that has been written on the subject there are still, unfortunately, many who labour under the delusion that any bird, from Wren to a Raven, will live on "soaked bread and hemp seed," and when the unlucky birds die, as die they do, their owner simply says, "It must have been hurt before," and cannot see that any responsibility for its death rests with him.

When a Jay has been kept for a few weeks under these conditions what a miserable plight the poor bird is in! Its plumage rough and dirty, wings and tail broken and frayed, and feathers puffed out—even if it escapes dying in a fit, it cannot be a pleasure either to itself or to its owner. And yet by the exercise of a little thought and common sense this bird might easily have been kept for years in absolutely perfect health and plumage.

How to Feed a Jay.

In a wild state the Jay finds food in many forms, and few things come amiss to him in confinement. He will eat spiders, worms, cockchafers and other insects, fruit, beech-mast, acorns, frogs, mice, eggs, young birds, and small reptiles, and he will appreciate any of these as an addition to his diet in captivity; and they will greatly improve his health and plumage.

A good principal food for a caged jay may be made from barley meal mixed with raw hen's eggs until just crumbly moist, with ants' eggs added; or hard-boiled egg and stale bread-crumbs mixed with a good insectivorous food and a few ants' eggs.

If meat is given it must be used very sparingly and finely chopped, or cramp and fits may follow; but perhaps the best way is to give the bird a bone to pick, thus providing amusement and food at the same time.

Young birds can be hand-reared on these artificial foods with a very little finely-chopped lean beef added, but they must be carefully and regularly fed and not crammed, or they will be weedy and never make large and vigorous birds. It is well worth while to take this trouble, as hand-reared birds are so much tamer than those which are wild caught, and young ones learn so much quicker than old ones. Young birds which have left the nest may be distinguished by the iris, which is pale blue, while in adults it is brown. It changes colour at the first moult.

The Jay is such a large bird that it is necessary to give it plenty of room, or it cannot be kept in good plumage. It will look very handsome in an aviary, or may be allowed the run of the house and garden if sufficiently tame; but if kept in a cage, this should be large enough to allow it to open its wings when hopping from perch to perch, as this helps to expand its wings and keep it in good health.

The Proper Cage Described.

The cage should be five or six feet long, two feet wide, and three feet high. It will look well with the inside enamelled pale green (three thin coats), and the outside either painted with brunswick black or stained and varnished. Enamel answers much better than whitewash, as it can be washed with soap and water, and the pale green tint shows up the delicate colours in the bird's plumage.

The cage should have three fairly thick perches running from front to back, two above and one in the middle of the cage rather lower. It should have a door in the wire front large enough to admit the hand and arm, or a better arrangement still would be to have the whole front removable for cleaning and painting.

A deep zinc tray answers better than a wooden one, which is liable to warp, and it should be thickly covered with sand, bran, or fine peat moss litter. The food should be put in china drawers slipped in from the front of the cage, the holes they pass through being too small to allow the bird to escape when they are removed.

Jays are very fond of bathing, and their bath should be large and shallow enough for them to get right in; an enamel dish or large garden saucer is suitable, but it must be remembered that some of the latter are porous, and it is very unhealthy for any bird to have his cage always wet.

Jays have nested several times in garden aviaries, but the young birds are not always reared, probably owing to the lack of insect food. Many birds besides Jays might safely be let out when their young ones hatch to find their natural food, and they would then probably rear their brood. When the young were fledged they would be more likely to live on the artificial food, and before they left the nest the old ones could be shut in again.

As an example of the powers of mimicry possessed by the Jay a recent letter to "Country Life" may be quoted. In this the writer, Mr. R. Chislett, says: "Two of the three birds which I once rescued from the hands of a keeper, and which I brought home and reared successfully, made very amusing pets for several years. Every sound they heard with any frequency was mimicked. The Jays would bark like a dog, or howl and spit so successfully that we often imagined a cat to be in the aviary. They also learned several combinations of whistling notes with which they were greeted at feeding times, and a double-toned school bell, which regularly tolled in their hearing, was imitated to perfection, including the "ring" of the metal. Mice and sparrows which came to share the food of the Jays were often seized and eaten, one of the most comical recollections I have of them being the mental picture of the larger one, crest erected, hopping from perch to perch, uttering the double bell note, with a long, thin tail in his beak which, together with a small piece of skin, was all that remained of a mouse."

A Day with a Bird-Catcher Friend.

By W. LIDGETT.
Hon. Sec., Newark C.B.S.

ALWAYS fascinated with everything appertaining to birds, either in their wild state or in captivity, I was persuaded when purchasing some birds from a catcher friend to have a day with him and his nets, and see some of the haunts of the Linnet and Goldfinch, of which there are several within a few miles of the writer's home.

Shortly after six o'clock on the morning appointed my friend arrived to meet me, and although it was hardly daylight he looked, if equipment had anything to do with it, as though he had been up some hours before to get ready, although he assured me it only took him a very few minutes to get his pack ready. Off we started, my friend looking like a pedlar more than anything else I could think of, a large bag upon his back, well covered from sight as to the contents inside, and, except for an occasional twitter, he might have been going on any errand whatever.

Making Ready.

After a cycle ride of about eight or nine miles we came to a place where he had previously caught both Goldies and Linnets on different occasions; this time, however, Goldfinches were his game. I intently watched him unpack his nets and birds, and, being an amateur where bird catching is concerned, I was content to stand aside and let him do his business himself, as unskilled help is more often in the way than otherwise.

His nets set to his satisfaction, about 15 yards from the side of the hedge, and about 30 yards from a large patch of thistles, and his call birds in position, we retired to the shade of the hedge, well under cover. I lighted a cigarette and waited side by side with the professional catcher for the first flight of birds to come over. It was rather a dull morning at first, but the sky was clearing, and gave promise of being fine ere long.

After about an hour's waiting no Goldies had come into sight, so I suggested I should have a stroll round. "Well, if you must straighten your legs," he said, "keep well to the hedgeside, for if any birds come in sight and you are walking in the centre of the fields they will go over."

A Novice's Indiscretion.

I had strolled about for a quarter of an hour or so, and was thinking of returning to see how things were getting along, when I heard the well-known note of the Goldfinch. I looked up, and could discern about nine or ten finches flying above the thistles. Now this is where I should have kept still, laid down on the grass, and waited.

Instead, I shouted to warn my friend that Goldies were coming over, and no sooner had my voice been raised than the finches also did likewise. Up they flew with a few merry twitters, and off they went.

I returned to the bird catcher's side and bewailed our ill-luck. "What on earth did you kick up a row like that for?" he asked. "Those birds were just dropping for a feed, and now perhaps we shall never see another all day." I was sorry I had spoilt the game with my thoughtlessness, but it was done, and there was no good in crying over spilt milk, so I sat down, and pulled out of my pocket two or three old copies of CAGE BIRDS which I had taken with me to pass away the time if it hung heavy, for an hour waiting for anything is like an age if one has nothing to do.

A Second Chance Accepted.

My friend sat rather gloomy, thinking, perhaps, he would have done better not to have invited me with him, as I certainly seemed to have proved something of a spoil sport. But the day was young yet, and before another hour had passed again the call of finches was heard. Then he touched my arm as a warning lest I should again get excited.

I had, however, learned my lesson for that day, and was as keen to see him get a catch as he was himself. His call birds, hearing the wild ones about, started singing, and an old mule he had with him fairly beat anything I had heard in the field for song and voice; he fairly stood upon his toes to make himself heard above the two Goldies which had also been brought.

The birds came well over the bed of thistles, and I thought they were going to settle in the hedge where we were sheltering, but with a quick turn they were over the nets. They seemed to remain stationary in the air for just a few seconds, and then five of them dropped right into the space where our nets were spread.

A quick pull of the line, and before I had time to rise to my feet my pal was almost up to his nets. Five birds were soon taken out and transferred to the store cage, and the nets were re-set.

We went back again to our shelter and examined the catch. Four Greypates and an old hen. The hen was immediately set at liberty. "It is no use to me, and she will probably breed another season if let go," was his comment. Twice more before noon were the nets pulled, and eleven Goldies in all taken. Then we packed up the traps and made for home. I shall record this as another day well spent in the haunts of the wild birds, and it will live in memory, as do other enjoyable days I have spent in the open with nature, for when I can spare a short time from business and my birds at home nothing pleases me more than to get away to the fields and enjoy nature in its wild state.

Correspondence.

Printed "Hints" Cards for Dealers.

SIR,—I noticed Mr. MacMillan's suggestion that bird dealers should give printed cards with directions concerning the feeding of Canaries. May I suggest, through CAGE BIRDS that the same should be done for British birds. I am sure no bird is worse treated than the Linnet. It is shut up in one of those wretched "back cages," far too small for any bird to live in, and it is very often given mixed seed bought from a small grocer, who has little sale for it, and it in consequence goes stale. A bath is a necessity which should not be omitted. I wish CAGE BIRDS the best of luck.

K. C. WARRAND.

Golden Pheasants for a Public Park.

A Generous Offer from Dr. Lovell Kays.

SIR,—In the summer time a Mr. Simpson (now Gunner Simpson) came to see my birds, and I promised him some Golden Pheasants for a public park, I am inclined to think it was Preston (Lanes). If you would kindly insert this letter in your valued periodical, CAGE BIRDS, it may chance to meet his or his friend's eye; unfortunately I have mislaid his letters. I shall be very happy to send a couple of cocks to any public collection if somebody in charge will communicate with me. I am joining up on the 17th, but I will leave instructions at home for the birds to be sent off provided we can find a suitable receptacle.

(DR.) L. LOVELL KEAYS.

Another One Missing.

SIR,—I despatched three birds to a Darlington fancier on Friday last, Nov. 10th, by the 9.45 p.m. boat (L.N.W.R.) from North Wall, Dublin. I have received a letter this morning, Nov. 12th, acknowledging the receipt of two birds only. The third, a clear yellow hen, had been stolen en route, as it was quite impossible for it to escape from the box.

I read in this week's CAGE BIRDS that Mr. J. O. Williams's Machynlleth Goldfinch was stolen on the way home from Manchester. Possibly the same "gentleman" helped himself to both, and I will be very pleased to hear from any of your readers who can give information concerning it, and I would suitably reward anyone who can lead to the conviction of the thief.

HUGH WILLIAMS.

An Oliver Twist.

SIR,—I am keenly interested in the above correspondence, and I thank the gentlemen who have replied to the first querist. I think "Tom Tits" receipt all right, only I was wondering if the meal goes sour, as I know nothing about meals. I had the previous correspondence on the subject some years ago cut out for reference, but unfortunately it got destroyed. I myself have used nothing but egg and biscuit or bread for years, and my results have been very unsatisfactory, so I am determined to give a trial to something else next season. Now is the time to discuss these things, as if breeders want to produce young birds cheaply the price of eggs next season, if this one was any criterion, will put them out of all bounds. I hope to see a few more answers on this interesting subject.

C. C. DAVIDSON.

A Veteran Chaffinch.

Its Record Doubted.

SIR,—Where your reporter of Sheffield Show, got his information I don't know, but with all respect to the owner and the bird, someone is a long way out in the calculations as it is not 12 years since Mr. Walsh benched his first bird, the 3rd Skylark at Ecclesfield Show. I can give day, month, and year. He then got a few softbilled British, and it was some considerable time after this that he bought the Chaffinch with a few more; I can give all details it necessary. Where was the first show it won at for Mr. Walsh? It was in show condition when he got it, and had been successfully shown, but which are the leading shows at which it has won? I don't think it has been at a hundred shows, and certainly has not won every time out by a long way. Give us facts when records get in print. Why I write is on account of a little argument, and we want proof.

R. D. PARLETT.

Been Reading "Eggs Wanted," Perhaps!

SIR,—I have a Parrot which has laid six eggs this year—June 3, June 7, Aug. 4, Aug. 8, Oct. 28, and Oct. 31. She is 18 years of age, and in good condition. I have kept Parrots over 40 years, and never experienced this before. I should very much like to know if this is a record.

MATTHEW WILSON.

Clashing of Show Dates.

The Proposed Meeting at Cardiff.

SIR,—Seeing so much in your valuable paper about calling a meeting of Welsh secretaries at Cardiff show on Nov. 30, re clashing of show dates, I may tell you we discussed this matter at our last meeting, and I was selected to represent Abertillery C.B.S. It would be a wise thing if Mr. Banks, Cardiff, could arrange a meeting on that date and let each secretary represent his own society and thoroughly discuss this problem, for much could be done at a meeting of this kind. Personally I think every society should keep its own date, holding its show a bit later in the year if possible.

Fresh Fields for Fanciers.

Why Not Cage-bred Greenfinches?

SIR,—I heartily agree with all M. R. T. has to say on the subject of cage-bred Greenfinches. I have a friend who a few years ago had a pair of Greenfinches which brought up some Canaries, but unhappily fell victims to a cat. As I am going to make an outdoor aviary in the country, I shall try in the spring to breed some aviary-bred Greenfinches.

W. L. PARSONS.

Immense Possibilities Outlined.

SIR,—I was much interested in the letter signed M. R. T., under the heading "Fresh Fields for Fanciers," and your footnote to same. I have often thought what a pity it was that some of our native Finches could not be brought into a state of complete domestication, in the same way as the Canary has been.

The difficulty of accomplishing this would seem to lie in the matter of organisation, as it is evident that the co-operation of a considerable number of breeders would be necessary. It seems to me, however, that if a feasible scheme of co-operation could be thought out, and set working, the domestication of many of our more easily managed species would advance rapidly.

I would like to ask the opinion of the readers of CAGE BIRDS as to the following idea: Would it not be possible to start a register of the names and addresses of all who were sufficiently interested in the subject to make a definite attempt in the direction of domestication? It might be called the "Domestic British bird breeders' register," or some less cumbrous title conveying a similar meaning. The first year's register would require nothing more than the following particulars, which could be sent in on a post card.

(1) Name and address of intending breeder; (2) The species he proposes to attempt breeding; (3) A brief statement as to the objective he would set himself to breed for, whether (a) the production of higher class show specimens of the species he was working with, but still birds conforming to the recognised standard of that species, or (b) the encouragement of divergence from the normal type in any given direction, such as albinism, cinnamon colouring, longer tails, improved song, etc., etc., with a view to starting new domestic "breeds" of the original species.

The organiser of the register could collect the cards sent in up to an arranged date, then make a printed list from them, and furnish each of the breeders in this list with a copy of same. I should imagine that a very small subscription from each proposing breeder (say 6d. each) would furnish funds for doing this.

I have no doubt that the main work of such a register or association, if it came to be formed, would be centred around one or two popular and easily bred species; probably the Greenfinch and the Goldfinch would be favourites, especially the first named, but there could be no harm in giving people who preferred other species the chance of ascertaining, through the register, whether they could find a sufficient number of sympathisers to make it worth their while to commence experiments.

Siskins, Redpolls, and Bullfinches can all be bred tolerably easily in captivity, whilst if the Linnet were to become a subject of experiment, this species would seem a likely one for development in the direction of superior song, after the pattern of the Roller Canary.

My idea of how the thing would work after the register had been started is something after this fashion—each individual breeder would start in quite a small way, say with from one to three pairs, with a few of the best specimens of his chosen species that he could procure. For the first few seasons there would probably be little to be gained, in fact, rather the reverse, from much interchanging of stock. The better plan would probably be for each breeder to in-breed considerably from his own original stock, but later, when he began to think that his in-breeding had reached such a limit that fresh blood was a necessity, he would then, instead of having recourse to wild blood, look up, through the register, some other breeder of the same species who had been working along the same lines as himself, and purchase or exchange a bird with him. Both strains would have commenced a tendency towards domestication.

The same idea, carried further as time went on, would bring more and more breeders together. Breeders under section (a), those trying to produce extra good typical birds, would probably see no harm in taking an occasional dip back into the wild blood when they came across an exceptionally good wild-caught specimen to breed from, but even they would be well advised to avoid this as much as possible, as there is little douht that birds with a pedigree of domestication behind them would become much more plastic, and be easier to breed towards desired show points than those closely descended from wild stock.

On the other hand, breeders in section (b), those anxious to produce really domestic "breeds," should, after the first start, sedulously avoid a wild cross. Those desiring changes of plumage might well try to commence with white, cinnamon, or pied specimens, and, at the beginning, in-breed strongly to these birds. I hope I have succeeded in making my idea clear, and will conclude by saying that if your readers should think there is anything in it there is ample time to prepare such a register before next breeding season.

SIR,—I thank you for the honour you have done me in placing my Yellow Norwich cock on the front page of CAGE BIRDS. In looking through some books I came across CAGE BIRDS No. 1 issue. At that time we bird fanciers were very proud to have a paper provided for us entirely for cage birds, but when we think of what that paper was at that time we must acknowledge our baby has grown to a marvellous size now. It becomes more interesting and helpful to all fanciers every week. The correspondence columns are very helpful, and the oldest as well as the youngest fanciers can learn a great deal from those pages, and if we do sometimes stray just a little from the subject in discussion, we have our Editor holding the reins just to pull us in a bit.

Norwich Canaries at Manchester.

Are Norwich Plainheads Deteriorating?

SIR,—I am sure all Plainhead fanciers will appreciate the chatty news submitted by "Sub Rosa," particularly those who hitherto have regularly visited some of the leading shows, but who now, by stress of the unusual circumstances, only get there in imagination. The Welshmen from the little village he mentions will hardly bless him for giving away their place of origin, and, of course, I ought to say something seeing he has raked into the light again a matter that concerns "more dark than light"; in fact, I say even now that it cannot be kept too dark, and is one of those birds that need not be clear down to the skin.

However, if nothing else, the incident will serve very nicely to scourge some everlasting grumblers who say "present-day Norwich do not wear well." It was in February, 1915, when I handled the chest-marked buff cock, the property of Mr. W. Crawshaw, and gave him what he deserved. To-day he still makes good; and "Sub Rosa" says that even Solomon as a show bird would not be in it; at least, that is what I gather, and I am sure he is about right. Anyhow, I hope "Sub Rosa" will oblige with more of this news, which reinforce the show reports very nicely, not that I am grumbling at the latter's weakness in any way, for I realise that in the space at the time at command, even a "Thomas Curtin," or a "Beach Thomas" even were they "inbred," could not serve up the bill of fare better than a CAGE BIRDS report.

How Non-Fanciers May be Made Fanciers.

SIR,—Having for the last two years become a regular reader of CAGE BIRDS, I have noticed with special interest the comments in your paper concerning the scarcity of Canaries. I should like to see some of the prominent and well-to-do men in the fancy come forward, and encourage the working-man to devote his spare time to the breeding of our valuable songsters.

For instance, in the district (Barking) in which I am living there is never a show of birds of any description, yet the residents are mostly working men, who no doubt would enter the fancy with enthusiasm if only given a helping hand by someone of distinction in the cage bird world.

Why not form clubs with the idea of instructing novices, and assisting those of limited means? Let some large breeder offer as prizes one or two pairs of good class birds, or some useful necessity in the breeding of birds. Such prizes I believe would be greatly appreciated by the fancier whose capital is limited by these terrible times, and at the same time would be a first class advertisement for the donor, and give the working man an opportunity of getting a good strain of birds, to compete in the business of Canary breeding.

£40 Worth Sold from One Advertisement.

SIR,—I am pleased to see your correspondence re "Famine in Canaries" kept alive in CAGE BIRDS, and I should like to add my recent experience. There is undoubtedly a famine in Canaries, both for song birds and exhibition stock. Within six days of the issue of CAGE BIRDS containing my advert. of Norwich on Oct. 28, I had sold over £40 worth of birds, and had I had more of the quality birds enquired for there would hardly have been a limit to what I could have sold. I have also been visited by dealers in want of songsters, and they tell me the demand is greater than the supply.

H. W. VALENTINE.

Do Dealers Offer Fair Prices?

SIR,—Allow me to thank the correspondents who replied to my letter, "Do Dealers Offer Unfair Prices?" in CAGE BIRDS of Nov. 4. I think Mr. Mitchelmore's advice as to the best way to dispose of my birds is a little late, seeing that I have been a breeder and a regular reader of CAGE BIRDS for eight years, and have also advertised through its columns with satisfactory results. I am also aware of the ways and means dealers have to dispose of their stock, and of knowing their customers, and I know it is not done for nothing, but the point I contend and stick to is this: If the prices of Canaries are gradually rising as stated in the article on "Famine in Canaries," and as "London Dealer" states in his letter, there are still some fair dealers (which I will grant) then we hope they will raise their prices in proportion, and so give our wounded soldiers who are broke in the war a cheerful heart to start in the Fancy; otherwise I am afraid the cry will go out: "Why is the Canary Fancy Dying Out?"

H. O. CORBETT.

The Lie Direct.

SIR,—Firstly, in answer to Mr. Howard's question, as to how long I have been in the Canary trade? About three years, and during that short time I have handled more Canaries than Mr. Howard or any other English dealer has in ten years. Respecting your article "The Famine in Canaries," I take very great exception to the statement therein—as follows.—

"It is true that many of these were Rollers of Continental origin, merely passing through the hands of the dealer as part of the consignment."

This is a lie from beginning to end. Every Canary in that 4,000 odd consignment was bought and paid for, and I feel sure none were of Continental origin. Such a statement must have emanated from one with a fervid imagination and a disordered brain.

JOHN D. HAMLYN.

[We have allowed Mr. Hamlyn to use his own language in stigmatising a fair remark as being a lie from beginning to end. Among the consignment of Canaries which was sent to New York per s.s. "Manchuria" were many Roller Canaries. If Mr. Hamlyn says that all these birds were English bred we must, of course, accept his statement, but we certainly thought we knew a Continental Roller when we saw and heard him in his hundreds. We may perhaps be permitted to say that in "feeling sure that none of these birds were of Continental origin," Mr. Hamlyn displays more credulity than we have ever given him credit for during some twenty years of acquaintance with him. —Editor, CAGE BIRDS.]

ROUND THE BIRD SHOWS.

Manchester's stripling is forging ahead. Its three years' record reads: 1914, 480; 1915, 549; 1916, 819. A wonderful tale of progress, and one of which its executive need well be proud. At Ardwick the Rector, Rev. C. E. Gaul, is the president; the Rev. J. W. Wragg, the curate, is chairman of the committee, and that they are no mere ornamental figureheads is shown by the way in which they helped in the unpacking, staging, and general stewarding on Saturday last; Ardwick is happy in having two such leaders. Other members of the executive who worked with zeal and enthusiasm were Messrs. J. Robinson, A. E. Long, F. Moss, D. Fletcher, T. Peters, S. T. Oldham, G. Chilton, T. Lane, A. Blinston, T. Warburton, F. Taylor, F. Walshaw, E. Redditt, C. H. Strafford, and J. Schofield. Mr. A. E. Thorpe, the secretary, and Mr. J. Spencer, the treasurer, acted as show managers, and everything moved with an ease and celerity which spoke much for the careful thought they had given to the organisation beforehand, whilst their urbanity and courteousness to all who had to come in contact with them did much to ensure that success which was so well deserved and so worthily achieved.

The entry was testimony to the confidence with which the Ardwick executive have inspired the Fancy, and together with the splendid attendance should mean that the committee will be able to make a by no means negligible contribution to the Blind Soldiers' Fund.

To the magnificent total of 819 the open Yorkshires and Norwich contributed no less than 402, and these, with Borders and A.O.V., made Mr. House's little lot up to 506, but he got through them in good time, and then took the Members' Yorkshires to assist Mr. Beswick.

The Yorkshires were a wonderful lot, and, when one considers that the classificatiou was somewhat old-fashioned, the entry was astonishing. Present-day exhibitors are so liberally catered for that they generally light shy of shows where clears, ticks, and marks, all compete together, as they did here, both in Yorkshires and Norwich. In the champion Yorks, the competition was very keen, and little indeed divided one bird from another. Mr. Dykes' brace of winners were gems indeed. Dr. Craig's famous yellow, which suffered the fortunes of war at Sheffield, was on top again here, but his famous Cinn.-mkd. hen had to go down before a trio of very smart dames. Mr. Hartley's young buff, and Mr. Radley's young hen are birds that look capable of notching many another victory.

The names of S. Cook, Crawshaw, Hirst, and Kaberry are sufficient guarantee that the quality was all there in the Norwich, whilst the exhibits from Messrs. Turner, Strafford, Fields, Hartup, J. Cook and Peters made the more famous gallop all the way. Whilst the average merit was good, we must say that a number of Norwich were much too feathery. An ideal Norwich is a fine-feathered bird. Profuse feathering is all right in a C.B., but in a Norwich Plainhead we do not want feathery thighs, and overlapping waistcoats. The clothes of a Norwich should fit like those of a "knut." Borders were a nice little lot; we particularly admired the greens of Mr. Middleton.

In the Amateur section the Yorkshires shown by Messrs. Riley, Drew, Nooman, Radford, Talbot, Wilson, Fletcher, and Farrell were very representative of the breed, and they had not much to spare the one from the other, but amongst the "also rans" were many that were much too large to be considered ideal Yorkshires. Excellent though such be in the stock room, they can hardly be styled exhibition specimens.

The same remark applies to many of the amateur Norwich, yet amongst them were some toppers. Mr. Chippindale's yellow would have been well in the first flight had he been amongst the champions. The worthy president won in adult hens with a most charming yellow, which was followed by a regular wax model of a buff from Mr. Rushton. Mr. Gaul's win here ends his career as an amateur, and he will now have to test his powers against those of his clerical confrere, Mr. Wragg. Some magnificent birds were shown in the Norwich by Messrs. Parrin, Fox, Cleaver, Dean, Crabtree, Mawdsley, Calverley, and Lane, and we shall expect to see some of these gentlemen soon following Mr. Gaul into the champion section. The five amateur Norwich classes had an average of a score a-piece, a fact upon which the N.P.C. is to be congratulated; not that the exhibitors were all members, because there was no competition for one of the club specials, but for the grand field for recruiting.

Lizards were splendid. One of the finest collections we have seen for a few years, far exceeding the club show of last week, and running the great Manchester show a close race. Mr. Beswick handled them very carefully, and his placings left little room for cavilling. The prizes were well scattered. Compared with Manchester and the club show there were some changes in position, but nothing very striking. The most striking feature of the collection was the excellence of the hens. They were indeed beautiful. Special for the best Silver went to Mr. Ollerenshaw's broken cap, a grandly feathered little fellow, with very bold distinct spangling. Mr. Barnes's brace of Gold hens had many admirers. We noticed one or two of these spangled ladies had joined the ranks of the choristers. Lancashires were as moderate as the Lizards were excellent. It is sad to see this grand old breed gradually, but surely, falling away. What are the L.L.P.A. and the L.C.C. doing to stop the rot? Presently it will be too late, and the Lancashire will be classed with those things which have lived on earth, but are now extinct.

British exhibitors did not respond to the appeal of the executive as the generous classification deserved, and four of the classes had only half prize money, whilst three had to be content with the "sliding scale," not reaching the limit of six. Still, if the entry was not all it should have been, there was no mistaking the high degree of excellence to be seen in those exhibits which were on show. Mr. Leadbeater's Goldfinch and Linnet were most beautifully staged and of great merit. Mrs. Dalton's Siskin and Mr. Oldham's Twite made a stern fight, and either could have won. Mr. Caunt's winning Greenfinch was a stormer, whilst his Bullie deserved more competition. "Chick! Chick!!" There was some polish on the half-dozen specimens which came from the city of lace, and they went to the top of their classes deservedly. Mr. Parlett's Sheffield winning jonque Goldfinch Mule headed a good class of Darks. The third in this class was a gem of a Greenie-Canary, only catalogued at £2, and we heard several of the keen-eyed brigade had spotted it. The second was Mr. Oldham's Sheffield winning Siskin-Canary. The quality was hot here. In the Lights Mr. Oldham's famous five-pointed yellow went down before a very nice four-pointed buff of Mrs. Hubbard's. In British Hybrids Mr. Oldham's Linnet-Bullie won hands down, but where were the Hybrids that should have come?

CHELTENHAM.

A Fine Entry, Fine Gate, and a Fine Sales

Cheltenham C.B.S. held its annual open show on Wednesday and Thursday Nov. 1st and 2nd, at the Fine Art Rooms, High Street. The two rooms utilised were entirely free from draught, spacious and lofty, and with a good top light so that every bird could be seen to advantage. Entries came up well, upwards of 700, Crests, Norwich, Yorkshires and British, being extra good classes. Foreign were disappointing in numbers, but the quality right throughout the show was A1.

Mrs. Montague Scott, London, sent a strong team of Crests and Crestbreds, and carried off most of the spoils, and Messrs. Houghton, Tristem, Stubbs and Spillman were well represented in the Norwich classes. Yorkshires were a level lot, and classes were well filled, but some of the birds seemed somewhat lacking in style and swagger. Borders averaged thirteen per class and contained some grand specimens, Mr. Madagan, the local enthusiast, playing a strong hand, his winning yellow cock and yellow and buff hens being much admired. Some grand British were staged, Mrs. Dalton's Redpoll, Mr. Chick's Hawfinch, Mr. Jeffrey's Linnet, and Mr. Poole's Bullfinch all being of outstanding merit, and the Hybrid classes contained some gems. Sales were good and there was plenty of money about for the right stuff, Mr. Tristem alone having no less than four claimed at ten pounds each, and Mr. Bastock's eye ticked Mule and some of the winning Crests changed hands at long prices. Who said the Fancy was dead?

Of the management we have many times in previous years had nothing but praise, and this year was no exception. Mr. A. J. Treasure held the secretarial reins and was supported by a good working band of stewards, with Mr. J. Madagan as show manager, so both exhibits and exhibitors had everything they desired for their comfort and well-being.

Mr. John Robson judged Crests, Mules, British and Foreign, Mr. J. H. Payne and H. W. Battye taking alternate classes of the Canaries other than Crests. An early start was made, and cards were up sharply after slips were handed in.

Specials winners: Crested C.C. (confined to members), best old Crest cock, Mrs. Montague Scott; hen, Miss Onslow; C.B. Ck., Smith; Hen, Evins Bros.; Crest, 1916, Mrs. Scott; C.B., Bewick; Yell. Crest, Evins Bros.; C.B. Smith. Best Nor. Cock, open, Houghton; Unflg., Houghton; Hen, Tristem.

CAMBUSLANG C.B.A.

Annual club show, Free Gardeners' Hall, Nov. 4. Entries were well up to previous years, quality was excellent, and the gate was good. The hall is very suitable for a cage show, being well lighted and free from draughts. The officers are a hard-working lot, and the show passed off without a hitch. Norwich cup and sp. best young bird was won by Mr. Jenkins with his cap mkd. yel. cock, a bird showing good Norwich properties, the Border cup and B.F.C.C. medal was won by Mr. Flemington with a nice var. yellow hen of nice quality; this bird also won sp. for best novice Border. The Mule cup and badge were won by the Sec., Mr. A. Crawford, with his Dark Goldie Mule, a very nice nat. col. bird, and the British Bird gold medal was won also by the Sec. with a lovely Waxwing. Mr. R. Davidson, Mossend, judged Canaries, and Mr. H. Jamieson, Glasgow, the remainder, and their awards were well received.

NORTH YORKSHIRE AND DURHAM FEDERATION.

First open show of this Federation of cage bird societies, Nov. 4, St. George's Hall, West Hartlepool. The hall is well lighted and free from draughts. This Federation was formed about four years ago and consists of seven cage bird societies: West Hartlepool, Middlesbrough, Stockton, Darlington, Shildon, Guisborough, and Redcar. The Sec., Mr. B. Smurthwaite, 4, Harland Place, Norton-on-Tees, would be willing to furnish any information concerning the Federation. The stewards for the judges were Mrs. Wellford and Mr. Stotbard for Norwich, Mrs. Watson and Mr. Pace for Yorks, and Messrs. Gray and Dodsworth for British. The ladies did useful work and seemed to thoroughly enjoy it, and many thanks are due to them for their assistance.

Others who worked hard to make the show a success were Messrs. Robinson (chairman West Hartlepool C.B.S.), Wellford, Heslop, Arnison, Ronald, Hall, and R. D. Wright. The latter, who is only 15 years of age, was of great assistance to the secretaries. Messrs. J. Wright and Watson acted as joint secretaries and did everything possible to make the show a success.

The exhibits numbered 688, which was fairly satisfactory for the first open show. Entries from non-members of the Federation might have been larger, but perhaps many did not know it was open to all. The birds were well staged and well cared for, and everything passed off without a hitch. The judges were: G. Simeson and T. Wright (Canaries), C. Waters (British, Mules and For.), and their awards left very little to complain of. British and Mules were a speciality of the show, both in numbers and quality, the hen British class being exceptionally good.

LEEDS ROLLER C.C.

Tenth annual show, Trinity Church Schoolrooms, Boar Lane, Leeds, Nov. 3-5. The best show in the history of the Club, both in number and financially. In the early morning there were visitors from Wigan, Accrington, Bolton, and Manchester, and after dinner there were many well-known faces in the Roller Fancy. Perhaps never since Roller shows were started in this country have so many recognised judges met together on one day. Among them were Messrs. Hesling, Rochuck, Olroyd, Wakefield; Massey, Kilshaw, Bolton; Wareing, Tottington; Walton, Leeds; and Tomlinson, Newcastle—truly a formidable combination, and all were lavish in their praise at the arrangements made by the Leeds members for the welfare of the exhibits. The hall, which is one of the best in the country for an exhibition of this kind, well lighted, and kept at a nice heat, was crowded in the afternoon. The delegates from the different clubs were on the scene early, and quickly got to work. Some of the exhibits were sent off by early trains because of the bad service, but later it rained in torrents, and it was decided to keep the rest of the birds over till Monday morning. Any exhibitors who may have been put to any inconvenience through the non-arrival of their exhibits can rest assured it was for their own benefit. Prize money, cards, and specials have been sent. If any exhibitor has been overlooked, kindly notify.

A BROKEN LEG.

G. C.—It will be much too late to attempt anything in the way of "setting" the limb by the time this reply can reach you. If you had sent your address with query a reply would have been sent by post, as the case was a very urgent one, but you have first of all allowed a week to elapse before writing, and then omit your address. The best thing you can now do is to keep the bird in a quiet place where it will not be disturbed by persons moving about near it, well strew the cage floor with sawdust to assist in keeping it clean and sweet, place food and water inside where the bird can get it with the minimum of muscular effort, and leave the remedy entirely to Nature. Do not attempt to handle the bird at all, nor flutter it about when attending to its wants, or cleaning out the cage. Leave it entirely to its own designs until you see it resume activity of its own accord. With regard to the long moulting, keep the cage in a fairly comfortable and equable place, and in addition to the usual seed diet give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with maw seed three times a week, and add to the drinking water 20 drops of chemical food every third day for a month. If the moulting has not ceased by the time the bird resumes activity, write again and repeat particulars, when I will advise you further.

YOUNG CANARIES PANTING.

A. Well-Wisher, D. S.—It would have been better if you had given a few more details as to how you feed and where you keep the birds. Still, the following general treatment should soon set matters right unless there is something radically wrong. Let me give one hint apart from treatment, which is, to avoid frequent handling of the birds with the object of examining them. The sexes should now be kept separate, but several birds of the same sex may be kept in a large cage if more convenient, for the sake of the extra space they have for exercise. Keep them in a bright, healthy position, but see that they are free from cold direct draughts, sudden fluctuations of heat and cold, and fumes of burning lights in the evenings. Keep cages well strewn with clean gritty sand, and offer the bath twice a week, on bright, mild days as far as possible, and always in the early part of the day. In addition to the staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape, give about half a teaspoonful per bird of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, black rape and broken groats every second day, and on the alternate days give, for each bird, a morsel of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar. Give a small spray of watercress, or any similar green food, three times a week as long as you can get it in a fit condition to use, and after that substitute a little banana, sweet apple, or carrot. In the water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea every second day for a week, and after this give instead five drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight. Continue this treatment for a month, and if birds are not then quite well, write again and repeat particulars.

A LATE CLUTCH.

Reader.—Your best course is to take the eggs away, and keep the hen in a good-sized flight or aviary where she can get plenty of vigorous exercise through the winter months, and if out of sight and earshot of the cocks so much the better. Feed on a staple diet of plain canary seed only, keep all nesting receptacles and materials out of her sight, and limit her allowance of "extras" to a small teaspoonful of mixed seed once a week, and ditto of egg food, or any substitute you prefer. Give a morsel of green salad, when in season, four times a week, and at other times substitute a morsel of banana, sweet apple, or raw or boiled carrot. It is quite possible that she may continue laying casual eggs now and again during the winter, but there will be no need to worry about this. If it happens, throw the eggs away and mate her up as usual at the proper time next spring if she is still in good health and condition. As regards her not moulting, if she has hitherto been in a fairly comfortable room move her for a week or two to a decidedly colder one, but see that it is free from cold draughts and damp, and if that does not start the moult I would advise you to leave it to Nature, when it will probably come about early in the spring.

THE COLONY SYSTEM.

Ginner.—The so-called colony system of breeding Canaries refers to the method of turning a group—say, for example, two cocks and eight hens—into a room or some enclosed space where they are allowed to fly at liberty and mate up and breed according to their own designs; the place, of course, having been first fitted up with all the necessary conveniences as suggested in the reply to which you refer. In that reply the more general details only were given, the minutiæ being very variable in order to adapt the method to all the varying needs of each particular case, which may only present themselves to anyone on the spot. We do not publish a book dealing solely with this system, but the general management of the birds does not necessarily differ in any material way from what you will find given in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and as regards details of fitting up such rooms you will find much information and also illustrations in "Our Canaries," which would be an invaluable work for you. Rollers would succeed well under this treatment, and are as good a variety as any to begin with. The proximity of the stables is no real bar to breeding birds in an adjoining building, especially if they are kept in a sanitary condition, but they may increase the chances of mice becoming a nuisance. This, however, may be combated by treating the places to a course of the "Virus" remedy occasionally, keeping all foods and seeds in tin canisters or boxes, and the food and seed vessels in use on a raised pedestal or table, the legs of which are protected by a thin sheet of tin or zinc nailed closely around them six inches above the floor, so that mice cannot possibly climb them to get to the food on the table. If there is any particular point you are in doubt about, or do not understand, don't hesitate to write again and state your difficulty, and if you could enclose a rough plan or diagram of the room, showing position of windows and door, I may be able to give more definite details suited to your own case.

NO FEATHERS ON HEAD.

Bald Head.—If the hen is really a 1915 hatched one, it looks almost as if the baldness were inherited, or, rather, the tendency towards it, and if this were so the wiser course would be to reject the bird entirely as a stock bird. Try the following course of treatment for a month, which should set matters right if the complaint is not incorrigible. Keep in a fairly warm temperature, and see that the bird is not exposed to rapid extremes of heat and cold, and offer the bath in the early part of each bright, mild day. In addition to the staple seed diet give separately every third day a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained, dusted with flowers of sulphur, and then sprinkled with maw seed. On the following day add to the drinking water ten drops of lemon juice and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence, and next day give a morsel of banana and half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, linseed and broken groats. For local treatment well mix 20 drops of glacial acetic acid in a teaspoonful of glycerine and slightly moisten the bare place with a tip of a small feather dipped in this twice a week until the quills are showing well through the skin. Use it sparingly so as not to daub the surrounding feathers unnecessarily, and do not get it near the eyes.

TROUBLED WITH VERMIN.

K. M.—I take it that the vermin are the little dark red insects which we know as red-mites. Keating's is of very little use for them, as they harbour in cracks and crevices in or about the cage by day, and only come out to torment the bird at night. It is quite possible that they may be indirectly responsible for the protracted moulting, and you cannot expect the bird to resume its song until the effect of the moult is quite recovered from. To exterminate the mites dissolve half an ounce of camphor in a teacupful of paraffin. Then well clean out the cage, probing any cracks about which you see any white powdery substance adhering with a pin on to a sheet of white paper, and at once burn the debris. Then paint the cage all over inside and out with a small brush dipped in the prepared paraffin, working the fluid well into any cracks or open joints. Stand aside to dry, and repeat the operations next day, and again on the following day. Then, when quite dry, re-distemper and varnish, if necessary, and when quite dry after this the bird may be returned, as it will, of course, have been transferred to a temporary cage whilst these operations were being carried out. If no spare cage is available the cage may even, with care, be treated without removing the bird, except for the painting and varnishing, which must not be attempted without removing the bird. When dealing with the cage do not omit treating all fittings and appliances, and the place where the cage has hung in the same way at the same time. To help the moulting give in addition to the usual seed diet half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for two or three weeks, and on the alternating days add to the water 20 drops of chemical food.

BOOK ON CATCHING.

Constant Reader.—I do not know of any book dealing exclusively with the catching of wild birds. From time to time we have had some useful articles in CAGE BIRDS, with illustrations, written by men who have had experience. These are just what you require. If you have back numbers I would advise you to look them up. Our Nutshell booklets on the Goldfinch and Linnet also contain useful information upon catching. You can procure these from this office, post free at 2½d. each.

KEEPING A BLUE TIT.

Bird Lover.—I am glad you appreciate the weekly contents of CAGE BIRDS. You will not find the Blue Tit a difficult bird to keep in captivity. The size of cage is immaterial so long as it is roomy. The one you mention would do admirably, only see that the wires and feeding holes are not wide enough to allow him to get through. Do not attempt to keep more than one in a cage, as they do not agree. The water vessel can be hung outside. As to perches, for Tits I have always found a forked branch from a tree answer admirably. Fasten it in the cage so that the bird takes exercise when passing from one perch to another. Feed on a good brand of insectile mixture as a staple food (the one you mention will do nicely); in addition to this give hemp seed, poppy or maw, sunflower, smashed or cracked nuts, mutton fat or suet. Do not offer all these at once—ring the changes on them, giving a little at a time. You can also offer a piece of apple or other fruit. Any kind of small insects will be acceptable and of course, mealworms, grubs, gentles, and any other creepy things. If earth worms are offered they must be very small, and used sparingly.

PART-FEATHERED BIRDS.

W. P. Cullingford.—The cause of birds having white or pied plumage is the total or partial absence of pigment in the feathers and other parts. These birds are not Hybrids but pure species. Occasionally they resume their proper plumage during a subsequent moult. On the other hand a normally-coloured specimen will sometimes moult out partly white. This is generally caused through ill-health and lack of richness of colouring matter in the blood vessels. We have had instances lately of birds in captivity moulting out with light plumage after receiving a severe fright. As a rule the companions of light-coloured birds do not molest them, but I can easily understand the Jackdaws objecting to their fawn-coloured brother. There is something "uncanny" about 'Daws. They are not easily deceived and do not accept everything as quite all right in the same manner as other birds would. I fancy to them, the fawn-coloured companion would be looked upon with suspicion.

TRAINING BUDGIES.

Lover of Budgells.—Budgells can be taught several tricks. A favourite one is to haul up their seed and water. To teach them is not a difficult matter to any patient owner, but great care must be taken that the birds do not suffer from the want of food while learning. The manner of training is fully dealt with in our Nutshell booklet on the Sicklin Budgell and Twite, post free 2½d. from this office. There is not the space to spare to give you full particulars, so I would advise you to get the little book. The sample of seed sent is advisable, and the bird should do well on it with a little green food two or three times a week.

TREATMENT OF BULLFINCH.

Male Tear.—You appear to be feeding your bird correctly. Of course, when the privet berries are gone, you must offer fruit to take their place. I gather that your bird is not yet quite through the moult, and you will find as time goes on that the breast colour will become redder and brighter. When in captivity birds seldom come through the moult quite so rich in colour as in the open. Give a few sunflower seeds daily. These are better for the bird than much hemp. Your bird is too tame, which accounts for his showing "temper." If you could let him have a fly in a large aviary it would possibly cure him. Get our Nutshell on the Bullfinch; it will help you in your treatment.

BREEDING MULES AND HYBRIDS.

E. Goodwin.—To breed Mules and Hybrids from the same Goldfinch would require careful management, and you could not do it in one cage. Put the hens in different cages, then in the spring run the Finch with the Canary, and when she has gone to nest put him in with the Greenie. Do not hurry to get your Finch into condition. Let him come on gradually. Use the following staple food: Teazle 4 parts, canary 3 parts, hemp 2 parts, linseed, rape, sunflower, ½ part each. Get our Nutshell booklet on the Goldfinch, post free 2½d. It will give you many hints on feeding and management.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

ZEBRA FINCHES IN OUTDOOR CAGE.

C. W.—To winter birds successfully in outdoor cages needs much care and protection. There is a wide difference between outdoor cages and aviaries. In the latter, providing the shelter is weatherproof, they can be wintered without difficulty, but the former is a very different proposition. Cages so easily get saturated with wet from driving rain and sleet, and in consequence are more or less damp all the year round. I know one lady in the North who successfully keeps them in outdoor cages, but the latter are specially made, have hinged tops with wire netting beneath, so that in hot weather the roof can be raised and the birds enjoy light and air in suitable weather; the cages are deep from front to back, providing both retirement and shelter, and there is a sliding glass front, so that driving rain, sleet and wind can be kept out both in summer and winter. I rather gather from your query that your birds are feeling the wet, damp weather we have been passing through recently, and you would be well advised to give them a roomy cage in some cold room for their first winter. Put half a teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia into th drinking water (one fluid ounce) twice a week, and on intermediate days lightly colour the water with chemical food. Continue this treatment for a couple of months, when the birds should be toned up. Your dietary is about right, if it includes grit and cuttlebone.

BUDGERIGARS, ETC.

E. T.—The breeding season extends from April 1 to end of October, but of course all will depend upon the birds; they may not be ready before July, and in that case, if you let them, they may go on breeding to a later period. Young birds reared during the winter are not always robust. The only way to check breeding is to separate the sexes. You would do well to get our Nutshell, "Budgerigars," it will tell you all about the general management of these charming little Parrakeets. Pekin Nightingales sing most lustily during the nesting season, but they do not sing a great deal at other periods, though they utter their call note very frequently. Individual specimens vary considerably as to power of song; a good one is a treat—your suggestion as to a pair should secure best results. I think a Shama would suit you best, as it meets your requirements exactly, but of course you would not hang your cages outside in the winter. A Shama can easily be trained to fly about the room, and will return to its cage to rest when inclined to, putting a mealworm in its cage will secure its return whenever wanted. A Shama soon becomes tame and confiding, and soon learns to take a mealworm from the fingers even when flying loose about the room. A Gold-fronted Finch sucker would also "fill the bill," and its characteristics are similar to the above as to tameness, etc. It is also a good mimic of the songs of other birds.

AILING AMAZON.

A. J. R.—This bird will need care and attention all through the cold weather. Keep it in a fairly warm room, but not one where the temperature touches two extremes once or twice a day, owing to cooking, etc. Also there is generally a stuffy (stagnant) corner in most rooms, the Parrot must not occupy it. It must have warmth, ventilation and light, without either draught or stuffiness. I am pleased to note the considerable improvement, but you must persevere with the treatment, complete cure will be a work of time. Continue the fluid magnesia and cod-liver oil emulsion regularly, and in addition, say, for a couple of months, give the bird a little honey and borax daily; either thinly spread it on a piece of biscuit, or give it direct to the mouth from the end of a piece of stick or feather (only a clean utensil must be put into the box of mixture on each occasion); this will ensure the bird a clean mouth and throat. Diet as usual. Unless there should be other unfavourable developements, in which case write at once, report progress in a couple of months.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s 6d each bird; for reply direct, 2s 6d.; analysis, 2s. The Post Office regulation is that bodies of birds must be sent at the letter rate of postage, and must be packed in hermetically sealed receptacles which must themselves be enclosed in strong wooden, leather or metal cases. If this regulation be infringed the packets may be destroyed by the authorities. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

REPORT OF MEETING AT LEEDS.

A. E. M.—If you will kindly authenticate your report with your name and address, we shall be pleased to insert it—that is unless we receive in the meantime an official report from the hon. sec., as is usual.

THE SELLING CLAUSE IN SCHEDULES.

Novice (N. Wales).—The meaning of the selling clause in schedules is that exhibitors should state on the entry forms the price at which they are prepared to part with their birds. Of course, having stated their own price, they are bound to sell the bird if the price named is offered. An exhibitor may "reserve his birds from being sold at all" either by omitting to state the price or by expressly stating that they are not for sale. Another method is to quote the bird at £1,000, and then you would probably get a notice in the local paper that a bird "worth £1,000" was shown in such and such a class. In the latter case, however, if someone came along and claimed your bird at £1,000, you would have to lose it (not the thousand pounds but the bird).

"AUSTRALIAN GREY PARROT."

F. Pain.—Your bird is a Rose-breasted Cockatoo, an article on which appeared in our issue of last week. There is no such thing as an Australian Grey Parrot. The Grey Parrot, the bird which makes such a delightful pet and accomplished talker, is a native of South Africa, and articles on this bird also have appeared in our issues of the past few weeks. If you can get a Roseate Cockatoo to talk you will be lucky. An occasional specimen will pick up a word or two, but generally their vocal accomplishments consist in making the most horrible screams.

BIRD-CATCHING IN SHROPSHIRE.

J. Boothwood.—The Bullfinch is not named in the schedule of the Wild Birds Act of 1880 nor is it in the additions to the schedule made under the County of Salop order of 1904. Unless, therefore, the bird has been specially protected since the 1904 order you can take Bullfinches anywhere in your county. The Goldfinch on the contrary, is in the 1880 schedule, and is also in the list of birds protected throughout the year in your county. This means that no one can stop you taking a Bullfinch, but that you would be liable to prosecution if you were to catch a Goldfinch.

AN ALLEGATION OF DISHONESTY.

J. Crow.—Do you know that there is a law styled the Law of Libel? It would be a most dangerous matter to publish a statement imputing actual dishonesty against a person named, and surely you do not think we should take such a responsibility upon the authority of a letter sent without the writer's address. If you will authenticate your letter with your proper name and address, and send the fee as stimulated in our rules, we will write to the person named, but more than this we are quite unable to do.

Respecting the "Manchuria" consignment some three weeks ago, consisting of 4,000 odd birds, I beg to state that the whole of the above consignment—with the exception of 144 birds sent over by a Norwich firm—were my sole property, and purchased by me in this country. Some people seem to forget that I hold all the cheques which have been paid through my bank to local dealers, these same cheques being evidence of the number of birds that were bought, paid for, and from whom purchased.

THESE ARE SIMPLE IRRESISTIBLE FACTS.

During the last two weeks 2,000 Canaries have been purchased. It pleases me to say that in making such an extensive purchase not one single deduction or any dispute has occurred with any sender.

SECRETS
of Famous Canary Breeders
YOURS for only 1/- down

HOW well-known Canary Fanciers bred their prize-winning birds—birds literally worth their weight in gold—how they trained them—the foods used. All this priceless information and much more is clearly given by the Breeders themselves in this splendid Canary Book. Every page—every line—is full of the practical experience of practical men—experts in their line. Fanciers who have specialised in Lizards give valuable information. Breeders of famous prize-winning crested varieties contribute to its 380 pages. Every feature of Canary Breeding and Exhibiting is clearly and fully dealt with—you have only to glance at the comprehensive index to turn up the information you desire.

The book contains 133 illustrations, a few of which are here reproduced. Thus, "Our Canaries" not only tells you but shows you. If you are a novice, or breed only for pleasure, you will be delighted with the increased enjoyment which the book will enable you to derive from your hobby. If you are an "old hand," or breed for profit, it will help you to increase profits.

"Our Canaries" will be sent you for Free Examination—Approval for a deposit of only 1/-. If, after examination, you return the book, your deposit will at once be refunded. If, however, you decide to keep the book, you can pay the balance by easy monthly instalments Thus you have everything to gain and nothing to lose by sending for a copy. Do so TO-DAY.

RIVAL BRITISH SONGSTERS.

The Blackbird and the Song-Thrush are among the most accomplished of British song birds, and opinions differ as to which of the two is the better singer. Certainly no other resident British bird approaches them in musical ability. It has for long been the ambition of Hybrid breeders to produce a Hybrid between the the two species and the feat has now been accomplished (see page 700).

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS"

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers in all transactions the adoption of our Deposit system should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.

It is advisable that all newly-purchased birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of Insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 26," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2½d. from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

IMPORTANT.

we are prepared to pay the very highest cash prices for large or small quantities of Canaries, including Norwich, Yorkshires, Borders, Rollers, etc.; also Mules. Do not dispose of your surplus stock until you have received our offers. All our birds are for retail trade—not for export—therefore we can pay the very highest prices in the trade. All Canaries we purchase are retained in this country. Do not be misled with idle boast and exaggerated statements. Send your offers to a reliable firm, where you will receive a genuine offer and your cash.

Respecting the "Manchuria" consignment some three weeks ago, consisting of 4,000 odd birds, I beg to state that the whole of the above consignment—with the exception of 144 birds sent over by a Norwich firm—were my sole property, and purchased by me in this country. Some people seem to forget that I hold all the cheques which have been paid through my bank to local dealers, these same cheques being evidence of the number of birds that were bought, paid for, and from whom purchased.

THESE ARE SIMPLE IRRESISTIBLE FACTS.

During the last two weeks 2,000 Canaries have been purchased. It pleases me to say that in making such an extensive purchase not one single deduction or any dispute has occurred with any sender.

for this coming week are 2,000 Canaries, for which 12/6 upwards will be paid.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting, Mr. Jones, chair. Mr. Tow gave a washing exhibition, and went through the ordeal in fine style, but unfortunately the bird was not dry when it left the room, so not seen at its best. The attendance was a good one, and items of interest were discussed. Mr. Malpass elected a member. Next meeting, election of officials and final table show.—E. Sisson, Assist. Sec.

LONDON C.B.A.

Meeting Nov. 9, Red Lion, York Street, St. James, Mr. Robson in chair, and a good attendance. After general business, birds were staged for table show, a splendid entry facing the judge, Mr. Robson. Previous to judge placing the awards a judging competition was held, which proved the keen interest taken by the members, as only one point divided the winner from the runner-up, Mr. P. Johnston. Special, best bird, was won by Mr. Watcham, with a lovely Crest; 2, Johnston, a charming Yorks.; 3, Underhay, Norwich. Vote of thanks to the judge, and members for the grand total of entries ended a very instructive evening.—A. Wallington.

BRITISH ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, Nov. 14, Cock and Lion Hotel, 69, Wigmore Street; chairman, Mr. F. E. Fisher. After minutes had been read, the birds, of which there were a goodly number, were opened, their song being ably commented upon as usual by the chairman. We had a good exhibition of tours from some young Glucke songsters, and also a little Roller in one or two Glucke roll birds. It is not easy yet to discover this tour, it being so little known and birds are very shy with it. Two fine well-known specimens of hollow roll were also brought, which were a delight to us all, and a surprise to those new to the Roller song. Several fresh visitors came in, and as the large room was placed at our disposal, everyone, including the birds, felt more at ease. Sec. reported the addition of five more members. At the next meeting birds will again be shown, and the usual welcome is proffered to all interested.—Hy. W. Gutierrez, Reporter.

CHARITY SHOW TO BE HELD.

We have again been invited to organise a show in conjunction with the Mayor's Charities Winter Garden on Nov. 30, an effort to provide funds for the North Staffs. Infirmary.

The show is open to a radius of 10 miles and I make an appeal to all fanciers within the radius to support it. At the present time all eyes are on societies and organisations of all sorts to see whether they justify their existence. The show is in aid of the North Staffs Infirmary, which is in great need, and to make it a success it is necessary for everyone to make as many entries as possible and to advertise the show in all possible ways. I trust that fanciers will rally up and show that we are not only doing our bit as far as North Staffs is concerned, but we are prepared to keep

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Very interesting meeting, headquarters, Nov. 6; Mr. P. Rorke, chair. Letters were read from Messrs. Hobden, Francis, Runchman, Coombs and Marriott. Mr. G. Oswin was elected a member, and Mr. G. Montague nominated Decided to hold annual show in January, and Sec. announced that he had received, or had promised, specials from Rev. H. A. Soames, Messrs. Francis, J. A. Oswin, and Faulkner and Co. The compiling of the schedule was left to the Committee, to be submitted to the December meeting for approval. The event of the evening was a table show and judging competition, final judge Mr. P. Rorke. A splendid class of Norwich faced the judge, who found some difficulty in separating the seventeen birds, for there was not a bad bird among them, the judge saying that it was the finest class of Norwich he had seen at Wimbledon. British, too, were an extremely level lot, thirteen birds being staged, and altogether the first table show of the season was a pronounced success. Nor.: 1, sp, vhc, hc, Jay; 2, Nash; 3, Birch; c, Randall. Brit.: 1, sp, 2, 3, vhc, hc, Farley; c, Collins. Members gaining points in the judging competition were: Nash 15, Collins 14, Jay 11, Farley 9, Birch and Oswin 6 each, Randall 2. Table show next meeting, for Yorks, Bord. and Hyb. Entry fee 3d. per cage, with special to each section. Messrs. Rorke and Birch kindly offered to supply the special in the Mule class. A vote of thanks to Mr. Rorke for filling the chair closed the meeting.—G. Griffiths, Hon. Sec.

BURTON-ON-TRENT.

Members' show, Victoria Hall, Nov. 11. Owing to many of the members being called to the colours, the entry was poor, only 35 birds being staged. Chief interest was in the Challenge Bowl classes, Mr. Hathaway and Mr. Elliott each having won it twice, one would become the winner outright. After equal points in Yell. and Buff classes, both classes were put together and re-judged, and the Bowl became the property of Mr. Elliott by the narrow margin of 4 points. Mr. Hulse, Leicester, judged, and gave every satisfaction.

Twitterings.

Mr. J. Rushton writes that Mr. R. Braybrook, Sheffield, will judge the open show of the Burnley O.S., Dec. 2.

Mr. J. H. Elliot, sec. Beamish and Dist. C.B.S., writes that he has removed from 3, Jubilee Terrace, Edmondsley, to Stabel House, West Pelton, Beamish S.O.

Mr. A. Wellings has been appointed to judge Leigh show to-day, Saturday; the show closes at 9 p.m. Sunday, and no birds may be moved before that time, writes Mr. R. Charleson, Sec.

The new price list of the Volunteer Wire Works, Cornhill Passage, Longton, is to hand. There seems to be included every kind of appliance needed for the bird-keeper; cages of all sorts, drinkers, food vessels, baths, nest-pans, sprayers, and a hundred and one other things. Bird-keepers should write for a copy.

I wish to thank all exhibitors who exhibited at our open show, writes Mr. G. Broome, sec. Blaenavon C.B.S. The show was a success in every way, and we expect to hand over a good sum to the Red Cross. I have received a number of letters of thanks for the way the birds were packed for return journey, which I cannot answer personally, so I hope the writers will take this as a reply.

Hurry Up with Cardiff Entries.

Will you allow me, through Cage Birds to appeal to all intending exhibitors at the Cardiff Show, writes Mr. E. Thomas, Sec., 48, Craddock Street, Cardiff, to let me have their entries not later than first post Sunday, Nov. 26, as owing to shortage of labour our printer will not accept any copy for the catalogue later than first post on Monday, Nov. 27.

Fanciers Meet at the Front.

Two of my sons, writes Mr. A. Parvin, Selby, are "doing their bit" at the front, and I send Cage Birds to them, for they are both fanciers. One of them writes that he has met in France the son of another old fancier, Mr. Vardy, of Nottingham. It is strange how the birdy men meet one another anywhere. I have been a reader of Cage Birds for many years, and I wish it every good wish.

Proposed Roller Club for Hull.

Anyone interested in the formation of a Roller Club for Hull please communicate with me, writes Mr. A. Baggaley, 18, Somerset St., Hessle Rd., Hull.

"Tempus Fugit."

At Halifax, on Friday, Nov. 17, Mr. C. A. House was celebrating the twenty-ninth anniversary of his first appearance as an All-England judge, he having filled that role at Ryde on November 17, 1887. Time has dealt gently with him; our Idle (?) friend wears well.

A Fine Opportunity for Novice Exhibitors.

Novices are well catered for at the show of the City of Birmingham C.B.S. on Dec. 6 and 7. There are five novice classes for Norwich, five for Yorks., one Crest, one A.O.V. Canary, and one British Hardbill, 13 classes out of a total of 57, so that nearly a quarter of the classes are specially allotted to the novices.

A Song-Thrush and Blackbird Hybrid.

A Scottish Breeder Comes Into His Own.

READERS will remember last year's claim of Mr. T. H. Anderson, of Darvel, to have bred and reared Hybrids between a Song-Thrush and a Blackbird. Unfortunately, the young birds, being, as has subsequently been ascertained, all hens, were not sufficiently dark in plumage to establish beyond doubt their double parentage, and controversy as to their bonafides occupied a considerable amount of our space.

One of the young birds of 1915 was sent to our offices for examination, and the experts to whom it was submitted, being influenced possibly by the transparent sincerity of the evidence offered by the breeder, agreed that it was the produce of a cross between a Song-Thrush and a Blackbird.

Some of our best judges of British birds and Hybrids, however, before whom the birds appeared on the show bench, declined to accept them as Hybrids, and we are free to admit that the birds showed so little of the Blackbird in their character that the judges were perfectly justified in passing them. They had to judge the birds as they appeared before them, and they were certainly not good Hybrids; that is, they did not show plainly their double parentage.

This year Mr. Anderson again claimed to have bred Hybrids from the same cross, four in one nest which all died, and three in another which have all been reared.

In a letter to the hon. sec. of the National British Bird and Mule Club, Mr. Anderson, as a member of the club, claimed permission to send one of the 1916 birds for inspection by the committee. His request was, of course, granted, and at a well attended special meeting, held Nov. 16, the bird was up for judgment. Mr. J. Robson was in the chair.

After it had been inspected it was moved by our Mr. Fulljames, and seconded by the well-known British bird enthusiast, Mr. W. A. Lott, "That, without reference to the previously alleged Song-Thrush Blackbird Hybrids, the committee of the National British Bird and Mule Club agree that the specimen sent for their inspection is, in their opinion, a genuine Song-Thrush Blackbird Hybrid." This was put to the meeting and carried nem. con., Mr. Robson, as chairman, concurring with the verdict.

So ends an incident which at one time seemed very likely to be left without a satisfactory decision, and we congratulate Mr. Anderson not only on his success in breeding the Hybrids in question but on his plucky perseverance in proving himself in the right in making his claim. Our pleasure in doing this is not lessened by the fact that Mr. Anderson has justified our action of awarding him last year a silver medal for accomplishing that which was doubted by many judges for whose opinion we have the greatest respect.

The bird sent to London for examination is marked like a Thrush on the breast, but shows indubitable evidence of its Blackbird parentage. Its back is blackish brown, it has the shape of a Blackbird, and its feet ("legs") are dark. It is probably a cock, and if this is so it may be expected to show more of the Blackbird cross with an adult moult, for everyone knows that even cock Blackbirds are brown in general colour until they become adult.

Besides winning Cage Birds silver medal, Mr. Anderson now becomes entitled to compete for the gold medal offered each year by the National British Bird and Mule Club for the member exhibiting the rarest Hybrid.

Late Summer Migrants.

A Redstart is reported from Kerridge, Cheshire, on Nov. 6, and two Swallows at Grange-over-Sands Nov. 14.

Encouragement for Lady Exhibitors of Borders.

Prize Money Paid.

Mr. J. J. Dunn, Sec., Halifax O.S., writes that prize money won at the open show has been paid. Anyone not having received payment should write the secretary accordingly. All birds were dispatched to exhibitors' instructions, and every bird to go by rail was dispatched by 6.45 p.m., so as to get home the same night.

To Soldier Fanciers in Coventry.

If there are any fanciers amongst the great number of military now in Coventry, writes Mr. A. Wright, Hon. Sec., Coventry Iodiva C.B.S., our members will be pleased to make their stay here as pleasant as possible, and as we are holding a members' show, Nov. 25, the date of this week's Cage Birds, at Dun Cow Inn, Jordan Well, we trust they will come and make themselves known.

SPECIAL SHOW NUMBER NEXT WEEK.

EXTRA PAGES: NO EXTRA PRICE.

Although we have for some weeks given more than three pages to show reports, we have been unable to find room for the great number in hand. Next week, therefore, we shall have a special show issue with extra pages, without any increase in the price of our paper. We hope in this way to be able to publish the many reports now in hand.

Aberdare Charity Show.

Will fanciers please note my change of address to 38, Trevor Street, Aberdare, writes Mr. J. M. Shelby James, sec. Aberdare C.B.S. The headquarters of the Society has also been changed to Dando's Restaurant, Duke Street. The work of the Society is coming on apace. The show affairs are in excellent order, and the Committee hope to make a good profit in aid of the Aberdare Auxiliary Fund. The Market Hall, where the show will be held, is in an excellent position, well lighted, and free from draught. The judges chosen are second to none, and we have a valuable cup to be won three times, not necessarily in succession, also numerous other specials. I hope fanciers will kindly help us in this great effort to assist local charity. Schedules, etc., can be obtained by return on application.

Gateshead C.B.S.—Rochester St. Sunday Schools, Dec. 9. Judges: F. W. Laidlow, T. Almond, D. Hamilton, C. A Champion Chough at Glasgow

The Necessity of Registering Valuable Letters.

The reason my name did not appear in the catalogue at Coventry show against my winning unflighted yellow hen, writes Mr. J. Bastock, was that the letter enclosing my entries, had been stolen in transit, the fees taken out, and the letter posted again. It reached the secretary on the show day.

A Yorkshire Canary Union in Canada.

We are informed by Mr. Wallace C. Jones, Toronto, that the Yorkshire Canary breeders of Toronto, at a meeting on October 25, organised a Yorkshire Union to be known as "The Yorkshire Canary Union of Canada." The following officers were elected:—Wallace C. Jones, pres.; Mr. R. Steele, vice-pres.; Mr. T. Pearson, sec.; Mr. W. J. Given, treas. The ambition of this union, says Mr. Jones, is to encourage and make interesting the breeding of Yorkshire Canaries, and some interesting subjects will be discussed in the near future.

THE TRAINING OF THE ROLLER CANARY.

By H. W. GUTIERREZ, Seven Kings.

A London Expert in Roller Canary Keeping and Training Supplements the Article by Mr G. Smith, Wigan, in our Issue of Nov. 4.

CONSIDERING the amount of interesting matter that appears in CAGE BIRDS from time to time in regard to the British Roller, and especially that which has been published during the past twelve months, Roller fanciers have real cause for congratulation in respect of the enlightenment and encouragement they receive.

As regards the trading side of the question, the reprint published Oct. 28, page 657, from the article in the London "Star," is a very fair and concise statement of the position. That the British breeder of Canaries breeds almost exclusively for show purposes is true; it is the same in everything else, and certainly in the matter of every species of Canary; he breeds for excellency.

A Blessing in Disguise.

At this critical juncture this drawback (?) stands us in good stead, for the fact that the British bred Roller is a pedigree bird, bred for excellency, gives us an advantage over the Continental rubbish. If the English and Americans will buy this latter stuff, it is, first of all, because there is no other to be got, for the public will have a songster, and, secondly, because the vast majority don't know what high class song really is.

So far as my own experience in London is concerned I sincerely assert that of all the friends, visitors, and casual callers that have entered my house, fanciers apart, only one, a lady, was already acquainted with the song of a high-class Roller, her husband having brought one home from Germany many years ago. It died in due course, and I shall not forget her delight at once more hearing the old familiar tours which she had never heard since she lost her pet some years ago.

Here, therefore, I join hands with the Editor, so far as Rollers are concerned, in his advice to sell our birds, for the present at least, preferably for "home consumption," and I would say give the preference to the buyer who wants to breed with the bird; sell him or her one or two of your hens cheaply on a promise to do so. Keep out the imported stuff, don't breed with it, keep up the standard, and start with the British bred pedigree bird of good quality and training. As has often been said, it costs no more to breed and keep a high-class bird than a "dud."

Having the able article of Mr. G. Smith, of Wigan, in CAGE BIRDS, of Nov. 4, before me, I should like to make a few comments on training. I don't think it possible to improve on his hints generally. I would like, however, to make a few remarks on the question of boxes, that is to say, the box in which the song cage is placed, and shutter cages.

I never use either, except in special circumstances. I use the song box when I have to keep a bird in a living room for the sake of tidiness, or if I have a very offending songster, or a sick bird that needs coddling, and I use the shutter cage (the official show cage) only for those birds who are in training for the shows, three weeks before the show date.

Better than Shutter Cages.

For general training I find the rack system far more convenient, wholesome, and humane. If you have your birds always in boxes, they never get proper, healthy, happy exercise; their existence is not a natural one, and you get delicate strains. By the rack system, I mean the following or some similar arrangement.

The birds in their open wire cages are placed on racks, in tiers one above the other, on iron rods resting in slots fixed to uprights, bookshelf fashion, for which wall recesses are very adaptable, as there are no end draughts. The tiers are pretty close, distance one inch between upper and lower cage, less if possible.

The cages are separated by strips of dark stout cardboard, thin wood, or metal; the latter I have found the best, having previously dulled the surface with emery paper. The strips must reach well to the top of each cage, and they must come out flush with the outside of the feeding vessels, otherwise your birds will be stretching out their necks to say "how-d'you-do" to their pals.

Before the rack I have two dark green curtains for regulating the light, hung from two bamboo rods on rings. Brown paper sheets are laid on the racks, the paper coming about two inches over in front and hanging down the depth of the cages at the back, but I do not think the paper is absolutely necessary, and perhaps it may harbour the mite; anyhow, it is brushed every week and I find none. It helps to keep the birds free from up-draughts, and is warm.

With this system you have several advantages; you save space, you have no boxes to clean out, and the shutter cage is a wicked thing to clean, no red mite is harboured, the birds are closer together, and yet more air circulates by reason of the looseness of the divisions and the open space along the tops of the cages.

In the morning, first thing, the curtain is drawn, and when they are well awake out come the divisions; you will find they don't sing. Here let me remark that it should be the object of the trainer to give his birds as much light, air, and exercise as possible, and yet prevent them singing, and this solves the difficulty.

As long as the divisions are drawn the birds hop about and keep busy; you will get an exception now and again, a fair indication that you are giving too much stimulating food, so you had better reduce it all round, hens perhaps as well by the way.

After a short hour I go round to water the birds, and then feed them; while I am fussing about with them they still keep off song, and as I drop the small spoonful of canary on top of the rape so they grab at it.

To sum up, my birds are open at 7 a.m., and are not closed till about 9, then back go the partitions, both curtains are drawn, and a few minutes afterwards they are warbling. At from 1 to 2 o'clock I open again in the same way for half an hour, and if I have green food I give it them then, it keeps them quiet.

When the day is on the wane I draw again and open as at dinner time, and let them alone until asleep. Then one curtain only is drawn, and they are snug for the night.

The Use of the "Schoolmaster."

The Schoolmaster is racked with the birds, but another method is to put him in a box and set him on a stand in front of the curtain, a method which has certain advantages. I do not give my birds open school every day; when I do, of course, it is when I re-introduce the partitions, and, occasionally, late by artificial light.

As the days shorten opening up later instead of by twilight will be the rule, and I fancy it is better to do so even now, as they are more fortified by getting the late feed these long, cold nights. The rule is never to let them sing more than ten minutes in open school.

In conclusion I would say to the man who uses boxes, take your birds out of them at least once a day and place them on the table for an hour for exercise. If they show inclination to sing against your wish they will only do so at first, and a move of the finger soon stops them.

By J. W. N.

A Series of comprehensive articles, embracing the proper management of all kinds of birds in captivity, their housing, feeding, general management, and diseases. The breeding of species and of Mules and Hybrids, and finally the birds themselves will all be treated of as the series progresses.

SOME Parrots and Parrakeets contract a troublesome form of diarrhœa from picking up excreta from the bottom of their cage and eating it. To prevent this abominable habit, which arises from sheer ennui, a grating can be fitted over the bottom of the cage, and the bird given a piece of soft wood to exercise its mandibles on.

Constipation is evidenced by the hard and scanty motions. It often occurs towards the end of winter, and is then generally the result of insufficient green food. Dandelion leaves, or other kinds of green food, are the natural and best remedy. A little magnesia in the drinking water is a useful corrective, and, if given periodically, say once a week, goes a long way in keeping the birds in good condition.

A Prevalent Complaint and Its Cure.

Inflammation of the bowels is met with at all ages. It is especially prevalent in young birds about six weeks old, after they are on hard seed. It is usually caused by bringing about that change too quickly, and stopping soft food suddenly. Thus the walls of the intestine are continually irritated and inflammation is set up. As soon as the diagnosis has been made a drop of salad oil should be immediately administered and repeated every morning and evening until a marked improvement is noticed. On no account give purgatives, such as Epsom salts, for this affection. The irritation caused by these, on top of the existing inflammation, is nearly sure to be fatal. The diet should consist of bread and milk with either a little maw seed, or, better still, soft sugar sprinkled over it. When the inflammation has subsided be careful to wean the bird on to hard seed very gradually. In older birds the treatment is exactly the same, and both should be kept under observation for a considerable time afterwards.

Indigestion is a very common complaint where a too rich or too monotonous diet has been supplied. The bird affected is usually dull, with ruffled feathers, and looks generally ill. First of all, change the diet, if necessary, and supply plenty of green food, especially dandelion. The drinking water can be made saline with Epsom salts or magnesia for a day or two, and for another two days give four drops of syrup of buckthorn in one tablespoonful of water. Sometimes, in chronic cases, the bird begins to go bald and bare patches appear. Carry out the treatment for simple indigestion, but let it be carried on for a longer period, say doses of salts and syrup of buckthorn alternately for 10 days, after which give Parrish's chemical food, just sufficient to colour the drinking water for a week, when improvement will generally be evident. Sometimes this condition does not react very readily to treatment, and this has to be considerably prolonged. For the bald patches a little vaseline applied occasionally is all that is necessary.

In Cases of Fever.

Fever is the most dreaded of all bird diseases, and the mortality is very high. It is not strictly correct to include this in diseases of the digestive system, yet as diarrhœa is a very prominent symptom it may be mentioned here. It is especially prevalent amongst newly imported birds, the very unsanitary conditions of travelling being responsible for a mortality which at one time rose as high as 98 per cent. in the case of Grey Parrots.

In many cases the incubation period is as long as a month, but a bird that shows no signs of disease after six weeks can be judged usually to have escaped. It is of vital importance to isolate all new additions to the existing stock, for if fever is introduced it will spread like wildfire.

Treatment is unsatisfactory as a rule. Occasionally a bird recovers, but this is generally through good luck rather than skilled drugging. However, if the attack be of moderate virulence a bird may often be saved by good nursing. The main point to have in mind is that the strength of the patient must be kept up in order to combat the invading microbe. Suitable food, such as an egg mixture, and a drop or two of brandy in hot water three times a day are the best means for bringing this about, but if the bird is valuable it should have attention during the night. Some of the medicines advertised as specifics are absolutely worthless, and many dangerous.

If birds start dying off in the birdroom, septic fever should always be suspected, and means to prevent its spread undertaken at once. Those affected should be properly isolated, and all precautions taken, as described in the chapter on "The Management of Birds." Lastly the importance of speed cannot be overestimated.

The Best of All Remedies.

Debility is a condition usually met with after severe illness or in a more modified form as the result of improper food. In the latter case a more suitable form of diet should be given, and a few drops of Parrish's chemical food in the drinking water will be all the medicine required. In severe cases bread soaked in milk and sprinkled with maw seed or soft sugar plays an important part in successful treatment. It is a valuable stimulant as well as a food, and cannot be too highly recommended in all forms of illness.

THIS spraying is done at night time at about 6 o'clock. Some don't believe in wetting a bird so late. Well, in their wild state they often get wet at night without in any way harming them, and why should it do so when they have a cosy room to dry themselves; anyway I have had nothing but good results from it.

Seeds and their Uses.

Now as to my method of feeding. During the spring and summer I provide them with all the wild seedlings they can eat, commencing with the dandelion, the green leaves and then the heads as they come; from that time green stuff is plentiful, and there will be chickweed, shepherd's purse, plantain, and scores of other seeds to select from; I grow most of them in my garden. My boys also collect everything the birds require, and during the period that wild seeds are available the seed pots in their cages are almost untouched.

During the winter we have again to resort to the seeds of commerce, and nearly every experienced fancier has his own ideas as to mixing them. My method is to get Capern's Finch Mixture as a foundation. For Linnets, Redpolls, and Twites is added rape seed of both sorts, and linseed and teazle as I consider necessary. You must recollect that it is not advisable to treat all birds of the same species alike, for what suits one does not suit all. Some birds will get too fat, whilst others do well on the same mixture.

Here I believe that success is obtained by discriminating as to the amount of seeds containing much oil that should be given to each bird. Birds that are active and have plenty of cage room can have a fair allowance of fatty seeds with impunity, but if the birds are not inclined to exercise it must be given to them sparingly.

Various Birds; Various Treatment.

The only bird that I know that should have no restriction in this matter is the Goldfinch, though I have known them to be kept for a long time on hemp seed alone, in good singing condition. If they do not have a good allowance of this seed, however, they very soon go thin, and take a downward coarse. The Greenfinch is a bird to watch, he, too, would eat too much of fattening seeds if they were given to him, but a fair share of sunflower may be given if he exercises properly. He will eat almost any kind of wild seedlings, and in the autumn any kind of berries. He is an easy bird to keep in condition if understood.

Bullfinches I treat somewhat similarly to the Greenfinch; a little of best insectivorous food may be given with good results; they will eat every description of berry, and these should be given freely when in season. The diet of the Hawfinch consists chiefly of sunflower, with a little canary and hemp seed added. This bird is also fond of berries, and apple or pear. I find a few pine kernels given now and again are much relished. For the Bramble and Chaffinch I give much the same food, a mixture of canary, hemp, linseed, summer rape, and sunflower; the hemp and sunflower should be cracked; also I give a little insectivorous food and all garden insects I can find.

To the Buntings I give mostly canary seed, and at times a little crushed hemp, some oats crushed, and a little insectivorous food. These birds also like insects; when they can not be obtained a mealworm is a good substitute. The only greenfood they seem to care about is chickweed.

I mention the Siskin last for he is such a glutton. If he had his choice he would eat only hemp seed, and this would soon put him on the sick list. Plain canary seed should be his staple food, and he will devour any amount of seedlings which should be given to him in abundance. He is very partial to a few wasp grubs, and these will not harm any bird that will eat them.

After the garden seedlings are over, I prepare a mixture which I give them during the winter months; this consists of 1 part niger, 1 part gold of pleasure, 1 part maw seed, and 1 part thistle. I add about as much good wild seed as all the above. This given to the birds two or three times a week will keep them in good condition, and they will be a pleasure to their owner. A lot of trouble, some might say, but no true fancier would consider it as such. In conclusion, I would urge more members to take to keeping British birds, which would make our shows more attractive and more remunerative.

Correspondence.

New Society for Ferndale.

Sir,—I am sorry that owing to pressure of work I was not able to answer Mr. T. Jones's letter sooner. I would say that I am not grumbling, but want to see the old flag still flying. I am quite satisfied with what has been done with the monies in hand, and I am also glad that a new society has been formed. I wish them success, but I am sorry that our shows clash. I hope that a new society will be formed and flourish.

Sir,—In your issue of Nov. 11, under the above heading the question is asked, Should rarity alone win? I should say most emphatically no. A bird should win on its condition and general form. If a class contained a Bird of Paradise, a Canary, and a House-Sparrow, the judge should ask himself which is the finest specimen of its kind. If the Bird of Paradise and the Canary were not in show condition, and the Sparrow was, then the Sparrow ought to win. Of course if the Bird of Paradise and the Sparrow were both perfect, then the former would win.

To pretend that a bird, no matter what its condition may be, must win because it is rare is nonsense. I have had a few years experience in showing dogs and horses, and have two or three times shown birds (with considerable success), but I am not impressed with the judging at bird shows, I must admit.

Norwich Canaries at Manchester.

An Exchange of Courtesies.

Sir,—I am very pleased to see that Mr. Allsopp appreciated the few notes on the Norwich at Manchester. I don't know if he was there, but if he was I am only too sorry I hadn't the pleasure of meeting him. It was quite a coincidence that the Welshmen from that unspeakable village, and the writer had a mutual friend, so we had tea together—along with an ex prize-fighter. So you see we were in good company, although I felt nervous, but as the conversation was mainly dominated by the writings and doings of Mr. Allsopp (he ought to feel flattered), the only harm done was to sundry plates of ham and cakes.

He has been silent of late. Why, I know not, but I can assure him that whatever he writes is read with interest by Lancashire men. They may not always agree with him; in fact, I know that they sometimes don't, but he is always read with a seriousness that is flattering to any writer. He makes them think, and they never smile at him until he introduces his inimitable whimsicalities.

I didn't enter the more "dark than light" controversy. Mr. Allsopp may or may not have been wrong in his decision, but this I know, in giving the breast-marked buff cock first he gave it to the best in the class and the best var. Norwich Canary being exhibited at that time. He is like the writer, when he sees a good one he can't get away from it, which shows that he knows a good one. I wish we had more like him.

The Value of System in Canary Breeding.

Four Important Items.

Sir,—One meets sometimes people who have been Canary fanciers in days gone by, but who have now dropped the fancy entirely. It is interesting to hear their reasons. "Too much trouble," "too disappointing," "very expensive," etc., etc. Now these are in the majority of cases only excuses, not reasons. In my opinion 90 per cent. of these failures are due to lack of system. It is not how many birds one commences with, but with what system. Canary breeding is a hobby, but one which can only be indulged in, in a business-like way. Many hobbies can be left alone for a time, but a real successful Canary fancier must have a lot of stick-at-it-ive-ness in him.

System must be introduced particularly in four different ways, first the buying of stock, second in cages and fittings, third in the actual working, fourth in the disposal of stock, and I will try in my humble way to deal with these four headings.

In procuring stock obtain young birds, or if possible young birds that have bred the season before, but be careful in buying the latter; enquire carefully why they are being sold. Personally, I have always left myself in the hands of older fanciers, men whom I thought I could depend on, and in only one instance have I been bitten. Don't buy birds rashly, but well suited to one another. For the beginner "matched" pairs are the best.

Don't buy rubbishy cages and fittings; consider carefully what you require, ask a few local fanciers to advise you as to what is best. For my own part I have a set of cages all uniform; the drinkers, grit tins, hoppers, perches, and fronts are all interchangeable, and can all be taken off together without any fear of chaos in the putting on again.

Be systematic in looking after the birds. I find it best to blow the seed every morning, change the water morning and midday, clean the cages weekly, and have a thorough "do out" twice a year (before and after the breeding season). Slackness in the management of your birds or cages usually ends in a fatal manner.

Don't rush to sell your birds before they are six weeks old. It pays to keep the birds three or four months. Last year I sold a hen at 5s., which realised £1 some time later. Go carefully; choose what you require for the next season. If you cannot value your birds ask some of your experienced fancier friends to do so, it will pay you. Hope this letter will be of interest to someone who anticipates taking up the hobby, and I wish Cage Birds every success.

Border Fancies at Sheffield.

Sir,—In the letter signed "One of the Old School," the thin veneer of curiosity is only put on to cover the inward sneer and innuendo intended to convey to your readers that I took the engagement to judge Scotch Fancies at Haddington, not being a breeder and exhibitor. If your correspondent likes to sign his name, he can have any question answered; if not, then I am done with him, as well as with all others sheltering under noms-de-plume. I have seen too much mischief caused through anonymous letters already, and such letters are a curse to the cage bird fancy. These are my convictions which until someone can prove otherwise I will stick to.

Fresh Fields for Fanciers.

A Suggestion for Singing Budgerigars.

Sir,—I have read with considerable interest the well-thought out suggestions of "E.D.H.D." with regard to the systematic domestication of British birds. I am of opinion, however, that it would be a great loss of time and energy to attempt an organised movement of this nature. The domestication of the Canary is quite another matter, as this was an exotic bird and its naturalisation was an addition to British aviculture. British wild birds, on the other hand, are easily procurable, and are not easily bred in confinement; moreover, those which are successfully reared in captivity invariably suffer by comparison with their parents both as regards size and colour.

The great non-fancier British public which wants a pet bird has already the Canary, which being purely grammivorous, long lived, and a fair songster, is almost an ideal domestic bird. Any other contemplated domestic bird would stand more chance of popular favour if it were totally unlike the Canary—i.e., not a Finch.

A very suitable bird, for instance, is the Budgerigar, whose only real fault is its lack of vocal accomplishments, and which, moreover, is already partially domesticated. If only breeders of these birds would endeavour to breed them to sing—or, better still, to talk, which should not be by any means impossible—they would produce for the public an ideal cage bird, hardy, beautiful, and easily catered for, and one which could be kept in addition, and not as a rival, to the Canary.

At all events fanciers will, at this juncture, expend their energies more profitably in trying to reduce the present shortage of Canaries rather than in mere speculative experimenting.

A. R. Coe.

To teach a Budgerigar to talk is of course not impossible; we have heard several that could say a word or two in a very squeaky tone, and one or two that have been really talented talkers. Whether they could be bred to talk is, however, quite another matter. A Budgerigar that could sing as other birds sing would indeed be a novelty, and we should think that it would be difficult to suggest a branch of aviculture that would be so unlikely a proposition as the breeding of singing Budgerigars.—Editor Cage Birds.

More Birds Stolen on Rail.

Six Ringed Rollers Missing.

Sir,—In reply to my advertisement in your most valuable paper, Cage Birds, of Sept. 9, I had more orders than birds advertised, but unfortunately one consignment of six Roller hens went wrong. I sent them to a gentleman at Hull, but they have not arrived yet, so someone has evidently lifted them, and I should esteem it a great favour if you will publish their ring numbers. If any one of your numerous readers has purchased such a bird, or birds, and will communicate with me, or Ettingshall stationmaster, L.N.W., it may be the means of leading to the conviction of the offender. Several birds besides these have been stolen lately, but personally I cannot grumble much, for these are the first I have lost in 30 years, and I have sent birds all over the country. The ring numbers are 3146B5, 1592B5, 7794B5, 1594B5, 7793B5, 1567B5.

A Goldfinch Gone Astray.

Sir,—I see in your last issue that a Goldfinch was lost or taken from its cage in transit. Last December I bought a cock Canary from a well-known dealer in Gorsienon, and he advised me when he sent the bird. It was not advised to railway here, and I never got the bird or any satisfaction, though I wrote to the station master at Gorsienon. It never got to Ireland, or I should have got it. These losses should be always made known.

Specials at Larkhall 1915 Show

A Belated Grumble.

Sir,—I have newly learned that a prominent Yorkshire exhibitor at the last Red Cross open show of Larkhall C.B.A. claims not to have received special won at that show, and I would like to state that the 11 specials offered for the Yorkshire section were all sent out, as we thought, to the rightful winners. If there has been a mistake how are we to know if exhibitors don't enquire for specials? There is a time and place for doing such. The time, surely, is not at three weeks before the next show, and the place is at the secretary's address, not at a Yorkshire club meeting in Glasgow or to other fanciers. I shall yet be very pleased to send a special to this gentleman if he has really won one, although his action has been what a secretary would expect from a beginner, not from an exhibitor of some standing and a prominent member of specialist clubs around Glasgow. Every one of the 80 specials promised at the last show were sent out, although we don't hold ourselves responsible for specials promised and not received. We broke our own rule and sent 2s. 6d. and 2s. cash special that did not come in. The following are the winners of Yorkshire specials as sent out:—Specials 40, 41, 43, 46, Dykes; 42, 44, 45, 47, Cochrane; 48, Walsh; 49, Ferguson; 50, McGregor. The satisfaction of having everything finished up correctly is the salary of a Red Cross show secretary, and I thought my salary had been paid, but I seem to have been mistaken.

Late Sec. of Larkhall C.B.A.

City of Birmingham Show.

New Show Secretary Appointed.

Sir,—Kindly allow me to announce to exhibitors that at the last meeting of the City of Birmingham C.B.S. Mr. Shirley, our hon. sec., wrote stating that he was afraid he could not carry out the show secretarial work owing to business and other reasons, and asking for someone else to be appointed. An appeal to the meeting failed to get a volunteer, and to prevent the cancelling of the show on Dec. 6 and 7 I offered to undertake the preliminary work if another member would deal with receiving the entries. Mr. J. Bostock, 75, Springfield Road, Moseley, Birmingham, accepted, and we hope exhibitors will give the Society their support with plenty of entries.

Although the show room is only just across the road from New Street Station (L. and N.W. and Midland Rlys.), we are leaving nothing to chance, and the exhibits will be collected from and delivered to the railway stations by our own motor vans, the show closing at six p.m. on second day to enable all birds to be despatched that evening.

Extra classes have been added for Norwich, Yorkshires, and British. Messrs. J. H. Roe and H. Norman will judge. Fanciers will be glad to know that Mr. Shirley now finds he will be able to take charge of the show, and will act as show manager, with a good band of workers to assist.

Too Expensive for the Working Man Fancier.

Sir,—In answer to Mr. Dunlop's letter asking why the Scotch Fancy Canary is not more popular, I think that breeders of that variety are themselves to blame for its unpopularity. Mr. D. says they are just as cheap as any other kind and just as good; I say they are neither. What about the man who has a family to support on an average wage of about twenty-four shillings? Granted that a pair which would win and breed winners could be had for three pounds, where would such a man get it to pay for them? No, no; they are not in it as a poor man's bird with either Norwich or Yorkshire Canaries.

I can give you an instance of good birds of both of these varieties being bought cheap that could win. A friend of mine, on looking through my Cage Birds some time ago, saw some Norwich for sale. He bought a cock at fifteen shillings which won second prize at a show in next county to Mr. Dunlop, and which bred tip top birds too. I have been offered good winning Yorkshires, and also young bred from same, for twenty shillings each. Where are the Scotch Fancy breeders that are doing this? Just look at their advertisements; no price ever mentioned, and when written to for particulars (which wastes time of both parties) you find the price is prohibitive to the poor fancier who likes a decent bird.

Why Not Some Lectures?

It is just those lectures, etc., mentioned by Mr. Dunlop which have made so many fanciers of Yorkshire, Norwich, and Border Canaries. I now only breed a few Yorkshires as songsters, and get from six to ten shillings each for cock birds, but would prefer to breed better birds. I expect Mr. Dunlop will ask why I do not clear out those songsters and buy a good pair of Scotch Fancies, but I ask Mr. Dunlop whether such a pair would pay me as well as, say, three pairs of Yorkshires at the same price, going strong and doing their own feeding. I have often been out of work for eight or nine weeks at a stretch, through no fault of my own, and a pair or two of songsters sold during any of those weeks have helped wonderfully; in fact, I could not hope for the same from the more expensive birds.

I trust Mr. Dunlop will not think I do not care for the Scotch Fancy, for I can assure him that if I could afford it the first thing I would do would be to purchase a pair or two of them, as my father kept them almost 40 years ago, and I always was a great admirer of the Scotch Fancy. But what a change we can see in them! Mr. Dunlop can speak of 20 years ago; they were then birds of circle, not as now. Some of the present birds could be shown as both Belgian and Scotch Fancies.

Bird Fancier's Son.

No Encouragement for Exhibitors.

Sir,—Hard lines seem to be the fate of the Scotch Fancy Canary. If you have a good bird to exhibit there is no class for him, or if there is an A.O.V. class very often there must be eight or nine entries or only 50 per cent. of prize money will be paid. This reduces the first prize to 5s., or less in some cases, with an entry fee of 1s. 6d., which does not pay your expenses, saying nothing of running the risk of sending out a good bird which is worth more pounds than you win shillings in prize money.

Having sent for entry schedules from some good shows, we find some have not so much as given an A.O.V. class. Cannot something be done to remedy this state of affairs respecting one of the grandest breeds which graces our show bench? We should like to hear other fanciers' views on this subject.

Meeting at Cardiff Show Arranged.

Sir,—I am arranging a meeting to take place at Cardiff Show on Wednesday, Nov. 29, at 7 p.m., and I should be glad if all secretaries or those appointed to represent their respective societies will kindly drop me a postcard to 14, St. John's Square, Cardiff, on or before Tuesday, Nov. 28. This will give me an opportunity to draw up a list of proposed dates which I shall submit to the meeting for discussion.

In the meantime I should be happy to receive any suggestions, and I would also like fanciers to consider the advisability of spreading the dates over Oct., Nov., Dec., Jan., and Feb., instead of trying to work in all the dates between the second week in Oct. and the first week in Dec., as at present adopted by the majority of Welsh shows.

ROUND THE BIRD SHOWS.

FINE SHOW AT GLASGOW.

Over a Thousand Entries.—The Cream of the Norwich Fancy.

The annual show of the Glasgow C.B.A. was held in the Albert Halls, Bath Street, Nov. 10 and 11, under the patronage of the Scottish Plainhead Club, whose annual show was also held in conjunction. Patronage of the Border Fancy C.C. and Scottish C.C. was also obtained, and a more representative gathering of the varieties catered for has seldom been seen. Nearly 1,100 specimens were on exhibition, and quality was a most conspicuous factor throughout.

Norwich Plainheads were the cream of the Fancy; never have we seen such a vast improvement in any variety, some of the classes containing between 30 and 40, and providing easily three or four sets of winners. It must have been a hot job for the judges to select from such a magnificent lot. The unflighted yellow cock claimed at the catalogue price of £20 10s., was the produce of a novice of three seasons. This is undoubtedly a bird with a great future. It has plenty of size and quality, fine front, is neatly got up, and has a combination of all the qualities necessary in the breeding room. Other good sales were effected; but this was the best. Border Fancies were quite an even lot, and quality was fully in evidence. In the green and cinnamon varieties the small Norwich of a year ago were conspicuous by their absence, and something of the proper stamp was in their place. Yorks were not so numerous as might have been, but what was amiss in numbers was compensated for in quality. British were very well represented, both in numbers and quality, many well known faces figuring in the battle array. Noteworthy amongst them was Mr. McQuiston's Cornish Chough, an old warrior, and now winner of 120 first prizes, but age is becoming apparent, and he was hotly pursued by Mr. E. Taylor's Grey Shrike, shown in masterly style. Perfection is the term which could also be applied to the same owner's Grey Wagtail, no one being able to see where improvement could be desired, either in the bird or in its staging. Foreigners were not largely represented, but Mr. P. Arnott turned out a hot team. The management of this show have every reason to feel proud of themselves in their effort of charity, for, with numerous sales and a good gate, a substantial sum will be handed over in aid of our Blinded Soldiers and Sailors. The office-bearers are all first rate fanciers, and know how to deal with trouble when it comes, so that everything was in apple-pie order. President Maxwell, Vices Sloan and Craig—what a trio!—full of work and go. Assist. Sec. Park, and Secretary Hutchison, are men whose reputation as show organisers is established, while the Committee is comprised of popular and hard-working fanciers, whose thoughts are for the safety and welfare of the exhibits consigned to their care. Committee: R. T. Anderson, F. Taylor, J. Fulton, E. Barron, E. Taylor, T. Taylor, D. F. Webster, P. Houston, C. Martin, J. Swan, R. Watson, A. K. Hunter, W. McClymont, J. Kerr, A. Muir. Auditors: R. B. Gibb, A. Crawford. The judges, who gave general satisfaction, were: Crests, C. Campbell, Glasgow; Norwich, W. Simpson, Airdrie, and W. Grewar, Lochgelly; Borders, G. Hyslop, Stirling; Yorks., R. Heggie, Stepps; British and Foreign, Messrs. Jamieson, Glasgow, R. Gentleman, Avonbridge.

MR. C. CAMPBELL'S CLASSES.

NOV. CK. (34): 1, Braid, yell., lovely col., A1 qual., grand front and well filled in top emi, best of carr., in full bloom; 2, Proctor, var. buff, nice size, fine full head, neck, rich silky feather, just requires little more front to make topper; 3, Irvine, cl. yell., fine type, nice qual., A1 style, perfect carr., well balanced through, we liked for 2nd place; 4, Stewart, yell. var., plenty size, sound col., wants handling; 5, Morris; 6, Robertson; 7, Pentland. GLASGOW & W. OF SCOTLAND

Annual show, October 28, Good Templar Halls, Ingram Street, Glasgow. There was a distinct improvement both in the number and quality of the exhibits. Norwich were strong, and representative of the best breeders of the West, many real top-notchers being on view. Borders were scarcely so numerous, but quality was in evidence right through the classes. Yorks., while containing the best Canary in the hall, were fewer in number, but of superb quality. British were a very level lot, many well-known specimens doing their bit once again amongst fresh rivals. Mr. Grewar judged Norwich, Mr. Heggie Yorkshires and Bords., and the British section was disposed of by Mr. Crawford. Keen interest was taken in the judging of the various teams entered for Mr. Hughes' trophy (best four birds). Crack teams were up from each section, and after a deal of scrutinizing the coveted prize was awarded to Mr. J. Crone's team of winning Hybrids—no mean lot to battle against.

Everything passed off successfully under the leadership of the genial sec., Mr. Matthew Craig, who is a worker of the first order, as everybody knows, and we were pleased to learn that the venture proved a financial success

FINE NOVICE CLASSES.

Second Annual Show held at White Horse Assembly Rooms, Nov. 9. The show room at ordinary times would be ideal for an exhibition, being well lighted on all sides, but unfortunately owing to the lighting restrictions, two sides of the hall had the windows darkened halfway which took a great deal of the light away. The judging was conducted at the end of room in a perfect light. The birds were neatly staged in tiers, and here and there palms and plants were interspersed, giving the show a very charming appearance.

Entries totalled just over 400, a good advance on last year's total. The show manager, Mr. Chas. Broome, had everything in apple-pie order, and judging started promptly, everything going off without a hitch, which reflected great credit on him and his hardworking assistants, amongst whom we noticed Messrs. Lapworth, Gilbert, Latham, Pitt, Morgan, Daniels, Godfrey, and Evans. The Sec., Mr. Geo. Broome, is a great asset to the society, carrying out his duties in a very able manner, and leaving no stone unturned to make the show a success.

Norwich were a very fine lot, the cl. buff ck. (Messrs. Stubbs Bros.) and var. yell. unflg. (Mr. G. T. Jones) being birds hard to find a fault with, and other notable exhibits were put down by Messrs. Tedstone, Broome Bros., Thomas and Mr. and Mrs. Weeks. Yorks, though not strong in numbers were very level, quality only in many instances separating the winners, Messrs. Bale, Pritchard, Newell, Morgan, and Maidment, all showing fine teams. The novices in this section made a great show, 80 in four classes, giving the judge an anxious time in separating them, in fact all of those in the money could have held their own in the champion classes, Messrs. Pitt, Hiscox, Latham, Griffiths, and Terretts exhibits, to mention only a few, being birds of exceptional merit. Borders were splendid, the yellow cocks being charming, and quality all through this section being exceedingly fine, well known winners being put down by Mesars. Madagan, Jenkins, Owen, Lapworth, and Messer. The novices here again caused somewhat of a sensation with 21 cocks and 15 hens, all well above the average, chief honours going to Messrs. Edgington and Daniels. British and Mules were not up to the usual Welsh standard. What has become of all the old hands? Exhibitors cannot expect classes to be provided if they are not supported. We know many have been called on national service, but surely there are enough exhibitors left to provide more than 34 entries in five classes. Mr. J. H. Roe judged.

EAST LOTHIAN.

Annual show, held Nov. 11, in a wooden erection temporarily put up for the duration of war. The entry, which was a good one, filled the hall completely, and only left bare room for the visiting public; we were pleased to see so many young soldiers taking more than a passing interest in the exhibits, and from their conversation found that they had a good understanding of the British birds exhibited. The hall was very comfortable for the exhibits, but just on the dark side for light, which made the work of the judges rather trying, but all got through their work in good time, and their awards gave general satisfaction. The show all through proved a good attraction surplus will be handed over to the Red Cross Society we trust this worthy cause will receive substantial help. All the office-bearers are fanciers of the right stamp, all showing the greatest enthusiasm for the welfare of exhibitors, visitors, and Judges; indeed, we may say the annual show of Haddington was a red-letter day for all.

The stewards were always to be found at their posts, and everything went on smoothly under their directions. Last, but not least, the secretary, Mr. Fairgrieve, is the right man in the right place, and untiring in his efforts to make the show a success. The judges were: J. Patterson, Chirnside, Scotch Fancies and Local Borders; Wm. Thomson, Smeeton, Borders; J. Holmes, Edinburgh, Norwich; and James Livingstone, Bathgate, Brit. and For.

Scotch Fancies all over were a good lot, some birds of merit leading in every class, and particular mention may be made of the Buff Cock and the Buff Pied Cock, which came in for the lion's share of the specials. In confined Borders the leaders, all Buffs, were of high merit, and some on a level with those shown in the open classes. Borders, as usual, were the paying section of the show. The quality was first-class, some well-known winners taking their usual place amongst the honours. The B.F.C.C. medal was won by a yellow green cock, a perfect gem, but not just so fine in head as we would like. A very regrettable feature in this section was that the names of two exhibitors were marked in pencil on the bottoms of their cages. One of the exhibits, a clear yellow hen, won first in her class, but in our opinion the committee should have disqualified the birds before judging, the show being held under B.F.C.C. rules, which clearly state that all cages with distinguishing marks be disqualified from competition. The matter will be brought up at the general meeting of the B.F.C.C., for in fairness to both judge and exhibitors this is the only course now open.

Norwich were a very even lot; a very nice Crest led the way, and came in for a deall of attention. Plainheads were rather on the long side for our fancy, but quality was all there. British birds at Haddington are always an interesting section, most of the leading species being exhibited. The Foreign section was small, but Mr. Nesbit's King Parrot is as fresh as ever after some 20 years on the show bench.

Special winners: Best Scotch Fancy, Chapman; Young, J. and D. Gordon; the B.F.C.C. open medal, Reid; Novice medal, Eadie; best Nor. and best bird confined to county, Burns; cup, most points, Docker and Titilah 63; 2, Patterson 56; cup, 6 nominated birds, J. Wood; runner-up, Docker and Titilah.

LEITH O.S.

57th Annual Show, Nov. 11, in Junction Road Church Halls. Birds were nicely staged round the sides and up the centre. Owing to a great number of members being on foreign service entries were slightly down. Scotch Fancies were above the average in quality, and contained some grand birds. Mr. G. Hope was the cup winner in this section. Norwich contained some of the best staged this season, and appeared to be well up to the standard. Crests made a nice show and contained some very nice birds. Mr. Geo. R. Smith winning cup for best in this section, and the Norwich. Borders were well up and made the strongest entries in the show. Here again some exceptionally very fine birds were shown. Mr. G. W. Brown being the cup winner. British and Mules were slightly down, but made it up in quality. Mr. J. Allan won cup in the British and Mr. P. West in the mule section with a Goldie mule. In the absence of the Pres., Mr. Smith, vice-pres., filled his place to the satisfaction of all. As a body of workers it would be hard to find such an able lot from the vice-pres. downwards. Unfortunately the Sec., Mr. Muir, had to go home unwell, but his place was ably filled by the late Sec., Mr. G. Brown. Judges were Scotch Fancies, Messrs. Eason and Brown; Norwich, Mr. Winter; Borders, Messrs. Lumsden and McAdam; British, etc., Mr. C. Sykes, who all appeared to give general satisfaction.

ALFRETON

The third annual open show of the Alfreton C.B.S. took place Nov. 11, and proved a success. The exhibition was held in the large and nicely-lighted assembly room attached to the Red Lion Hotel. The entry was a capital one (240), and quality far better than on previous occasions. Prize money was on the sliding scale. Norwich were truly a superb lot, as was to be expected, considering that around this district many well-known fanciers reside. Mr. Wm. Vardy put down gems and took most of the spoil. Other rare specimens were staged by Messrs. J. Adnitt, Butler and Barlow, J. Smedley, and A. J. Smith. Yorkshires also were nice, Messrs. F. Potts, W. Vardy, Beardall and Walker, A. J. Smith, and W. Green putting down, in the best of fettle, real beauties. British were a treat; toppers were shown by Messrs. Hayter and Bunn and Lilley Bros. Hybrids of great merit were the Can.-Bullf. and Greenf.-Bullf. (Hayter and Bunn) and the Buff Goldie-Can., mkd. wings and eyes (A. Smith). Members' classes contained more than a few of real classical exhibits. Choice specimens were those of Messrs. F. Taylor, W. Taylor, S. Cook, T. Cook, T. Goddard, A. Spencer, and G. Sawer Bros.

Spl. most points in show, F. Potts. Best Brit., a magnificent Greenie, superbly staged by Messrs. Hayter and Bunn. Second best a delightfully coloured Siskin, Lilley Bros. Medal best novice bird, T. Goddard, a choice cl. yell. Nor. of magnificent colour.

The Committee is composed of well-known fanciers, and great credit is due to the following for the exertions they put forth, viz.: Messrs. J. Cockayne, C. Sower, A. Spencer, A. Webster, S. Newton, R. H. Holt, J. Adnitt, S. Henshaw, and A. Abbott. President is Mr. W. Marsh, who finely supports the Society. Mr. G. Sawer, the worthy sec., is courteous, and a great worker. Nothing is too much for him to do—a right man in the right place.

Amongst the many visitors we saw were Messrs. E. Fox (Long Eaton), W. Vardy and Barlow (Bucknall), D. Hunter (Scarbro), J. W. H. Boaler (Nottingham), J. Drew (York), W. Birchmshaw (Clay Cross), and others. Staging of exhibits was well done, and every bird seen at a glance.

Unfortunately in several cases the judge, Mr. J. C. Barnes, had to disqualify specimens in the marked classes. These were birds far too lightly marked for the green or heavily marked classes. Birds eligible for this latter class must be more dark than light, but some here were wing and eye marks that should have been entered in the clear or lightly marked classes. Mr. A. Revill's birds, Burton-on-Trent, did not arrive until 7.30 Saturday night. Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield) judged, and gave full satisfaction.

CANARY PICKING ITSELF.

R. W.—As the feathers are also disappearing from the back of the head, it is clear that there is some other cause at work besides the bird constantly picking at its feathers to account for the baldness. You would do well to thoroughly examine the bird and cage to see if you can find any trace of either grey mice or red mites, and if so, take the necessary steps to exterminate them, when it is quite likely that the effects will soon pass away as a matter of course. If no insects are discovered treat as follows for a month or so. See that it is kept in a bright and cosy place, not necessarily overheated, nor yet on the cold side, and do not expose it to direct draughts or rapid extremes of heat and cold. Offer the bath on each bright, mild day, but leave it to the bird's discretion whether it bathes or not. If it does not choose to do so, do not attempt any more hand-washing. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape, and in addition to this give separately every third day a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut dusted with flour of sulphur and sprinkled with maw seed. On the following day each time add to the water ten drops of lemon juice and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence, and on the remaining days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, and broken groats, and also a morsel of banana or carrot, the latter either raw or boiled. A piece of cuttlefish stuck in the wires for a week or two will help to divert the bird's attention from picking its plumage to pieces.

NORWICH HEN SOFT.

J. T.—The hen is in a soft condition, which may very well be due to the prevailing conditions of weather of late, to which unfavourable influences, possibly, she is susceptible. Keep her in a fairly warm place, but not overheated, free from direct draughts or damp, and in addition to the staple seed diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight, and on alternate days half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, and broken groats, and a morsel of raw or boiled carrot. Offer the bath twice a week on bright days, and early in the day, but do not worry if she does not take advantage of it. In the drinking water every second day for a week add six drops of Syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda, the size of a small pea, and after this give instead four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight.

DAMP WALL IN AVIARY.

Yorkshire.—I should say the excessive dampness which you describe rises from the ground, or from some source on the other side of the wall, and until it is remedied the place will be quite unfit to keep your birds in permanently with any hopes of success. Your best course is to keep the birds indoors for this winter, and meantime try to discover the origin of the dampness and remove the cause, if possible, and in any case it would be a wise plan to make a drain below the surface of the ground at the foot of the wall. In addition to this take advantage of any spell of dry weather during the winter, so that the wall will then be comparatively dry, to give it a coating of some damp resisting fluid, several of which are on the market and can be bought at any paint and colour shop. One such preparation is "Petrifax," but there are many others, probably all much alike, as to which any colourman would advise you if you explained the purpose for which it was required. The stuff is painted on the surface similar to whitewashing, and in an extreme case such as yours it would be a good plan to give four coats, allowing each to dry before applying another, and to make a point to wait for a favourable opportunity when the wall is as dry as possible to make the applications.

A SLEEPY YORKSHIRE.

Gladys, N. W. T.—Possibly, the bird is more susceptible to cold than the others, and would do better for a time indoors in a cosy room where no fires are kept, but free from draughts and damp. Apart from this probable cause of his torpid condition, I am inclined to think there is little the matter except that he is probably overfeeding himself. After taking the above precautionary step give a staple diet of plain canary seed only, and in addition limit the extras to a half a teaspoonful of egg-food, or the equivalent in bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed, once a week, and on one other day a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, black rape and broken groats. When green salads cannot be obtained in fit condition for use give three times a week as a substitute a morsel of raw or boiled carrot, banana or sweet apple. In the drinking water for three consecutive days, and then every second day for the rest of the week, add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and after this give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight. Of course you will not dream of mating him for months yet, even if he does get in good condition and song. The end of March or beginning of April will be quite early enough for this in the best of circumstances. If he is not well and active in a month or six weeks from now write again and repeat particulars, when I will advise you further.

EARLY IMPOTENCE.

All Clear.—The failure to secure any results with any of four hens certainly points to the cock being the faulty partner, but to make this evidence conclusive the hens should have been mated with other cocks to see if normal results were then obtained. It is undoubtedly possible for a cock to lose his powers at any time, even after only the first season, or reproductive powers may even not be developed at all. Assuming that the bird was not more than two years old, and had bred successfully in its first season, its failure to fertilise eggs in its second season may have been due either to natural or mechanical causes. In the former case only a practical test next season could prove whether the bird would be of any use that season or not, and in the latter case the removal of the cause would in all probability ensure a normal amount of fertility at once. A quite common cause of this description is too dense and profuse feathering about the flanks and lower breast, and birds of this class should have the loose flowing tips of the feathers on these parts trimmed at the beginning of the breeding season. It is not necessary to disfigure a bird at all, but just clip off the loose straggling feathers to bring them to a smooth and well-fitting shape. With some birds loose and wobbly perches are also a source of clear eggs being produced, and a very frequent cause of the trouble is when mating invariably takes place in the nest. In the latter case it is a good plan when the hen is coming on for laying to place some object in the nest, for the greater part of the day, after it is completed, to prevent the hen squatting flat in the cup of the nest when calling to the cock, and continuing this until the third egg is laid and the hen is being put to sit. It would probably be well worth trying the bird for a first nest next season in order to give attention to these details, and see how the fertility of the eggs was affected thereby.

STILL MOULTING.

Pansy, Bargoed.—The bleeding to which you refer is almost certainly due to the bird knocking out a newly sprouting quill whilst it was in the sappy, or "blood" stage. As the bird is so active, it would be a good plan to throw a light cover over the cage for a fortnight or three weeks to keep it fairly quiet and avoid the risk of it being fluttered by trivial alarms until the larger quill feathers are well grown. Give the same staple diet as advised in last reply, but vary the seed mixture by making it of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, black rape, linseed and broken groats, with a sprinkling of gold of pleasure and mustard, and give the same quantity as before. Also add two drops of cod liver oil emulsion to the bread and milk each time you give it, and keep a morsel of raw carrot stuck in the wires of the cage for it to peck at. In the drinking water, instead of the Chemical Food, add a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a split pea and six drops of dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight, and then if the feathers have not ceased dropping omit it for a week, and resume it and give for another fortnight.

TO BRING ON SONG.

Mrs. Wallace Barr.—It is not unusual for some birds to take a more or less long rest after moulting before they resume singing. Now and again one will not begin until the opening of the new year. When they are slow to resume song placing them near a bird in full, vigorous song, will very often incite them to begin almost at once, and practically always shorten the period of silence. If this method is not convenient the following treatment will help to bring them on song as quickly as anything, always, of course, assuming that the bird is in good health and condition. In addition to the staple diet give every third day, a half teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the intervening days give first a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, and broken groats, and add to the drinking water ten drops of lemon juice, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence, and give a morsel of banana. It will also prove helpful if you keep a little of the following paste stuck in the wires for it to peck at when it likes for a time. Mix together a teaspoonful of cod liver oil emulsion, ditto of pure honey, as much chlorate of potash as will cover a shilling, ditto of powdered grain of paradise, and as much finely powdered biscuit as will bring it to the consistency of a soft cheese. Keep a small piece pressed between the wires on the cross-bar at the end of a perch and renew it as often as necessary. A month of this treatment should bring it out into full song.

SEA SAND FOR CAGES.

P. H. P.—Yes, provided the sand is gathered from a clean and uncontaminated portion of the beach, such sand is quite suitable for use in cages instead of the usual grit bought in bags. The trace of salt which it contains is in no way detrimental; indeed it is more beneficial than otherwise. The only objection that could be found to its saline nature is that if strongly impregnated with salt it is apt to become damp in the cages in wet weather, but this objection vanishes if the cages are cleaned with commendable frequency, or, on the other hand it is quite easy to remove the salt by putting the sand through a bucket or two of fresh water and then spreading it out to dry before use.

GOLDFINCH WITH GROWTH ON BEAK.

W. Mansfield.—The best treatment for the growth at the base of the beak is a careful operation, but this should be performed by someone skilled in such matters, and I would not advise you to attempt it yourself. If you should happen to know a medical man or chemist who is interested in birds, he would probably attend to it for you. A complete change in the bird's diet would possibly prevent it spreading. Give soaked seeds two or three times a week, and as much wild seed as you can manage. Give him an aperient of Epsom or glauber salts occasionally, and add a few drops of fresh lemon juice to his drinking water.

CONCERNING MULES FOR EXHIBITION.

A. T. K.—I must congratulate you upon your success and hope you have something good among your birds. Strictly speaking a dark Mule should be dark all over, no white feathers round the neck, in flight or tail, nor base of the body, which are the places they usually show. In some club rules one is allowed to exhibit as dark Mules those with "more dark than light plumage," but this is seldom the case in open competition; there a dark mule must be quite dark. A lightly marked mule would be one with light ticks or marks about the body, a feather or two in the wings, or perhaps grizzled. A two-pointed bird, that is, one with both wings marked, or both eyes marked, is allowed to be exhibited as a lightly marked bird, not as an even marked. In exhibiting one is guided by the schedule issued by the show officials; these vary considerably, according to the size and importance of the exhibition. A clear mule is a clear absolutely, but these are rare, and schedules are generally worded: "Any variety light Mule," "clear or lightly marked," and other definitions. As regards value, as a rule the nearer to clear the more valuable, but of course in judging these, size, colour, quality of feather, and condition are taken into consideration, so that it is possible for a marked Mule to beat a clear. If you have any promising birds I would advise you to keep them another year, as they make up, grow, and improve considerably.

BIRDS NOT MOULTING.

H. Hutson.—I fear you can do nothing now to induce your birds to moult. Had you written earlier we might have managed it. A change of temperature or a fly in an aviary will frequently succeed if given at the moulting period. I would advise you to feed them well and treat them in every way as if they had moulted. They may manage it in the Spring, or have an early summer moult. A few drops of whisky in the drinking water will frequently cure a slight cold.

KEEPING BIRDS OUTSIDE.

Wilfrid Saxon.—Many of our cage birds can be kept in an outside aviary. The Finches and Bunting are the most suitable, and a few of the softbills. Canaries may be kept in an unheated building, providing it is not draughty or damp. An outside aviary for breeding purposes cannot be too large, as room is essential where they are put up for breeding purpose. A cage to contain three pairs for breeding would be quite useless. If you could manage to erect a place about ten feet long it is quite possible that pairs of Greenfinches, Canaries, Goldfinches, or Redpolls, might nest. These generally agree together very well.

A BACKWARD GREYPATE.

Puzzled.—Perhaps yours was a late hatched bird and has not had time to finish his moult. The few patches of colour may be due to the bird having knocked out some of its nest feathers, and these therefore would be the first to grow. It will of course have to have a clean moult before showing its proper plumage. Be careful that you do not keep him in a draught, and give a bath of tepid water on fine days, this will assist. Let his food be good, and try him with a mealworm; if he will take it, give one every day.

FINCH WITH EYE TROUBLE.

A. M. C.—If, as you say, the sight is not impaired, you have no cause to worry about your Greenfinch. Possibly the bird has had a cold, and the watery matter from the eye has caused a few of the small feathers to come out. This would make the bird look very unsightly, and account for the redness you speak of. Catch the bird and bathe the eyes daily in a solution of boric acid. Put half a teaspoonful in a warm cup, then a few drops of water, and make it into a paste, filling up the cup with warm water. Bathe the eye with a small piece of soft rag or sponge, and dry with a clean rag. Do this daily. See that clean perches are given every morning; have a duplicate set, and wash those you take out even if they appear clean.

SAMPLE OF WILD SEEDS.

J. Hicks.—I have examined the sample of wild seed sent in, and consider it quite a good one, suitable for Linnets, Greenfinches, Bullfinches, Twites, and Redpolls. The majority of it is a species of wild rape or mustard, but it also contains several other species such as dock, gold of pleasure, thistle, dandelion, grass, etc. These latter seeds would be picked out by the Goldfinch, and as the residue of rape would be practically untouched it could scarcely be called a suitable wild seed mixture for that bird.

OPINION ON RAPE.

P. G. S., Rugby.—The seed sent is cole. It is sometimes sold as rape, English rape, black rape, etc. The quality is good, but I do not consider it suitable to take the place of genuine summer rape in the staple diet. It is more suited to form part of a seed mixture for occasional use. Summer rape is about one third smaller than this, and of a reddish-brown colour in the bulk, though individual grains vary from red to blackish.

HENS PLUCKING COCK.

Bird Lover.—(1) Possibly the occasional plucking of a single feather from the cock is merely a mischievous prank due to the hens being in a little high condition for the season. The sexes would be much better now kept separately until time to mate next spring, and in your case it would be well to remove the cock to a cage by himself for singing, and tie a bit or two of coarse string on the wires of the aviary at the end of the perches if the hens turn their attention to the other birds when the cock Canary is removed. If this does not stop the habit the culprits should be caged alone. (2) Unless the 1914 hen has been an exceptionally good breeder and feeder you would do well to discard her for future breeding. It would be wisest to keep the 1916 hen for next year's breeding. (3) Yes, a 1915 cock will do all right for a stock bird next season if he is in good health and vigour. (4) A rich-coloured yellow would probably give you the best colour generally in the Mules, and a buff the best size. It is not essential to keep the hens with the Finches through the winter; but it sometimes serves to get them more sociable and friendly against the spring. (5) If a hen occasionally plucks a feather as yours have done it is no certain indication that they would pluck their young. Sometimes the habits alter considerably when a hen becomes mated. J,u 5a

FOREIGN BIRDS.

AILING GREY PARROT.

African.—Keep it in a warm room, but it must be one with a fairly regular temperature. Give it one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia, to each ounce of its drinking water, every fourth day, so long as the bowels are not abnormally loose; if the latter occurs then only give the magnesia once a week. On the days you do not give the magnesia, colour the drinking water with chemical food. Give it as much ripe fruit as it cares to eat; also add to your seed mixture sunflower seeds and oats, and do not give much hemp. Twice a day give it a piece of biscuit on which honey and borax has been lightly spread. A few sips, two or three times a day, of diluted tepid milk, containing two drops of brandy or whisky to each tablespoonful, would be helpful at this juncture. Keep cuttlebone continually in the cage. You must continue the treatment for some time, as complete recovery will not be rapid. Report progress in three or four weeks, but if there should be any recurrence of unfavourable symptoms write again at once with full details.

WHAT LOVEBIRD?

Miss H. W. B.—Your description reads rather like that of the Blue-winged Lovebird (Passerine Parrakeet), but your description is not sufficiently full for me to be definite. Are these birds entirely green, except under the wings? Is there any other colour on the lower back? Are the flight and tail feathers entirely green? What is the colour of the beak and bare skin round eyes? Any markings or colour there may be about them, apart from the general body colour of Emerald green, you must describe, and I then hope to be able to definitely state the species. How are you feeding them?

IDENTIFICATION OF BIRD.

R. V. K.—Your description is somewhat vague, but I have little doubt that the birds you saw were Madagascar Weavers, which in the breeding season are entirely fiery scarlet. By watching our advert. columns or putting in an advertisement therein yourself, you would undoubtedly soon obtain a specimen. They are often advertised as Scarlet Weavers. In the avicultural world it does not do to say anything is impossible, but I should say the successful mating of a Weaver and a Canary was most improbable. Some time ago a correspondent claimed to have reared a hybrid between an Orange Weaver and a Canary, but in the writer's opinion the data supplied were somewhat unconvincing.

WHAT BIRD?

Novice, D.M.—I much regret that I cannot be definite concerning the bird you describe, as the colonial name you quote I cannot find in any of my books. Your dietary will ahout meet the case. In the meantime, I will take an early opportunity of looking into the matter further, and enlarging upon this reply. I think it may possibly be some species of Syealis (Saffron Finches), or some species of Spermophila (Grass Quits), but at the moment have not sufficient data to reach a definite conclusion. Your treatment would suffice for either genus.

FLAMINGOES

C. B., Anxious.—These birds are waders, have long stilt-like legs, and stand some four to five feet high. Some species are all white, with rosy-pink beaks and feet; others are more or less suffused with rosy-pink; others again are almost entirely rosy-red, and again others are rosy-red with wing-flights black. These brief descriptions are somewhat crude, but they should suffice to give you a general idea of range of colour. Most Natural Histories include figures of the Flamingo and you should have no difficulty in getting a sight of such, at any rate uncoloured.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. The Post Office regulation is that bodies of birds must be sent at the letter rate of postage, and must be packed in hermetically-sealed receptacles which must themselves be enclosed in strong wooden, leather, or metal cases. If this regulation be infringed the packets may be destroyed by the authorities. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

C. HARRISON.—Linnet succumbed to pneumonia, attributable to a cold; both lungs were affected, whilst all other organs were quite healthy, and the general condition of the bird good.

GENERAL.

THE NEST OF THE GOLDFINCH.

J. Burnell.—The statement that "no one ever living knew of a Goldfinch nest in a thorn hedge" is certainly not a statement of fact. The favourite nesting places of the Goldfinch are in the forks of fruit trees, or on the branches of evergreens in shrubberies, but it certainly nests also in hedges. One does not generally go to the poets for accurate knowledge of bird life, but the following lines from the poet Grahame state the fact clearly:—

"Sometimes in hedge luxuriant, where the brier,
The bramble, and the plum tree branch,
Warp through the thorn, surmounted by the flowers
Of climbing vetch and honeysuckle wild."

AIDS TO SUCCESS.

Our Books and a Common-sense Application of the Advice therein MUST bring you Profit as well as Pleasure

All the experience of years of careful study by experts is at the disposal of readers.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 2/2.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide when deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2.—By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts, Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2, "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge. Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Normar. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

The book contains 133 illustrations, a few of which are here reproduced. Thus, "Our Canaries" not only tells you but shows you. If you are a novice, or breed only for pleasure, you will be delighted with the increased enjoyment which the book will enable you to derive from your hobby. If you are an "old hand," or breed for profit, it will help you to increase profits.

"Our Canaries" will be sent you for Free Examination—Approval for a deposit of only 1/-. If, after examination, you return the book, your deposit will at once be refunded. If, however, you decide to keep the book, you can pay the balance by easy monthly instalments. Thus you have everything to gain and nothing to lose by sending for a copy. Do so TO-DAY.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit system should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.

It is advisable that all newly-purchased birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

Cock Goldfinches, real English Peartree birds, every bird a giant and clean through moult, all on song, 2/6, 3/-, 3/6, and a grand lot of extra giants, with deep square cut blaze, broad heads, rightly tanned, no smokey little rubbish, 4/6, 5/6; gem, 7/6; and one of the best under wires, 10/6; every Goldfinch I offer is guaranteed English and caught from the orchard. Monster cock Greenfinches, real gems, 2/6, 3/6 each; Chaffinches real gems, 1/6, 2/-, 2/6; Lesser Redpolls, can win, 2/6 each; Norwich type cock Linnets, well pencilled, good rich colour, real giants, steady as rocks, ready to win, 2/6, 3/-, 3/6 each; house-moulted prize-winners, can win under any judge, 10/6, 12/6, 15/6, 20/-; cock Linnets, learnt under my undefeated champion cup winner, quality songsters, 2/6, 3/6, 4/6, 5/6 each; also a grand lot of free songsters, suitable for time singing, or call-birds, 1/-, 1/6, 2/- each; good call Linnet and call-cage, 3/- lot; house-moulted contest Linnets, will sing at anything, 10/6, 12/6, 15/6, 20/-; cock Canaries, on Linnet song, learnt under my champion Linnet, and helped along with my own Linnet whistling ("Cage Birds" has described me as the human Linnet). I guarantee these Canaries to be in the correct tone, and able to make two, three, and four ways of scraping, can run, reeling, chattering, whinnying and preing, 10/6, 15/6, 20/- each, and one the best I ever heard, 40/-; Goldfinch Mules, pure Finch notes, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6; Goldfinch Mules, on Canary song, 8/6, 10/6; cock Goldfinch, H.M., father of above Mules, 20/-, he will sing anywhere. I have some of the finest and largest Norwich in the country, 20/- pair (ten pairs to dispose of), all colour-fed and can win. Cock Canaries, full song, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6; hens, 2/6, 3/6; Yellow Budgerigars, 8/- pair; Cockatoo, talking, 35/-; Rock Parrots, 7/6, 10/6 each. Harry Allen's Linnet Booklet, 6d.; Linnet and Roller whistles, no others made to whistle like them, 6d.; try a bag of my Secret Mixture, it will make your birds sing at one another, used by all leading contest singers, 1/3, post free. I have a few foreign hen Bullfinches, right for Hybrid breeding, 2/6, 3/6 each, every bird a giant. I have a grand lot of Linnets, Goldfinches, Bullfinches and Greenfinches in their large travelling box ready for their journey to New York. I have also received enquiries this week for my birds from Texas, Lisburn, and Toronto. I have thousands of testimonials. My birds can stand travelling; for instance, I sent, on Monday, Nov. 20th, four cock Goldies to Guernsey, and they did not reach their destination until Wednesday. Mr. West, Riverside Vineries, Guernsey, wrote: "The Goldfinches arrived safe, and are beauties." Gentlemen, write your requirements if you want value and honesty. I send all my birds on approval for cash, or deposit with Editor, therefore I am bound to please you; travelling boxes 2d. each.

WOULD YOU BELIEVE YOUR OWN EYES?

Well then, there are two things you can do; either have any bird or birds on approval, or make an appointment with me to call and SEE THIS WONDERFUL COLLECTION WITH YOUR OWN EYES.

I do not keep any shop, and should wish to see you and show you round personally. That is the reason for appointment. Here follows as usual a few prices of Norwich Plainheads, Yorkshires, Crests, and Crestbreds.

This is the price per pair of prize-bred Norwich or Yorkshires, carefully and correctly matched by me personally. I exercise the same care with every pair, whatever price may be selected, as though I were doing it for myself; and, at the same time, giving you now such value as it will be impossible to give later on. Odd cocks, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-. Hens, 4/6, 5/6, 7/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-. Pairs of Crests and Crestedbreds, correctly matched, 21/-, 30/-, 40/-, 60/- upwards. All on approval. Cages 4d. and 6 N.B.—I am fully alive to the fact that you can purchase Canaries of a sort at lower prices. I am also fully aware that Hens are being sold as singing Cocks to the poor innocents by cowardly land sharks. For all other varieties see my free list.

RUDD, Specialist, Norwich.

Respecting the "Manchuria" consignment some three weeks ago, consisting of 4,000 odd birds, I beg to state that the whole of the above consignment—with the exception of 144 birds sent over by a Norwich firm—were my sole property, and purchased by me in this country. Some people seem to forget that I hold all the cheques which have been paid through my bank to local dealers, these same cheques being evidence of the number of birds that were bought, paid for, and from whom purchased.

THESE ARE SIMPLE IRRESISTIBLE FACTS.

During the last two weeks 2,000 Canaries have been purchased. It pleases me to say that in making such an extensive purchase not one single deduction or any dispute has occurred with any sender.

REQUIREMENTS

for this coming week are 2,000 Canaries, for which 12/6 upwards will be paid.

SCOTTISH ROLLER C.C.

Meeting Nov. 8, Liberal Club, Sattevats, Mr. Jackson chair. Proposal to join Association of Roller Societies carried. Members' show date still uncertain, owing to Mr. Tomlinson being unable to give date yet.—Jas. Macdonald, Sec.

PLYMOUTH W.C.O.S.

Monthly meeting Nov. 21. Mr. W. French presided over a good number. The sec., Mr. W. A. Dyer, read the show statement, which shows a balance to the good of £2 16s., a splendid result from a members' show, and also a credit to himself, seeing this is the first show he has carried out. I hope we shall be able to keep him in this position. Next month a pair show will be held, when we hope members will make a good entry.—J. E. Rowe, Press correspondent.

HIRST (East End Social Club

Meeting, Nov. 4, Mr. C. Tapson presided over a good attendance. Decided to hold the annual show Dec. 30. Mr. E. Thompson, Woodhorn, judge. Show to be held in Club. Next meeting Dec. 9. Still open to new members.—W. Hall, Sec.

WALKLEY C.B.S.

Meeting, headquarters, Nov. 9, Mr. Bidal presiding. Members' show postponed until Dec. 2. Mr. Barnes, judge. Entries taken Nov. 30, at headquarters, 8 to 9, or may be handed to me at the Sheffield Show. The society has no radius, fanciers desirous of joining will be welcomed, and further particulars can be obtained from me. A vote of sympathy was passed with Mr. R. Smith on the death of his wife. Next meeting final table show.—E. Sisson, 262, Springvale Road, Sheffield.

GATESHEAD C.B.S.

Meeting Nov. 25. Mr. Almond presided. Show business was the agenda. We will be pleased to see as many members as possible on Friday night previous to show, to give a hand to unpack the birds, etc., also on Thursday night to erect the staging. The following specials (confined) will be competed for: Special most points, second most points, 5s. most points Norwich, special Crests, special Yorkshires, 5s. Scotch and Borders, 5s., 2s. 6d. for Mules, British and Foreign, 2s. 6d. for best British shown by a novice member. I will be greatly obliged by having members' entries in early.—W. Curry, Sec.

BARGOED C.B.S.

A Fresh Start.

After a year of "nothing doing" we had a very successful meeting at new headquarters, the Gwerthonor Hotel, Nov. 23. A very respectable number turned up, and we have the promise of over a dozen more for our next meeting. Officers elected: Chairman, Mr. T. Horton; treas., E. Williams; assist. sec., Mrs. Blewitt. Decided to have a members' show early in January. Mr. D. Price promised a cup for the best Yorkshire, and we have a cup running from when we were doing business before. We hope to get the support of all fanciers around here. There is a hearty welcome to all we have not been able to approach. Our next meeting is Dec. 7, when we have a good many items to be attended to. Any communications should be sent to E. J. Chisholm, Sec., 13, Railway Terrace, Gilfach, Bargoed, nr. Cardiff.

BORDER FANCY C.C.

Meeting of the Show Committee, 142, High-st., Edinburgh, Nov. 18, Mr. Jas. Lumsden chair. The following were added to committee: Messrs. T. Todd, R. Weir, J. Little, J. Mickie, and D. Dalgleish. Unanimously agreed to accept Leith Printing Co. offer for printing, and prize cards. Decided to charge 3d. each for cards this year to all in prize money; replies from judges were read, and the following were successful: Clears, Mr. T. McCreadie, Dumfries; Marks and Variegated, Mr. J. W. Duncan, East Wemyss; Greens and Cinnamons, A. Forrest, Whitburn. Sec. read reply from sec. of Western Club, granting use of their staging for our show, and the offer was accepted. Prize list was then gone over and a few alterations made. Decided again to have Breeders' Cards in schedule and catalogue, classification to remain as last year, namely, 24 classes, and agreed to extend prize money down to 5th bird. Sub-committee appointed to allocate specials Saturday, Dec. 2, when it is hoped that all specials will be forward in time. Messrs. Lumsden, Buglass, and see. A vote of thanks to the chairman brought the meeting to a close.—W. B. Smart, sec.

Twitterings.

The members' show of the Warrington C.B.S. will be held to-day, in the Blue Bell Sale Room, writes Mr. H. Warburton. Mr. A. Wellings will judge.

Mr. E. M. Stauton, Patricroft, wishes us to inform the many applicants for his new price list that he hopes to have it ready in about three weeks.

Mr. W. Hearfield, hon. sec., Darlington C.B.S., writes that the judge at the show of the N. Yorkshire and S. Durham Federation at Darlington, Dec. 30, is Mr. F. Archer, Huddersfield, not Bristol, as in schedule.

In addition to specials appearing in our schedule, writes Mr. Walter S. Wilson, Sec., Hamilton C.B.A., a cash special of 5s. is given by Mr. D. Whitelaw for the best green or cinnamon exhibited by a novice of B.F.C.C.

In the schedule of Porth and Rhondda Valleys C.B.S. open show, Dec. 14, writes Mr. A. H. C. Legg, class 39, Foreign birds, is stated to have no entrance fee; this is a mistake, the entrance fee is as other classes; no entrance fee applies to the gift class.

The winning number for bird and cage given at the open show of the Leicester Hand-in-Hand, is 378, write Messrs. Day and Roberts, hon. secs., and if the holder of that number will apply to Mr. Freestone, 79, Clarendon St, Leicester, he will be pleased to hand it to him.

First in the Field.

The date of next season's show of the Sheffield O.S., has already been fixed for Nov. 2-3 next, and the 1917 annual show of the Leicester Hand-in-Hand C.B.S. for Nov. 3-5.

Thanks from Swansea.

I wish to thank all who exhibited at our show and helped to make it such a success, writes Mr. J. H. Ford, Sec., Swansea C.B.A., and I hope all the birds got home without any mishap. Every case was got away by 8.45 Thursday evening.

Correct Show Report

In the Buff Border class at Glasgow C.B.A. show, Mr. J. Craig won 3rd, not Lyall, as reported. In the Amateur Yorks., Hen class at Ardwick, 2, vhc, should read Shaw, not Snow as printed. At Leith, Mr. G. W. Brown's Yellow Green Border Cock won the cup for best Border, not his Buff Hen as stated.

Prize Money Paid.

We learn that prize money in respect of the following shows has been paid. If any exhibitor has been overlooked he should apply to the secretary concerned: Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S., Muirkirk, Barrow, Ardwick and Manchester, Eastleigh, Reading, Old Shildon.

Talent Free for Musical Evenings.

Mr. J. H. Jowett, of 466, Harewood St., Bradford, Yorks, writes that he will be pleased to assist any society giving a musical entertainment on a Saturday without charge except his return railway fare. Mr. Jowett is a "classical banjoist, light conjurer, and comedian, late of the Darktown Minstrels, etc.," so his offer should be welcome to the organisers of fanciers' social evenings around Bradford.

Proposed Joint Club Show at Manchester.

Societies willing to join in an amalgamated club show, radius 16 miles from Manchester, writes Arthur W. Newton, Hon. Sec., Openshaw, Gorton C.B.S., should send two delegates to a meeting at the Homing Society Club, 32, Victoria St., Manchester, on Sunday, Dec. 3, at 3 p.m.; near Exchange Station, opposite the Victoria Hotel.

Entries for Gateshead Show.

Mr. W. Curry, Sec., Gateshead C.B.S., 6, Roxburgh Place, Newcastle, writes that he will accept entries up to Tuesday night. Catalogues ordered by exhibitors to be sent by post will have the awards written in by members who have volunteered to undertake the duty. Exhibitors should send their birds to arrive on Friday, Dec. 8. Arrangements have been made to collect promptly all birds arriving at the station on Friday night.

Aberdeen's Cheerful Show.

I hope the fancy in general will rally round us and give us a record entry for our show on Saturday, Dec. 9, in aid of the prisoners of war, writes Mr. R. J. Robertson, Sec., 4, Hosefield Road, Aberdeen. We offer a splendid classification, and a special for every class. Messrs. Jeyes give a valuable case of specialities for most points in classes 1 to 12, and one guinea for the best British bird is offered by our President. Exhibits from a distance will receive every care and attention, on arrival and despatch by a committee of ripe experience. If too late to receive schedule, send on, and I will classify.

Cups and Guaranteed Classes at Llanelly.

At the show of Llanelly C.B.S., Jan. 9, writes Mr. Hy. Webster, Hon. Sec., "Hazelbank," St. Pauls, Llanelly, S. Wales, six or seven cups (one in each section) are to be won outright. British classes are to be increased slightly in number; and a good few of these are already guaranteed; the Yellowhammer class by Mrs. Dalton, Swansea; Bullie hen, F.M., Mr W. Thomas, Waunarlwydd, Greenfinch, F.M., Mr. T. Holborrow, Waunarlwydd, etc. I shall be pleased to receive applications for schedules and will forward same as soon as received from printers.

ROLLER "NOTES."

THINGS WE HEAR, AND THINGS WE WOULD LIKE TO HEAR.

That the Roller Fancy is certainly booming when both Leeds and Wolverhampton open the show season with record entries.

Whether some fanciers are unaware that their birds are frequently judged under artificial light, and that if they trained them to sing accordingly it would probably be beneficial both to judge and owner.

When the light fingered individual, or individuals, are apprehended who were responsible for the receipt by Mr. Shipley of an empty cage from Wolverhampton, that should have contained his best old cock.

That at least one of the cages at Wolverhampton were without any kind of fastening to the small side door

Whether the price of timer is responsible for ill-fitting exhibition cage perches.

Whether an owner would like to see his birds on arrival at a show, when he has omitted to empty the drinking tins before dispatching.

Why there is discrepancy in the shades of enamelling in show cages.

That there are fanciers who have the new style of Bell-Glucke, and don't know it?

That one, a well-known Roller fancier has been asked to write a short article on the old style and the new, to clear the misunderstanding that abounds regarding the Bell-Glucke Tour.

That there are some good birds around Glasgow, but that at least one fancier has had vile luck during the breeding season?

And How it was Produced

By S. A. REYNOLDS (Stourbridge).

A nicely told story of a very very interesting occurrence.

IN placing on record the entry of my Alario-Greenfinch Hybrid into the annals of the Hybrid breeders' world it may be as well to introduce the father to the aviculturist who is not familiar with this optimistic little fellow. Although his native home is in the East, where birds of brilliant hue are numerous, he carries none of these bright colours, but wears just a simple coat of brown with a vest of grey and a black silk cap; a sombre garment, but beautiful to those who can appreciate this blend. Then he is one of the few foreign birds which have the sweet pure song that can be a match for our native songsters. My Alario will chant his own sweet lullaby and then pour out the Linnet notes as clear as the Linnet himself and even louder in the breeding season. Indeed I have said he is "Gentle Chibiabos."

"He the sweetest of all singers.
He the best of all musicians."

He is the first to hail the break of morn, the last to bid farewell at eve. This bird came into my possession in the autumn of 1914; he scoffed at our English winter, and even preferred to make his bed in the sheltered branches of a growing pine rather than use the warm shelter in the aviary. When the pine was laden with snow he still found a cavern on one of the branches wherein he could rest. . . . A bird is ever beautiful. . . . so wonderfully delicate, and yet so perfect in every detail, but place him amidst the snow-covered branches of a sleeping pine tree with all its purity and soft splendour, and you will enjoy a sight of unsurpassed beauty that will ever remain with you. Thus it is that Nature in the dark days of winter has wonderful pictures to paint to those who care to view.

His wife is but a modest Greenfinch, I caught her the same winter in the pheasant aviary as she was robbing the corn, and as she appeared to be of good size and colour I put her in the aviary with the Finches.

A Laudable Ambition.

As the warm days of spring grew nearer, and the birds began to think of partners and nests, the Alario took the highest perch he could find and commanded that all should see what a fine bird he was and be thrilled by the beauty of his song. First he sang about the beauty of foreign climes, but as they were nearly all British subjects in the aviary he got but little applause, the cock Linnet with his song of English hedges and gorse covered moorlands was more in favour, and the Alario knew it and brooded a little, but his optimistic spirit prevailed, and he thought to himself, "I will tackle that English tune." After he had gone over it quietly by himself he again took the high perch, and this time they all stopped to listen. Never was a bird more proud or stately now he had learnt the English songs.

He had had his eye on the Greenfinch for some time. She was rather shy, it was true, but she was a beautiful bird, not a feather out of place, so that now he could speak her language he felt sure he could win her love. She was so awfully shy at times that she would stay for days in the thickest privet bush; the Alario sang at her from every angle, and tempted her with the dantiest fare he could find, but it was not until the end of May she condescended to answer him. Even then it was only just a faint "churr," but it was enough for the Alario. He was beside himself with joy, he never let her out of his sight for a second, when he sang he filled the aviary with music, even the Linnet could not out-sing him, he swayed as he sang and his wings expanded and covered his legs, so overjoyed was he.

He was anxious that the home should be proceeded with forthwith, and he explored every likely tree with his beak full of dry grass. He fed the Greenfinch now with the choicest shepherd's purse and dandelion, and about the middle of June they started to build their wonderful home, the joy in these little hearts was beyond all human knowledge, you could gain something of it when you heard him calling to her softly and her gentle answer. It was in a gorse bush, the neatest little nest you ever saw, so much time had been spent on it . . . so much love.

In due course five eggs were laid and the Greenfinch covered them fondly. The Alario took up his watch on a branch near by and cheered his mate with all the songs he could think of; woe betide any bird that ventured near this sacred abode. Our spirits were high, we thought of the remarkable babes that soon we should see and possess..

The time soon came when the babes should arrive, and an anxious time it was, but there was no signs of anything on the appointed day, but as the Alario was hopeful we waited a few days. No mother was ever more patient than the Greenfinch, four days she waited and then in sorrow gave it up.

They made yet another attempt, with three eggs this time, but only to meet with the same result in the end. The Alario, overwrought by his constant attention, went into the moult. So ended the season for 1915.

When April came again with all its promise of sunny days, when Nature clothed herself in wonderful garments of green, and the soft Zephyrs murmured: "Awake, spring is here," it found this happy pair full of their old ardour. Many happy moments I spent watching them, but it was not until sweet May had gone that they started the new home. They chose as a site a last year's Blackbird nest which I had previously put in a thick gorse bush; this nest was, of course, much too large for them, so they built a very neat lining inside, and in due course four eggs were laid. I had great sympathy for these two birds; they were a model pair, but I felt sure they would meet with the same sad result again this year.

However, one fine June morning I noticed the Alario was very excited, he was in a desperate hurry to obtain the pick of the aviary's larder, so I just took a peep into their nest, and lo, sure enough a little fluffy head raised itself from out among the three eggs. I do not know which of us was the most excited then; it was only one, it was true, but that one was something to be thankful for after all the trials we had had. The other eggs were unfertile.

I don't suppose a baby ever received better attention than this young bird; in a week he was a monster. To avoid mishap I put the nest and bird into a cage and for weeks the parents fed him. The last week in August I let the hybrid fly in the aviary, and even then I noticed the Alario would feed him occasionally.

Unfortunately the hybrid carries little of the Alario in plumage, the only obvious part is the shape of the head, probably this is due to it being a hen, as it has never made an attempt to sing.

Several of CAGE BIRDS readers saw this bird at Clapham Show, and I can well understand the arguments reported in CAGE BIRDS. I thank Mr. Robson for his reply stating that he marked the cage "Wg. Cl.," as he was "unable to make it other than a cinnamon coloured Greenfinch x Canary." Now, as I had no Canary flying loose at the time this can hardly be correct. The species in the aviary were as follows: Cocks, Goldfinches, Linnets, Siskin, Redpoll, Bramblefinch, and Alario Finch; hens, Greenfinches, Bullfinches, Twite, Yellow Bunting. The Hybrid in no way resembles any of these.

I shall be glad to send it to any show with A.O. Hybrid or Greenfinch Hybrid class. This little adventure was witnessed by local fanciers, who, if necessary, will provide corroboration.

[In proposing to exhibit this interesting Hybrid in a class for Any Other Hybrid or for Greenfinch Hybrids our contributor should not forget that it is implied, if not expressed, that classes in the Hybrid section at most of our shows are for birds bred between two British birds. Of course if a class were provided for Foreign Hybrids, as is sometimes the case at important shows, the bird would be eligible, but otherwise it would run the risk of disqualification even if the judge could distinguish its proper parentage.—Editor, CAGE BIRDS.]

OBITUARY.

MR. C. BARNWELL (Harrogate).

It is with the deepest regret, writes Mr. W. H. Hamlyn, that I have to announce the death of Mr. C. H. Barnwell, at his residence, 20, College Road, Harrogate, Nov. 17. He has been for many years Hon. Sec. of the Harrogate C.B.S., whose members will feel his loss greatly. They extend their deepest sympathy to Mrs. Barnwell and family.

Wonderful Show of Canaries, Hybrids and British.—Seventeen Yellowhammers in a Class.

The 15th annual open show of the Swansea C.B.A., Nov. 16, was marked by a record entry of over 700 exhibits, nearly 100 in excess of the next highest total in the history of the society. The Canary section contributed 406, Mules and Hybrids 72, and British 250, representing a galaxy of feathered beauty such as is seldom seen at a provincial show. It speaks volumes for the management that this huge collection was handled and cared for without a hitch. The show managers, Messrs. E. M. Evans and J. E. Jeffries, had a big task in hand, which they carried out in masterly fashion, the birds being staged and ready for judging by 9 a.m. They were ably assisted by a hard-working committee, Messrs. A. C. East (chair), A. Richards (vice), J. W. Ford, T. Holborrow, M. Glover, J. H. Richards, C. Jones, W. Mabbett, J. H. Davies, H. Sherratt, W. H. Dalton, A. Addison, T. H. Myles, and W. Palmer. The Sec., Mr. J. H. Ford, is an ideal official, and carried out his duties in a very thorough and obliging manner.

Norwich were a grand lot, Mr. Collings' yell. cock and Messrs. Stubbs Bros.' buff being much admired. Other notable exhibits in this section were put down by Messrs. Tedstone, Hitchings, Mabbet, Heath, Davies, and Jenkins. Yorks were splendid, and we do not remember such a collection at this show for many years. Every class was full of tip-top exhibits, and condition only separated the winners, two sets of which could easily be found in nearly all of them. The cold played mischief in these classes, many notable winners having to stand back owing to the judge not being able to get them to work properly. We were much struck by Mr. Greenslade's brace of unflighted hens, Mr. Bale's unflighted buff, and Mr. Wooton's yell., all birds of grand length and perfect position. Borders were disappointing in numbers, still the quality was all there, most of the noted teams being represented. Mr. D. Jenkins carried off premier awards in the first three classes, Messrs. Owens and Histon accounting for the other two. Greens, notwithstanding the patronage of the G.C.A., only two of whose members competed, were also poor in numbers, Messrs. Montgomery and Johnston carrying off the chief awards with teams of real gems. Cinnamons only numbered 15 in two classes. The Novice Borders class provided 19 entries, the clear buff of Mr. Pattison, a real little swell, heading a very level lot. An extra attraction was provided for visitors in the beautiful White Canaries exhibited by Mr. Gatehouse, which were greatly admired.

Canary Mules and Hybrids came up very strong, both in numbers and quality, the six classes all running into double figures. Here the local Hybrid crack held a strong hand with a well-balanced team, put down in the pink of condition. Mr. E. J. Lamb won cleverly with a remarkably fine Redpoll-Bullfinch in the very best of feather and bloom. Practically all the birds able to get in the tickets were of excellent merit. It was a pity to see Dr. Wilson's variegated Greenfinch-Canary entered in the clear, ticked, or evenly marked class, had to be marked "wg. cl." Had he been in the uneven, marked or variegated class, no doubt he would have secured high honours. Hard lines, Doctor. It is distinctly a variegated bird, and a beauty at that.

British birds were a remarkably fine lot throughout the seed-eating classes. Goldfinches led the way and gave evidence of the quality of South Wales Finches. Bullfinches came up grandly, 24 cocks, most of them fine birds. Bullfinch hens were fine all through. Linnets were very strong, and in both classes made a fine display. Lesser Redpolls, H.-M., were not so numerous as usual here, but the F.-M. Lessers were great in numbers and quality. The Yellowhammer class was a treat, and Mrs. Lilian Dalton deserves credit for her perseverance in trying to keep this class going. Seventeen of them, and most of them of exceptional merit. Brambles Chaffinches and Greenfinches were good, and the winner in each case stood out well. No. 10 in Greenfinches was very down in condition when we saw it, or might easily have been in the first three. Mr. Chick held a strong hand in the A.O. Species, both cocks and hens. Mr. J. H. Roe judged Canaries, and Mr. C. Houlton the remainder.

HANLEY.

The tenth annual open show was held Nov. 9, in the Assembly Room at the Angel Hotel, a capital room for the purpose, spacious, lofty and well lighted. Unfortunately the day was a very dull one, which necessitated the use of electric light the whole of the time, which did not improve matters from a judging point of view. The entry was rather meagre; open Norwich classes had been cut down from previous years, only four being provided, and of these three were cancelled, and open Yorks fared but little better, only three out of eight classes standing, while the British and Mule section also had the blue pencil applied to four classes. The Novice classes fared better, all ten standing, though only two filled.

The management was quite of the best, everything being in perfect order. An early start was made with the judging, and all awards promptly fixed as classes were judged. Mr. C. Beckett, although new to the post of hon. sec., did well, and was well backed up by a large committee of management, who paid every attention to the exhibits entrusted to their care. A nice list of specials was provided, chiefly "point" specials. Special winners were: Best' Yorks. Hen, open, Baldwinson; Yorks. Nov., Drew; Members' Nor. Wilde; Yorks., Dale; Unflighted, Chadwick; Sandiford's Colour special for hottest fed member's, Hawley. Mr. W. A. Cowgill judged, and his awards were well received.

CITY AND SUBURBAN C.B.A.

Twenty-first annual show Nov. 8 and 9, in the Church Institute, Marylebone. Entries numbered a little over three hundred, quite as many as expected, considering the number of members away and other circumstances, and quality, as usual, was quite tip-top. Spl. for best bird in Champ. Nor. went to Mr. Bailey's Yellow, Mr. Martin winning the Norwich Cup for best Unflighted, with a yell. of good substance and quality. Yorkshires made a grand display, competition in some of the classes being particularly keen, and in this section the best bird in the show was found, Mr. Ayres winning with a magnificent Buff. Mr. Watcham won the cup for best Crest. The Amateur and Novice sections were well patronized. Mrs. Stopher won spl. best Amat. Nor., Mr. Johnston spl. best Yorks. British, as usual, were quite a nice lot; a lovely Blackcap sent in by Mrs. Bloomfield was judged to be the best in the section.

The management was all that could be desired, the birds being neatly arranged round the hall, and every attention given to them by the stewards. Mr. F. J. Martin managed the secretarial work, and no doubt the success of the show was to a great extent due to his energy and ability. He had for assistants a splendid lot of fanciers, among them being such well known enthusiasts as Messrs. Curtis, Shepherd, Ayres, Sanders, Runciman, Prance, Burt, Francis, etc. The show was well attended on both days. Mr. J. Robson judged Canaries and Mr. C. Prior the remainder.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE.

A SPLENDID ENTRY AND A GOOD GATE.

12th annual show, Nov. 11, of the Blaydon C.B.S., in the United Methodist Church Schoolroom, with a total of 600 entries in the open classes, although the classification was curtailed considerably compared with that of previous years. The 24 classes for members brought the total up to 706. The schoolroom is very cosy, well lighted, free from any draught, and only three minutes' walk from station.

The show was well handled by the worthy chairman and show manager, Mr. J. Dobson, who worked all day like a trojan, always pleasant and obliging, especially to fanciers from a distance who had to catch early trains. He was well backed up by a grand working committee, Messrs. J. Hillary, T. Wardle, J. Hands, C. Graham, T. Boyd, H. Cresswell, and J. and J. H. Cross, every one a trier. Special praise must be given to Mrs. Jos. Carr, who did good work in watering and staging the birds, and seemed to be quite up to the work. In the sec., Mr. Geo. Havver, the society has an ideal man, nothing being too much trouble, but we must not forget "Bob" Havis, the treasurer, who did an enormous amount of work and ably assisted the sec.

The judges were Messrs. T. Dixon (Norwich), T. Robson (Crests and British), R. Tindale (Yorks.), W. Espie (Borders). Among the fanciers present were Mr. J. Stewart, Whitehaven; F. F. Lawson, Carlisle; and many others from a distance whose names we did not obtain. The room was well filled in the afternoon.

Among the Norwich the quality was such that some excellent birds had to be left out of the cards. Messrs. R. W. Smith, A. Holden, T. W. Laidlow, C. Godley, and F. F. Lawson put down some good exhibits. The winning yellow cock in class 1, Laidlaw, is a real stormer, and was much admired by all. In the Crests G. Dobson was much to the fore, and won the silver cup presented by Col. F. R. Simpson, J.P., for best bird in show, with an old Crest cock, a wonderful bird. British were good all round, and we noticed an enthusiastic exhibitor in Mr. Curry, the sec. of Gateshead, weighing up the winners; he has turned "British," and did well. Mr. Wilson's silver cup for most points with three birds shown by a member was tied for by J. Hands and J. Hillary.

HALIFAX.

Although the entry at the show of the Halifax O.S., at the Friendly and Trades Hall, Nov. 17 and 18, was not quite so large as last year, it was good for the reduced classification and the times. Thirty-four classes were scheduled, and only one, that for British softbills, failed to fill. The classes which stood totalled 418 entries, an average of nearly thirteen, and had the members of the Norwich Plainhead Club, under whose patronage the show was held, done their bit, the average would have been much better, as the ten classes provided for them only contained 96 entries, whilst the seventeen Yorkshire classes yielded 280. British, ever a weak spot in Yorkshire shows, came up fairly well, totalling 54 in the four classes which stood.

Yorkshires were a very smart lot, but whether it is that fanciers, owing to the stress of the times, have not the necessary leisure to train their birds, or that we are breeding a wilder race of birds, there is no gainsaying the fact that many of them were far from steady. We have noticed this at other shows this season, and have heard the fact commented upon by a number of judges and fanciers. No matter how good a Yorkshire may be, if it is not well trained it will not show its properties, and worse still, its wildness on the judging bench upsets other birds and makes them wild.

The pick of the Yorkies here was undoubtedly Mr. Dyke's neck ticked young yellow. By general consent it was awarded the palm, and it well deserves it; it knows its work, and is ever ready to show its style and figure. Messrs. Burdekin Bros.' winning buff was another that stood out as most typical and stylish. Mr. Hartley's yellow hen is a peach, this and the hen which won for Bolton Woods in the young class, are indeed a charming pair of Yorkshire lasses. Greens, both open and novice, were only moderate, two or three good ones, the rest—so, so. Why is it that the men of Liverpool will not support the classes made by Yorkshire societies? Novice classes were somewhat like the curate's egg, yet amongst them were a number of birds that could give a good account of themselves in more extended competition. Amongst such were Mr. Speak's buff hen, a real little gem, full of quality and style; Mr. Barron's yellow hen, which well deserved the appellation of "sweet"; Mr. Sugden's brace of winners, particularly his young buff; and Mr. Barnes' young yellow.

Norwich, although not numerous, were quite up to the average one sees at Northern shows. A visit "down Devonshire way" would be a revelation to those fanciers who only know the Norwich of the North. Mr. Cook's buff is something like the real thing, and might well be taken as a pattern. It was quite the pick of the basket here, and his grizzle capped hen was another that took our fancy. Mr. Thomas's hen is of good type, but hardly the richness of complexion of some of the others. The sensation of the British section was a field-monited Linnet shown by Mr. J. Davis, a perfect little wonder which set the tongues of all the British men a-wagging, and made their eyes gleam with envy.

Good management has ever been associated with the Halifax O.S., and it is as good to-day as in the days of long ago, when its shows were held in the Old Talbot Assembly Rooms, and that is going back longer than some of us like to remember. Mr. D. A. Macpherson, president, sets his fellows a good example which is ably followed by the vice-presidents, Messrs. J. Robertshaw, S. Haigh, W. Speak (one of the old brigade), and by the rest of the committee. Mr. Dunn, the sec., is a worthy follower of the good men and true who have served the society. Mr. C. A. House judged the Yorkshires, and Mr. H. W. Battye the remainder.

MR. C. A. HOUSE'S CLASSES.

YORKS. YELL. (15): 1, Rigg, long slim raking bird, on a good pair of legs, got well up to his work, tail not quite finished; 2, Helliwell, grand type, neat head, paler in col. and hardly so perfect in wing carr.; 3, Burdekin Bros., splendid body and style, lovely feather; 4, Mundell, about the best in the class, a real gem of a Yorkie when on the bench, a bit wild when handled; vhc, hc, Bingham and Furness; c, Inman. BUFF (16): 1, Burdekin Bros., perfect picture, full of qual., grand type and style, in lovely feather; 2, 4, Sharp, 2nd hardly so perfect in feather, grand type and carr., 4th pretty eye and wing marked, full of qual. and type, very warm col.; 3, Dykes, gem for shape, style, and qual., seemed to be feeling the cold, and it was cold; vhc, Baldwinson; hc, Woodhead; c, Thomas. HEN, YELL. (8): 1, Hartley, a living picture, neat outline, grand feather, full of style; 2, Priestley, somewhat stouter, but full of nerve and beautifully feathered, showed well; 3, Sharp, typical and and racy variegated, not so level in col.; 4, Ellis, grand type and carr., but not quite so much bloom; vhc, Mundell; hc, Thornton and Robertshaw; c, Broadley. BUFF (12): 1, Hartley, model for shape, feather and pos., lets her wings go occasionally; 2, Priestley, hardly so finely drawn, but beautiful feather and style, with a good top end; 3, hc, Thornton and Robertshaw, very shapely, good qual.; 4, Burdekin Bros., grand shape hen, lovely feathers; vhc, Dykes; c, Baldwinson. UNFLIG. YELL. (18): 1, Dykes, neck tkd., just what a Yorkie should be, on the bench or in the hand he is always ready, and was in rare form; 2, Stobart, wing and cheek tkd., grand shape and feather, hardly so steady when handled; 3, Thomas, splendid type, feather and col., tail not always compact; 4, Sutcliffe, neck tkd., fine shape, well drawn, nervy; vhc, Cumming; hc, Speak; c, Harrison. BUFF (11): 1, Thomas, finely drawn, racy, gets well up to his work, grand wings, lovely feather; 2, Atkinson, more length, not quite so much style, good shape and feather; 3, Hartley, grand head, back, wings and tail; 4, Spencer, very nice outline, stands well up, good tail; vhc, Holroyd; hc, Baldwinson; c, Pilling. HEN (18): 1, Dykes, very sweet yell., full of qual., nice even col., rare wings and tail, shows for all she is worth; 2, Rigg, magnificent buff, real gem, quite worthy of 1st place, rare feather and style; 3, Hartley, equally good buff, full of qual., grand head, wings, and tail, but not quite so much polish, a wash would have made all the difference; 4, Harrison, very slim yell., rare head, shoulders and back, full of style; vhc, Bingham and Furness; hc, Thomas; c, Thornton and Robertshaw. GREEN (6): 1, vhc, Sladdin and Baldwin, long, shapely yell., nice grassy col., good feather and style; 2, 3, hc, Riley, buff, and a yell., capital col., shows well; 4, Ellis, nice shapely yell., but shows bronze on thighs. NOV. (16): 1, Sugden, thigh tkd., long, slim and racy, full of nerve, just the sort to breed with; 3, Stansfield, full of style, gets well up on leg, nice head and back; 4, Howarth, very hot in col., rare shape and style; vhc, Sykes; hc, Barnes; c, Holroyd; wrong class, No. 5, Richards, a variegated buff. BUFF (14): 1, Thornton, not a lot of col., but a typical Yorkie, full of style; 2, No. 14, no name, a little wider in head, but in body shape and length a stormer, plenty of style; 3, Mann, grand shape, length, and feather, wild when handled; 4, Cockroft, full of col. and qual., grand shape, if more steady would take some beating; vhc, Horsman; hc, Speak; c, Stansfield. BEN YELL. (15): 1, Barron, cheek and wing tkd., full of style, grand feather, shows for all she is worth; 2, Horsman, beautiful head, neck, wings, and tail, lovely qual., but feeling the cruel North-Easter, and was slow in the hand; 3, Barnes, shapely, grand wings and tail; 4, S. Hartley, very slim, racy, stylish variegated; vhc, Senior; hc, Thornton; c, Drake. BUFF (18): 1, Speak, a gem, full of qual., not a feather out of place, beautifully finished, full of style; 2, Talbot, cheek tkd., wonderful shape and quality, rare style, needs just a bit more length to be a stormer; 3, Whitham, cheek ticked, fine length, capital feather; 4, Mitchell, shapely, good style, stands well; vhc, Horsman; hc, Wilson; c, Drury. UNFLIG. YELL. (10): 1, Horsman, cheek tkd., smart, and stylish, nice length, capital feather, neat wings and tail; 2, Sugden, variegated, grand shape, full of qual.; 3, Mitchell, good length, shape, and pos.; 4, Stansfield, grand shape and style, lovely head and back, rare wings and tail; vhc, Hulton; hc, Briggs; c Thornton. BUFF (11): 1, Sugden, beautiful col. and qual., neat head, nicely balanced wings and tail, very nervy; 2, Whitham, rattling good variegated, rare shape, feather and col.; 3, Corney, very sweet, neat and tight in feather, grand style; 4, Dewhirst, rare shape, col. and style, seemed to have been dried too quickly and was a bit twisted on cheeks; vhc, Gilder; hc, Senior; c, Drury. HEN (17): 1, Barnes, very neat, shapely yell., grand carr., rare wings and tail, lovely feather; 2, No. 17, no name, yell., grand shape and length, shows well; 3, Horsman, yell., variegated, grand top end, neat wings and tail, very stylish; 4, Holroyd, shapely and stylish; vhc, hc, Mitchell; c, Francis. GREEN (12): 1, Smith and Cowen, yell., long, stylish, nice grassy col.; 2, Scrutton and Harris, shapely buff, good col. and style; 3, 4, Leach, yell. and buff, nice col.; vhc, Shaw; hc, Mitchell; c, Briggs. HEN (10): 1, Briggs, smart, foul tailed yell.; 2, c, Scrutton and Harris, shapely buff, nice col., rather wild; 3, Smith and Cowen, buff, fair style, not so grassy; 4, Leach, smart yell., bit bronzy in col.; vhc, hc, Horsman.

ABERAVON.

With an entry of 254 the first show of the Aberavon and Port Talbot F.A., Nov. 9, may well be described as a success, especially when the excellent quality of the exhibits is considered, and the large amount of patronage given to the event by the public. The birds were staged in a large, cosy room, apart from the other exhibits. Owing to an unfortunate oversight in the late delivery of certain exhibits, a number of birds were not judged with the rest. They were discovered later in the day, and the committee instructed Mr. House to award them such honours as they were entitled to, and to those who got them would pay extra prizes. The birds were nicely staged, and all their needs attended to by most enthusiastic and efficient committee men. Judging by this show we should say the Cage Bird Fancy in Port Talbot has a good future before it. Mr. Morris, the secretary, was most energetic and obliging, and Mr. Coulson made an excellent show manager.

Yorkshires were hardly so good either in numbers or quality as is usual at South Wales shows, yet amongst them were some beauties, notably Mr. Each's yellow, which won the special, and Messrs. Coulson and Brennon's buff hen which ran it close. Norwich were splendid, the classes abounding with birds of rare type and quality, and the competition was keen. Borders, naturally, were most excellent, but some of them would have done better had they been put through the bath. A Border of all birds must be spotless if it is to show its best. Splendid were the British, and exhibits which stood out in hot company were the Linnets of Messrs. Davies and Nicholas, and the Greenfinch of Mr. Holbrow's. We congratulate the executive on the result of their first venture and hope it will encourage them to go forward. Mr. C. A. House judged.

HUDDERSFIELD.

A Fine Entry of over 400.

Annual show, Nov. 18, in St Peter's St. Assembly Rooms, a place well adapted for a Union show. The patronage of all the Yorkshire Specialist Clubs was here, and considering it is half way through the season, and that the show clashed with Halifax, an entry of 406 was really marvellous.

All the noted cracks were on view. Mr. T. Bennett's unflighted yellow was the envy of all; rumour says he refused £17 10s. for him. The room was packed with visitors. We noticed Mr. Hancocks (Crewe) and Mr. T. Rowlands (Liverpool) among the Yorkies. Sales were above the average, many £5 birds and a £10 bird changed hands. Money is no object with these Yorkshire men when a good bird is on hand.

The Society is lucky to have at its head a working President in Mr. G. Wood, who is no mere figurehead, but a fancier whose first thought is the care of the birds in the Society's charge. He is backed up by one of those go-ahead secretaries in Mr. A. Lawford, who uses modern ideas in running the show. Everything he touched he made plain sailing for everybody. The Hon. Treasurer, Mr. W. Gledhill, shouted himself hoarse to get exhibitors to come for their prize money. The stewards, Messrs. Buttle, Armistead, Cheetham and Whitehead are a hard-working quartette, no wonder they are christened the "Harmony Four," they had everything in apple-pie order. Mr. J. W. Metcalfe judged and gave entire satisfaction.

YORKS CL. YELL. (10): 1, Bennett, long racy exhibit, wedge shape, perfect wings and tail, tremendous legs; 2, Dykes, stouter and more round, rare top end, clean waist, A1 cond.; 3, Stobart, capital back, clean cut waist, nice drive; 4, Mallinson and Son, nice length, square shoulders, very shooty, close up; vhc, Hartley; hc, Bray; c, Chittenden. BUFF (12): 1, Snead, full of swank, marvel for qual., neat head and neck, red hot, nice win; 2, Dr. Craig, another of the right sort, good top, wedge shape, A1 cond., clips wings; 3, J. Thomas, straight as a gun barrel, topper for style, very close up; 4, Hartley, built on rounder lines, grand pos. and qual., well staged; vhc, Hartley; hc, Jebson; c, Hodgson. TKD. YELL. (6): 1, Dykes, wing tk., stormer for type and qual., neat legs and waist, steady and well staged; 2, Dr. Craig, check mk., bit stronger built, rare col., wings perfect, wears very well; 3, Hirst, rare good bird, but appeared a bit weak in neck; 4, Brown; vhc, Dyson. BUFF (9): 1, Dykes, "hot 'un," flier for type, perfect wings and tail, glorious qual and cond.; 2, Dyson, check mk., stouter, bottle shape, should do some good in stock room; 3, Snead, wing mk., very racy, full of go, in faultless form; 4, A. Radley, a rare good 'un, just shade on small side; vhc, Dr. Craig; hc, Taylor; c, Hartley. UNFLIG. YELL. (15): 1, Bennett, uneven mk., wonderful chap, extra good in type and qual., a Yorkie throughout, lucky to go home; 2, P. ILKESTON.

Annual show, Nov. 18, Victoria Hall, an ideal place for a show. Entries hardly came up to expectations, but quality was good. The Canary section contained some very typical specimens, but the British were quite the feature of the show, being quite a show in themselves. The birds were splendidly staged and could be seen at a glance. Mr. Smith again carried out the secretarial duties in his usual painstaking way. Mr. W. Vardy judged and gave general satisfaction.

Eighth Annual Open Contest, Nov. 9 and 10, Seven Stars Hotel, Wolverhampton. The room in which the birds were staged is most suitable for a show of this kind, and hard to beat anywhere, being large, well lighted, and free from draughts. Five classes were provided with a splendid list of specials, in fact the best ever given by this club, whose list is always one of the best. Prize money and specials were given down to the 7th bird, with 2s. 6d. each for best Hollow roll, best Glucke, best Waterglucke, best Bass, and Koller, and 5s. for deepest song throughout in the two young bird classes. The magnificent entry of 332 was recorded, which we believe sets up a record for a Roller contest in England; only once before have more entries been received, and that was when birds could be entered in more than one class.

The judges were Messrs. J. Netherwood, Chorley, champion young birds; J. H. Willows, Wednesbury, novice young birds; J. Tomlinson, Newcastle-under-Lyme, champion any age, novice any age, and £2 limit classes. The show was held under the patronage of the British Roller Club, and their young birds point competition, 87 being entered in champion, and 194 in novice sections. The judges expressed themselves as being sorry that more first prizes could not be given, as some really fine birds had to be content with vhc, hc, and c cards.

The quality of song was very good throughout, and comparatively few birds were marked "no song." Mr. A. Harper-Bilston did well in champion young birds, securing 1, 3, 4, 7, winning the M.R.C.C. challenge cup for the year and several specials. Mr. Shepley, London, won 2, 5, and three specials. In novice young birds, Miss Dockery, London, won 1, 2, 4, and several specials, and also had one of her birds claimed at catalogue price, £10. Mr. C. Portlock, Cleethorpes, had the distinction of getting 1st in two classes, viz., champion any age and novice any age.

The Sec., Mr. J. W. Thomson, ably backed by a strong committee of local fanciers, got through his arduous duties with promptitude and dispatch. Every one connected with this flourishing club, now over 80 members strong, seemed delighted to do his bit to make the show a grand success. Sec. Thomson is the right man in the right place, and to his untiring energy and tact much of the success is due. The room was packed with visitors both evenings, and the record entry and record gate will make the show a financial success.

Helpful Hints on Management, Pairing, Breeding and Rearing, which should make the Hobby of Canary Keeping easy of pursuit by the amateur, and containing information of interest to older hands.

AGAIN referring to the indigenous birds for guidance, it will be found that the food for the breeding season is of a richer character and more diversified than that which served for winter. As the spring appoaches the seeds of grasses and of members of the Brassica family are probably consumed in the germinating stage, or as salad, and most members of the Finch tribe add the ova, larva and pupa (egg, caterpillar, and chrysalis) stages of insects to their bill of fare.

Egg Food and Salads.

In the breeding room freshly-laid, hard-boiled eggs form an excellent substitute for these latter delicacies, and it does not matter what theorists say about this arrangement being unsuited to the requirements of Canaries, we unhesitatingly say that exhibition Canaries cannot be reared without it.

It is quite feasible that Canaries of no fancy value can be reared without eggs, but it is not possible that they can be reared without some sort of soft food that has much the same chemical composition. Sulphur, albumen, and fat is about the sum of the contents of an egg-shell, and sulphur, vegetable albumen, fat, and starch represent the chief constituents of canary seed and rape seed combined.

Let these be softened by scalding water, and their value as feeding and rearing material is remarkably similar to hard-boiled egg and bread crumb.

For salad, the sprouting seeds of rape, or mustard, or cress may be presented when appearing above the soil, or sand, in which it may be sown, and if in little pots or saucers the vessels themselves may be placed in the cages.

Later on lettuce may be welcomed, but in the early spring and summer dandelion leaves are used with great benefit, and watercress may be relied on all the year round in the towns, because it comes from cultivated beds, but in the country it gets strong and seedy before the breeding season ends.

Very great care must be taken to ensure the freshness of the eggs that are used for rearing purposes and for feeding of Canaries generally. We know there is a difficulty, in large towns, in getting newly-laid eggs, and it is not everybody that has the convenience to keep a few fowls, but we have known several cases where Canary-fanciers had a special knowledge as to where perfectly reliable eggs were obtainable, and were just as jealous of others sharing the knowledge as a schoolboy might be of some rare nest.

Stale eggs are responsible for many more misfortunes in the breeding room than is generally supposed, as nothing could be calculated to upset the digestive organs of a fragile nestling so much as boiled eggs in which decomposition had commenced.

However, taking it for granted that the fresh eggs have been got, the next thing is to get one or more properly boiled, it is no use having them only just "set," and we do not think ten minutes any too long for the cooking process. Do not cook more than one day's supply at a time, for a boiled egg will decompose more rapidly than a raw one.

Some breeders chop up the eggs with a knife, others pound them up in a mortar with biscuits, while a mill is brought into requisition in some rooms, but the most extensively used apparatus of disintegration is the sieve of perforated zinc. Whatever process is most favoured the implements must be kept scrupulously clean, or they will get contaminated by the chemical action of the egg on the metal.

About Biscuits.

Biscuits of various sorts, such as "Tea," "Osborne," "Milk," "Coffee," "Cracknell," "Picnic" and "Social" are used and recommended by various fanciers. Wheaten flour, fat, and sugar in slightly varying proportions probably constitute the composition of them all, and the selection of either is most likely guided to a considerable extent by the amount of money one has to devote to his hobby.

We have nothing to say against the use of any of the above-mentioned biscuits, or of any of the richer and higher priced sorts, as we have known many instances where plenty of healthy young ones have been reared by their aid, yet we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that sometimes things have gone wrong from some obscure cause, and that possibly the fat, or the sugar, in the biscuits, has upset the hens or the young ones.

We cannot understand why this should be so, because we look upon fat in combination with cooked wheaten flour, as it is present in biscuits, to be amongst the most nourishing, flesh forming, and warmth-giving of food.

Still it is quite possible to rear young Canaries without biscuits, and without added fat or sugar, and we can be certain we are not giving rancid fat if none at all be present. We only note it as the result of our experience and observation that hard boiled egg and an equal quantity of crumb of bread that is two days old forms a pabulum or soft food that is cheaper and more simple than that made with biscuit, and in every way quite as good.

We are quite aware that almost everybody has a lot to do besides attending to his Canary stock, and that many worthy working men have to be absent from their birds while the clock is performing a complete circle. In such cases it is found advantageous to dry the bread in the oven to a crispness and colour just short of toasting, crush it up with a paste-pin, and mix equal weights of it and hard-boiled egg, to which, when well mixed, no additional moisture should be added.

The Green Singing Finch.

By E. ALLISON, London, S.W.

An easily kept foreign bird with a sweet song.

FROM the sun-scorched millet fields of East Africa to Bethnal Green seems a huge contrast, but the latter is usually the first temporary home in this country of this sweet little bird from the great continent, and it is usually in Bethnal Green—the Mecca of London bird fanciers—that such foreign birds are picked up.

The green Singing Finch is not difficult to acclimatise, provided it arrives in this country in late spring or in summer, but arrivals in winter would be rather difficult to establish.

The Proper Menu.

When recovered from the journey they soon settle down, and are very easily catered for on the various millets, canary seed, and green food, such as seeding small grasses, seeding shepherd's purse, chickweed, or watercress, when the foregoing are not to be had. They are also very fond of crushed hemp, and a little, say a quarter of a teaspoonful of first-class seed every second or third day when the weather is cold, seems to stimulate them, and keeps them on song. They also like a sprinkle of maw seed occasionally, and sometimes a little, say a spoonful of Goldfinch mixture. I have not found them partial to fruit, although I have offered various kinds.

This bird makes an engaging pet, and becomes extremely tame, but does not acquire stupidly dull tameness like some of the foreign seed-eaters, whose mission in life appears to be simply to eat and to snuggle up in a corner with a pal. This Finch is active and, if kept in a decent sized cage singly, is seldom at rest for long, and shows off his beautiful green and yellow plumage to advantage.

He is a great lover of sunshine, and, if put out in a box cage on a south wall in the summer, when the sun is shining, will enliven the whole garden with his delightful little song. His music is not so good as that of his relative, the Grey Singing Finch, but I am never tired of hearing it, and even to-day, Nov. 19, on one of the worst of many bad days in London's sunless winters, my little friend is rendering his cheerful little message of hope and joy which, in the present circumstances, we all need so much.

The song is a blend of say the song of the Goldfinch and of a Cordon Bleu, with a dash of Canary in it, and is indulged in more frequently if the cock is kept apart from, and out of sight of the hen; it is not a loud song, and never grates on the ear like the song of some Canaries.

This bird is easily kept in a fair-sized cage indoors, and needs no artificial heat after he is acclimatised. In pre-war days he was very cheap to purchase, but is, of course, now both scarce to find, and dear to buy. He is an interesting aviary bird also, and deserves to be kept more frequently by bird lovers.

GLEANINGS FROM ARDWICK.

By SUB ROSA.

There was a large crowd at Ardwick's third venture in open shows. They are a go-ahead society, and have a grand lot of supporters and workers. The amusement tax was included in the 6d. admission, and there was no extra charge for early doors.

Have you ever seen a parson in his shirt sleeves? There were two at Ardwick; and when I saw the Rev. C. E. Gaul on first entering the show, he was wiping his forehead of sweat in the approved manner of a patriotic munition worker.

He made an excellent door-keeper and catalogue-seller. He didn't allow anyone to pay twice, and he could give change like a newsboy. Later, he worked like a nigger at packing up.

The Rev. G. W. Wragg is a rare enthusiast of the Norwich Canary. His open countenance gives one the impression that he might have been the original for a book we once read entitled "The Sky Pilot." His architecture is more on the lines of Hercules, and he must be a tower of strength in more ways than one. The society are justly proud of their fancier clerics.

Mr. Sam Oldham had out 26—or was it 36? exhibits. We don't vouch for the truth of it, but we heard he hired a "tank" to transport them to and from the show. "Gradely" support that.

The N.P.C. men were much in evidence. We noticed the Brothers Hopkins, A. H. Fildes, W. Spencer, J. Lingard, W. Crawshaw, E. Sutton, F. Barraclough, J. Mitchell, W. Wrigley, W. E. Seed, G. Chilton, T. Peters, A. G. Smith, W. R. Turner, J. Raynes, J. Green, and Sam Cook (still smiling).

The noted buff cock of Sam Cook's scored another win. He was voted a perfect Norwich by all present, combining all the essential points of a champion without any defects. A glorious exhibit.

His noted buff hen was cardless. So was the 1st Manchester hen, claimed at 10 guineas. When we saw them, we thought it a case of different judges, different conceptions, but we noticed in the report that they had been bathing. Very naughty of them—in public, too.

Still another champion in a lowly position—the noted breast-marked buff cock, "Scotland's Pride." He was certainly more in the dark than light here. His companion in distress, the eyes and wing marked cock, was commended. Mr. Crawshaw tells me this cock is in his ninth year. And he is as robust as an unflighted.

The M. and N.C.O.S. embarked on their last show with the stupendous sum of 7s. in the bank, and the writer was nearly moth-eaten by the Sec. and Treas., for showing the profits on classes. As Mr. Dooley would say: "If I have said anything I ought to be sorry for, I am willing to be forgiven."

It was pointed out that they lost £13 on their 1915 show. They deserve their success on their last show, and surely, it shows they possess grit. But that unflighted hen class—now remember!

That yellow hen of Mr. Joe Thomas's which the writer admired so much, though 1st at Sheffield, got down to hc. at Ardwick. Perhaps another one who had taken a surreptitious bath.

Borders were fine. Real little toffs. As full of impudence as a toy dog on the safe side of a high fence. The Warrington stud did well after the Humpty Dumpty trick at Barrow.

British were extra. The Nottingham team were in good fettle and touched wood nearly every time. We noticed Mr. Houlton taking notes on this section.

One needs to be a secretary of a bird show to appreciate the work got through by the secretaries, Messrs. Spencer and Thorpe. 820 birds at a one day show, and the secretaries had the award slips printed and distributed by about 3 o'clock. Truly remarkable work.

In connection with the "turnup" of the exhibits in the Norwich classes, where such birds as Mr. Cook's champion hen and Mr. Crawshaw's winners were cardless, Sam Cook told us an amusing story regarding "Little" Wullie Aitchison, of Edinburgh. It was when Wullie was plodding amongst the second-raters, and before he got such champions he is now showing.

He was a strong supporter of shows, and he more often went home cardless than not. But undaunted, he came up smiling every time; and one day an intimate friend of his said to him, whimsically: "Wullie, why do you keep on showing this stuff when you know they can't win?" Wullie replied with that inimitable Mona Lisa seriousness which is characteristic of him: "Oh, I shall keep on showing them. Some day, the judge might make a mistake and give me first."

Three committee men of the N.P.C. were seen with their heads together in a well-known City cafe, and were overheard discussing the "Pros and Cons of In-breeding"—among other things.

The many fancier friends of Jude Hayhurst will be pleased to know that he is well on the way to complete recovery, and will not be long before he is ready again for the trenches. Jude has been in khaki over a year. His friends have often wondered why a man of his age joined up, but the truth is, he had several sons in the Army, and, as he said, someone had to go to keep them out of mischief, so he went too. It's a long time now since he produced "Silver King."

A Pet Cockatiel.

By Miss L. Mason (Bolton, Lancs).

An interesting account of a pet bird, incidentally giving some useful hints to readers of "Cage Birds."

THE articles on pet Parrots during the last few weeks have been very interesting, and I hope that a short account of our pet Cockatiel may prove the same. He was an odd one in the nest more than eight years ago. The parents, wanting to nest again, turned him out, after pulling most of his feathers off, so he was brought indoors and put into a good-sized Parrot's cage.

He has canary and millet seed, is also very fond of apple pips; he knows quite well if there is any toast, and soon calls out for some, so we give him a small piece of crust. He also likes bread and milk and biscuits, but we only give him a very little, lest they should do him harm.

Soon after being brought indoors, he began to pluck his feathers, and continued for some time. We tried "Pennakura," and by using that, and also scolding him when he was plucking himself, we got him quite cured of the bad habit.

He always has a good sized piece of wood fastened to the wires, which keeps him employed, in biting it up. We have not given any time to teaching him, but he calls himself "Joey" and can say many sentences.

He is intensely fond of my brother, and knows when he opens the front door, very often greeting him with "Poor Joe" as he enters the room. Sometimes he will chatter quite a long time, saying "Come on, Joe, Joey is a pretty little boy, Dear little Joe. Come on, dear boy. Joey is a beauty boy. What do you want? He is a dirty boy," etc., the latter he has got from hearing my mother say it, when he has littered his wood shavings on the carpet. He imitates my brother whistling, and is always ready to put his head out between the wires to have it rubbed. He knows quite well when my sister is going to bed, and comes to the side of the cage, putting his head out to be kissed "Good-night."

He is a great pet, we hope he will live for a long time. We have three outdoor aviaries, in which we keep various kinds of foreigners, this is the only one we have brought indoors. We have taken CAGE BIRDS for many years, and should be very sorry to be without it.

Foresight Rewarded.

All the interesting accounts of pets we take out, and fix them in a large book, which makes very interesting reading for bird lovers, and all information as to treatment of ailing birds, in "Answers to Queries," is put into another book to refer to when we require any information. The value of this was proved in the case of a Goldfinch which seemed to be a long time getting through the moult this year, for we simply referred to our book, where we found a certain tonic recommended, which we got, and he was soon all right.

The coloured plates we put in a large blank book, made for the purpose by our printer, so we can look through them at any time. Altogether we think we get as much pleasure out of our CAGE BIRDS as any other reader, and wish it every success

17 in a Class at Swansea.

SIR,—Kindly allow me to thank the many exhibitors who supported the Yellowhammer class at Swansea Show. There were 17 entries in this class, which presented a very fine spectacle, the winning birds being really beautiful specimens and staged to perfection. This section of the show had quite a number of admirers. (MRS.) LILIAN DALTON.

A Mean Theft.

SIR,—May I make an appeal through your valuable paper regarding the theft of drinkers at shows. I sent four birds with drinkers to the Aberavon show, and some inconsiderate person or persons took the four drinkers sent with my birds. It is not the value of them, but the inconvenience caused, and also the difficulty to obtain a fresh lot, as they are rather scarce nowadays. The person or persons responsible for such a mean act must be entirely lacking in principle.

A Social Evening at Ardwick.

SIR,—For the splendid report of our open show we are indebted not only to the writer, but to the Editor of CAGE BIRDS for giving us a full page display. I would like to point out that Mr. J. Beswick's classes were not ready for judging owing to some late arrivals, and thus it was that he was not able to get through by the time Mr. C. A. House had finished, so Mr. House kindly assisted with the few remaining to be judged. Both judges did splendid service, and were rewarded by giving general satisfaction. As a Society, we wish to tender them our sincere thanks.

At our general meeting, held Nov. 21, it was arranged to hold a smoking concert on Dec. 19, to which we give a hearty welcome not only to every member, but also to all fellow fanciers. A good programme will be provided, and we are looking forward to having a pleasant evening. Will all members and friends please keep this date. Dec. 19. free, and turn up in good numbers?

The Fancy and War Bread.

Will Whole-meal Bread Endanger Young Canaries?

SIR,—At first sight it may seem strange that an Act of Parliament changing the colour and constituents of a nation's bread could have any detrimental effect on so beautiful a hobby as rearing Canaries. Yet it has occurred to me, and possibly to others, that one of the prime essentials to a successful breeding season in 1917 is in danger of being totally destroyed. I sincerely hope that none will think me a pessimist, or an over-cautious soul, but rather that the good of the Fancy all over the kingdom has my cordial sympathy and good will, and for this and no other reason do I write this letter.

It is an established fact in Canary rearing that the Canary is a seed-shelling bird. There is no seed that you offer a Canary but in every case he shells it and discards the husk. Supposing the Canary should consume shell and all; what would happen? Exactly what happens to any man or animal who swallows the husk of any cereal. Irritation of the intestines is at once set up, and if the irritation is sufficiently violent diarrhœa in due course supervenes.

For this reason I never give maw seed on the top of soft food in the breeding season, as it invariably causes bowel trouble in the young, especially in the first week after hatching. It is quite impossible for the parents totally to discard the shell whilst eating egg food, and you can invariably see it in the crop of the young after they have been fed. Then look out for trouble! If such be the case with so tiny a seed, what is going to happen when a certain percentage of the bran is to be left in all flour? You cannot take refuge in the granulated biscuit such as is supplied by Messrs. Spillers and Baker of this city, and Messrs. Spratt's, of London, for all these biscuits will contain their due proportion of wheat bran, and I fear there will be a terrible mortality in young birds if whole or partial wheat-meal biscuit is used. I am therefore sending this letter to the fancy with a breeder's advice to secure enough white granulated biscuit at once to carry through the breeding and moulting seasons.

I have already got in half a cwt., and stored it in biscuit boxes, after having sieved it through a fine sieve to remove all weevil and other parasitic life to which the biscuit is subject. Perhaps it would be well to permit discussion in your columns on this, which to me seems a vital factor to the success of the fancy during the war.

Yellow Wagtails in Winter.

SIR,—I quite agree with the statement made by F. Abbott, Chorley Wood, in CAGE BIRDS of Nov. 4, regarding the Yellow Wagtail being seen during the winter months. I myself saw the species near Latimer House, in the Valley of the Chess, a few days before Christmas, 1913.

Proposed Society for Barking.

SIR,—I am very pleased to see Mr. Collard's suggestion in CAGE BIRDS re the need of a club in the Barking district, where I also live. There are lots of working men who keep birds here, and I think if a start was made by some large bird breeder in the way of starting a small club, it would be much appreciated, and greatly encourage those who, like myself, are "only beginners." I have taken CAGE BIRDS now for eighteen months, and wish it every success.

F. C. HOWARD.

A Model Goldfinch Sire.

Helps to Rear Fourteen Young.

SIR,—I had a cock Goldfinch and a Norwich hen Canary together all last winter in an outdoor aviary. I gave them a nest and nesting material on April 16; on April 23rd the hen laid her first egg, and finished up by laying five, which all hatched out, and the young were reared. On May 29 she started another nest, and laid four eggs, which all hatched out and lived. On July 5, she started with her third nest, laid five eggs, which all hatched out and lived. I lost one young of the second nest, at the age of seven weeks; the remaining thirteen are all alive and well. I did not remove the eggs as laid, neither did I remove the Finch. The young on leaving the nest were practically all of one size, with the exception of one in the second nest, which was small, and which died, as stated, at the age of seven weeks. The Finch assisted in feeding the young until they could cater for themselves, in fact, he appeared to do more of the feeding than the hen.

I should like to know from some of your other readers if they have left the Finch with the Canary, as according to all the instructions I have read at various times, we are told to remove the eggs as laid; also the Finch before returning the eggs to the hen, otherwise he would destroy the eggs.

What is a Ticked Bird?

An Old Question Revived.

SIR,—Would some of your leading exhibitors or judges please say, through the medium of your esteemed paper, what a ticked bird should be? Our reason for putting this question is that at the recent Port Talbot Show, Mr. C. A. House wrongly classed a bird of ours in the marked class. He said it was a ticked bird, and should have been shown in the clear or ticked class. The bird has been shown all over England during the last three years under all our leading judges in the marked class, and has always been recognised as a marked. The bird is grizzled all over his back right from the neck to the rump, and on his wing butts. We might say that all the fanciers that saw the bird at Port Talbot had no doubt whatever that it was a marked bird, and in its right class.

I have been a breeder of Norwich for ten years, and I always thought that the definition of a tick was as follows:—"A ticked bird must show a visible mark or tick not larger than a sixpence, on an otherwise clear body." Now I take it that Mr. House is a sportsman, so am I. Well, I will give £1 to the Red Cross at Cheltenham or Port Talbot, whichever he likes, if it is proved that the bird is a ticked; if on the other hand he will do the same if it is proved that it is a marked bird.

Another Irish Consignment Tampered With.

SIR,—I have another case of birds been stolen whilst in transit on the railway, bringing the list alarmingly high, in view of the numerous letters which have appeared in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, during the past three weeks.

My case is of very recent date, viz., Nov. 21 and 22. A friend of mine residing in Co. Meath, Ireland, from whom I have had hundreds of birds during the past four years despatched to me four exhibition British birds, viz., a Bullfinch, Goldfinch, and two Chaffinches, on the train leaving Kells, Co. Meath, on Tuesday, Nov. 21, at 3.40, catching the 9.45 boat from Dublin to Holyhead. I received the box at 5 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 22, minus the Goldfinch and Chaffinches, but, whoever had opened the box had replaced one of the Chaffinches with another, for as these birds were coming to me in time for our annual show at Garston, Dec. 2, I am convinced that the Chaffinch I have received is not the one originally put in the box, as it is only a small, very wild specimen, that anyone who had the slightest knowledge as to what an exhibition bird should be would not trouble to put in a box and pay carriage for. During the past few years I have relied on this same friend to supply me with some of the best British birds for local showing, and I know that he would not send me such a bird as I have got. It seems that whoever is doing this pilfering knows what good birds are, and, not to make the loss look so bad, very kindly sometimes substitutes another bird.

In face of the facts placed before us from numerous fanciers it is high time someone got a move on to stop this nefarious business, and with this end in view I have written to the superintendent over parcels, etc., by passenger traffic, Mr. T. E. Isaac, stating my case, and also enclosing the numerous cuttings from CAGE BIRDS, to show mine is not an isolated case. I am now awaiting a reply and trust some good may come of it. I think some idea such as posters announcing these thefts should be displayed so as to give a warning to anyone who is offered a really good bird at ridiculously low price. Then enquiries could be made as to where it originally came from, and perhaps the culprits could be brought to book.

I hope fanciers who have the misfortune to lose birds in this way will do their utmost to cause enquiry to be made by their local railway officials, and also report same through the columns of CAGE BIRDS, as too much publicity cannot be given in these cases with a view of stopping or ultimately catching the thieves. I thank you, sir, for so kindly placing your paper always at the disposal of fanciers to air their views and grievances, and always to the help of the fancy in general, and I shall be very pleased to let you know the result of my enquiries here a Liverpool.

Hon. Sec., Garston B.B.A.

A Correction.

SIR,—I am sorry to note on reading my CAGE BIRDS to-day, that I have given you B5 as the year number of my lost Rollers. They are young birds, so they are B6 rung. Kindly correct in your next issue and oblige.

A. HARPER.

Alleged Rough Treatment at Bacup.

Roller Contest or Football Match?

SIR,—At Bacup Roller Contest, I entered four birds, but I must say they did not get treated as such. In fact, I have my doubts as to whether it was not a football match that I sent them to, for I had not a cage returned that was not broken, and all the shutters were broken off their hinges. Three more Wigan fanciers can verify my statement, as they got theirs returned in a very similar manner. It has not been done on the railway, but at the show without a doubt. I have only been showing two seasons, but if it is going to cost me 16s. for cages, I think it is time to retire from the fancy.

R. VERNON.

And Some Other Birdy Notes from Fort William.

SIR,—Perhaps the following may interest some of your readers. On the morning of October 12st, about 3.45, while there were still four hours of darkness, my attention was drawn by a bird fluttering up and down outside one of my windows. I opened the door quietly, put out my hand, and caught the bird. Imagine my delight and surprise to find it was a beautiful little Redpoll, but where it came from, or how it got there, I don't know, as I have never seen others here, and I don't think it was one that had escaped from captivity, because it was rather wild. I took it home, and put it in a cage, and it at once began to eat seed, and is doing all right so far. It is in splendid plumage, with a beautiful red crest, but it has jet black legs and feet. I have caught and kept lots of Redpolls around Derby years ago, but it is so long ago I really forget whether they had black legs or not.

I am operator of a big swing bridge here, over the Kaministiquia River, and the operating room is 100 feet above the water. No doubt the bird was attracted by the lights in the room, but what was it doing out at that time of day? Perhaps migrating to warmer parts, as it gets rather chilly here in winter, occasionally getting down to 50 and 55 below zero. We do not see many birds around then, except thousands of Grosbeaks. There are a great many mountain ash trees in this city, along the boulevards and in gardens, and just now they are loaded with fine large bunches of red berries, but in winter there are flocks of Grosbeaks come here and strip every berry off the trees. They sit on the branches, sometimes 40 or 50 in one tree, and are so tame one can stand and watch them often not more than four or five feet away. They eat the insides, and put out the skins, till the side walk is red all over with them. They stay about a month, till every berry is gone, and then they go too.

There are no song birds here, except the Robin, and it only sings a little in the spring. I suppose this bird is the American Robin, about the size of the Thrush, but we have some very pretty plumaged birds, especially the Oriole, a large black and yellow bird, and lots of Woodpeckers, also a few Eagles on the mountains. We have also hundreds of big Hawks and Owls, lots of them as big as a Bramah cockerel, and they do some damage too among the poultry.

I saw a fight a while ago between a large Hawk and a Mink; they started fighting over something one of them had got on the ground. The Mink got hold of the Hawk in the breast, and the Hawk seized him with its claws, and flew up a great height. I watched them awhile, and at last they both dropped, and on going to the spot I found both were dead; no doubt the bird weakened from loss of blood, and could fly no longer, and the fall to earth killed them both. Well, if any of your readers can enlighten me on the colour of a Redpoll's legs I should be much obliged. I should like to get a copy of CAGE BIRDS with any replies in, but it is impossible to get it here. I may send you a few notes once in a while if they would be acceptable.

Fort William, Ontario.

The feet ("legs") and toes of a wild Redpoll are nearly black; they get paler with each moult in captivity, as do those of other birds. It is probable that the bird caught by our correspondent is of a different species to our own Lesser Redpoll. Conrs' Redpoll, Holboll's Redpoll, the Greenland Redpoll, and Horneman's Redpoll, for instance, are all to be found at times in North America, some of them regularly.—ED., CAGE BIRDS.]

The Roller Canary.

Can British Breeders Meet the Demand?

SIR,—I have quite enjoyed reading the article in this week's CAGE BIRDS by Mr. Gutierrez, on the Roller Canary, but there are one or two little questions which I really must put, as, if I am not mistaken, this gentleman is the official reporter of the British Roller Club.

The second paragraph of the article states that "British breeders of Canaries breed for excellency, and it is the same in everything else." I quite agree, but, and you can take it that I regard those three letters as a very large "but," shows of almost any other species of live stock are held with the sole idea of bettering the already existing standard of production for market.

The third paragraph headed "A blessing in disguise," would be, with organisation. We are told that "If the English and Americans will buy the Continental rubbish it is because no other is to be got," and "because the vast majority don't know what high class song really is."

Now, long before the war, roughly 50,000 birds were annually dumped here from this Continental rubbish heap, and sold. America, I believe, received a far larger quantity. What I would like to know with reference to this, is what steps the British Roller Club have taken, as the "Parent body" with regard to Roller clubs, to endeavour to capture this trade. I take it this would be a very patriotic movement.

Does your correspondent really think that the "vast majority" will ever know what "high-class song really is?" I don't. I do know this, however, that a great many of the "vast majority," when listening to some of our high-class birds, think they are chopping, and refuse to buy.

I am quite aware that someone will tell me the Roller Club is simply formed to control a sport. Horse racing is a sport, and has been carried on during the war to a limited extent, by permission of the Government, with a design, and when there is a great market for this class of bird, my contention is simply that the Roller clubs, as patriotic bodies should endeavour to capture it.

I have not seen any independent move by the "Parent Body" up to date, and suggest to your correspondent that as reporter to the B.R.C.C., he might, at their next sitting, try to get this fertile egg hatched. I have not the slightest doubt the British public would be delighted to find that their wants could in future be supplied by British breeders.

WESTERN COUNTIES O.S.

Owing to the fact that there was a deficit of over £10 on last year's show, and also that a number of the members are in the ranks, the W.C.O.S. decided to hold a members' show only this season, on Nov. 1, at the Foresters' Hall, Plymouth. Just over 300 exhibits were staged, and quality right through was excellent. Yorks were of high merit, and amongst the open or any-age classes Mr. Woodley was the most successful exhibitor with birds of grand type and style. Others who met with success and whose birds were good enough for open competition were Messrs. Nicholls, Oliver, Clift, Hambling, Reed, and Fitzwalter, the latter a novice, beating the o'd hands in buff hens with a lovely exhibit. In the young classes Mr. Oliver won three 1sts, spl., Yorkshire cup, and res. for the Astor cup. The cup winner was a most charming yellow hen, a gem for shape and style. Messrs. Clift, Craven, and Nicholls were also first prize winners with some classical specimens, whilst other prize winners were Messrs. Hambling, Woodley, Reed, Collins, and Fitzwalter.

No town in the kingdom can beat Plymouth for Norwich, and the competition in this section was exceedingly keen. In the open section a number of tried and proved veterans were shown, and the duel between Messrs. W. Collings and W. Spillman was as keen as usual. They did not have matters all th ir own way, however, and other winners of firsts were Messrs. Andrews, Pope, Richards, and Howard, whilst other prizes fell to Messrs. French, Garland, Hambling, Smale, Perrin, and Ough.

In the novice, Messrs. Smale and Moffat were the winners. Yorng Norwich were quite the section of the show, and there was very little to choose between many of the exhibits, all having that wonderful shape, cobbiness, and quality for which Plymouth is famous. Mr. W. Spillman secured a trio of firsts, two specials, the Norwich cup, and the Astor cup for the best bird in the show, the winner of the last-mentioned trophy being a magnificent yellow, shaped like a Robin, feathered like a Java, and in colour like unto an Orange Bishop. Mr. W. Collings took a couple of firsts, and Mr. Hambling one. Other prize winners were Messrs. Garland, Howard, Deakin, Andrews, Brown, Reed, Ough, Smale, Moffit, and Rowe. The novice winners were Messrs. Moffit, Deakin, Miehl, and Smale.

Crests were far below the standard one associates with Plymouth, still some good birds were shown by Messrs. Rowe, Hutchings, and Bavage, the latter winning the Crest cup with a very handsome green Crest hen. Cinnamons made a nice show, and birds of excellent colour, shape, and feather held the leading positions. The winners were Messrs. Craven, Leach, Rapson, Smale, Perrin, Brown, Collins, and Pope. Mr. Craven took the Brown cup with a buff of rare feather, colour, and size, whilst the Cinnamon and A.O.V. cup went to his winner in the yellows, a bird of lovely quality and colour. Messrs. Cheney and Lugg won in the A.O.V. with Lancashires and Green Borders.

Mr. F. Collins was the most successful exhibitor in Mules, and his wonderful team are too well known to need more than passing comment. He won a trio of specials, three 1sts, and the Mule cup, the latter with a beautiful Goldie-Redpoll. Other winners in the section were Messrs. Hambley, Perrin, Wills, Large, Reed, and Cheney. Messrs. Craven and Moffit won in the Cages of Four, and Messrs. Spillman, Moffit, Bavage, and Hutchings in Pairs. The British section was unusually strong, the birds being very forward and competition was close and keen. The British bird cup was won by a magnificent Yellow Wagtail, shown by Mr. F. Collins. The prize-takers were Messrs. Hambley, Deeble, Mitch, Cheney, Slocombe, Smale (Goldf. and Bullf.). Deeble, Lugg, Cheney, Cordy, Wills, Perring (Linnets), Lugg, Cheney (Greenf.), Collins, Largo (Bramble), Condy, Cheney (Siskin, etc.).

CHESTER-LE-STREET.

Show in aid of the wounded soldiers and sailors of Chester-le-Street, Nov. 17 and 18, in the Middle Chare Workmen's Club Hall. The entry of 127 was very poor for the 29 classes provided, but as it happened, proved about as many as could be accommodated in the small room available. Mr. W. L. Smith, South Shields, judged, and considering that the birds seemed to be feeling the severe cold, his awards met with general satisfaction.

NOR. YELL. CK.: 1, Warrington, grand head and chest, good size and col., easy win; 2, Lindsay, cl., nice qual., not the size of winner. DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

Open show, Reindeer, Peckham, Nov. 14. The entry was not so good as expected, but the birds were of good quality and the show was of exceptional interest because of the keen competition among the members for the valuable specials, some of which have been running for several years. Norwich were a grand lot, Mr. Spillman sending a good team from the west. His old yellow cock won the "News of the World" shield outright, besides three other specials, one of which was for best Norwich in the show. The shield is a particularly interesting trophy; engraved on it are the names of such well-known fanciers as Messrs. Baker, Crisp, Hodder, Spillman, Martin, etc. The fight for the Norwich bowl for the best unflighted naturally rested between Mr. Martin's winning yellow and Mr. Spillman's buff. The yellow is an outstanding bird, and it will take something exceptionally good to beat it; some thought it was the best Norwich in the show, for although scarcely so massive as the old yellow, its carriage and style are beyond reproach. Yorkshires were a good lot, Mr. Hall winning the cup for best bird, Mr. Howick spl. best novice exhibit, Mr. Hodson spl. best novice Norwich. Other spl. winners were Messrs. Ayres, Raine, Mitchell, and Clemence. The management of the show was in the capable hands of Mr. F. Cole, and everything was quite in order and up-to-date. Mr Robson judged.

COVENTRY.

The Coventry O.S. held their 40th annual exhibition in the Corn Exchange, Nov. 15. The hall, which is an admirable one, is in the heart of the city and only five minutes from the railway station. The show proved a great success, exhibits being about 70 more than last year, and there was a good attendance of visitors the whole of the day. In most sections some of the cream of the Fancy put in an appearance. Sales proved far in advance of previous seasons, Mr. Gilbert's winning Crest being quickly claimed at £10 10s., Mr. Collier's 2nd prize yellow hen at £5 3s., and many others. Mr. J. Kent, the sec., deserves the greatest praise, this being his first venture at an open show, and the whole of the stewards worked well. Messrs. Bell and Dickinson were extra special. Half-an-hour after exhibition closed the birds were on their way to the railway station. The following were the officers: President, G. Peters; Vice-Presidents, T. Gilbert, G. Turrall; Treas., J. Corrail; Auditors, H. Mann, H. Thompson; Show Stewards, H. Butler, H. Bell, G. Lawrence, T. Judd, A. Green, B. Roberts, G. Dikinson; Hon. Sec., J. Kent; Assist. Sec., Mr. Hughes. Mr. J. Robson judged.

SOUTH HEIGHAM (Norwich).

Annual Show, Nov. 11 and 13, York Hotel Show Room. Mr. Jacob Mackley, judge. Norwich contained birds with good properties, and Crest and Cresbred included some nice specimens. Britishers were down in numbers but high in quality. Visitors were numerous, including Scottish fanciers now undergoing military training at Norwich, including the well-known judge, Pte. R. Bald (Bathgate), busy enjoying the Britishers. Hon. sec., Geo. Cooper.

LONDON AND COUNTIES A.C.B.

Successful members' show, Nov. 4, at Headquarters. The entry was capital, being in excess of last year's total, and there was undoubtedly a distinct advance in the merits of the birds. In Yorks. and Nor. some very fine specimens were on view. Among the former, Mr. Herring's grand buff cock stood out as winner of the special for best bird in the show. Mr. Gilbert also staged a couple of remarkably good yellows. Special best unflighted was secured by Mr. Etherington with a very typical Norwich of good quality. Mr. Hurt won spl. best Novice Nor., one of the best of the variety exhibited. Cup for most points throughout the year was annexed by Mr. Gilbert, the runner-up, Mr. Durham, making a good fight. The management was capital, Mr. Gilbert, the popular sec., having everything, as usual, quite up to date. The society owes a good deal to the secretary for its success; he is hard-working, energetic, and painstaking, and has the welfare of the members at heart. The show was well attended. Mr. H. Norman judged.

NORWICH (Perseverance United).

Annual show of Norwich, headquarters, Rose Inn, Nov. 11. Owing to many members serving with the Forces, entries were not quite so numerous as usual, but over 100 grand specimens were staged. The show opened with a class of good yell. cocks, closely run by the buffs. The variegs. buff shown by Mr. Thurston won medal best bird in show. In unflighted, Mr. A. Wright won special with a grand yell. hen, very typical, closely followed by Mr. A. Dunn's buff cock. Mr. J. Mackley judged; R. Wigger and J. Cogman stewards; A. Shearing, sec. Cl. Yell. CROYDON F.A.

Seventh annual show, Public Hall, Croydon, Nov. 1. The show was a huge success, and our section was the best the Society has ever had; the entry was not only exceptional, but quality was all that one could desire. The unflighted classes were particularly strong, and the competition throughout very keen for the silver cup given for the best unflighted bird. The winner was a high-conditioned buff Yorks. owned by Miss M. Wright, Duppas Hill. In its own class it was closely pressed by a grand yellow put down by Mr. Last, condition alone turning the scales. Norwich were exceptionally good, the pick being a grand buff cock (spl. best in show) exhibited by Mr. J. Chester. (Portraits of these two birds appeared on our front page, Nov. 18.—Editor.) Some good ones were put back in the old bird classes that might have been in had they been better staged; the winner in the unflighted class, Wilson, is a typical ticked buff. Borders were exceptional for the district, and some real gems were on view. Spl. for best went to a high class ticked buff, staged to the minute by Mr. Bacon, Redhill. Here again condition had the last word, Mr. Last's wonderful unflighted yellow hen lacking just the finishing bloom required for a big special winner. A few good greens and cinnamons made up quite a choice collection. The show was one of the best arranged we have seen for many a day, and Mr. Roberts is quite "it" as a Sec., everything up to time, and quite in order. He was assisted by many willing workers, among whom we noticed the popular chairman, Mr. D. W. Oliver, Messrs. Capel, Holland, Last, etc. The gate was good, although the weather did its utmost to spoil it. Mr. H. Norman judged.

HIGHGATE AND HAMPSTEAD.

Ninth annual show, Nov. 17, at Spencer Hall, Dartmouth Park Hill. Mr. J. Robson judged an entry of 200, a record for the past three years. Norwich were numerous and of the best. Yorks. were down in numbers, but good quality, British ditto. Some well known Norwich were among the winners; Messrs. Lovegrove, Bailey, Wills, Walmsley, Way and Hardcastle were special winners. Mr. P. Johnstone won £5 5s. cup with unflighted yellow Yorks., one of the best. Weston cup, most points, most entries, specials went to F. C. Knight, and specials in British were won by Messrs. Shorter, F. C. and A. Knight. Two snow-white Canaries exhibited by Miss Dora Sulman were a feature of the show, also 2 Dutch Frills, one a very fine specimen; 55 specials.

NEARLY 700 BIRDS AT A MEMBERS' SHOW.

Twelfth annual members' show, Co.-op. Hall, Nov. 4, with a record entry of 691, 259 more than 1915. The magnificent show-room, splendidly lighted with electricity and filled with glorious exhibits, was a sight to see. The Hall is situated centrally, exceedingly spacious, lofty, and perfectly ventilated, in fact, one of the best in England. On the eve of the show quite a lot of willing fanciers were busy as bees, fixing up-to-date 3-tier staging. The sec., Mr. G. Greenwell, is the right man for a show, works with precision and promptness, and is courteous to the extreme; much of the success of the show is undoubtedly due to his endeavours. Show manager, Mr. L. Simpson, is a splendid worker, ever on the go and worthy of many kind words. The committee consists of practical, energetic and enthusiastic fanciers, each is an expert and great credit is due to the following: Messrs. T. Messenger, M. Mathewson, C. Wilson, R. McDougall, G. Scott, J. Johnson, W. Studholme, G. Couchman, W. Stephenson, J. Shadgson, J. Blakey, J. W. Watson, W. Espie, J. White.

Norwich made a magnificent display for type and quality, colour and substance. Yorks. were a treat, lovely quality, wonderful length, straight as rushes and stylish to a degree were many that one came across. In the "wee gems" type, quality and colour were extra, some well-known winners being on view. Greens and cinnamons were a grand lot for colour, quality and markings, and in Cresses and Cresbreds we question whether a choicer lot have been seen at the annual. Cinnamons were few, but good. British yielded a magnificent total of 100 entries. Quality was of the best, and competition was keen, many good birds having to stand cardless. The judges were Messrs. T. Dixon (Bedlington), J. Dixon (Wigton), and J. Maddison (Newcastle), and their awards were well received.

Silver cup presented by President Col. E. R. Pinkney, for best young bird went to Mr. T. Bewick with a magnificent young Crest. Most points cup, nominated cup for three birds, Johnston; and cup best young Green Border, Johnston; Border Fancy medal, Espie, with a grand clear buff hen; best British, Rowson, a grand Linnet.

PENGE.

Penge C.B.A. and Bromley F.S. combined show, Alexandra Hotel, Penge, Nov. 8, in a large room kindly lent for the occasion by Mr. A. Hutton. The entry was splendid, exceeding all expectations, and was undoubtedly the finest exhibition of cage birds held in the district. Some very choice specimens were put down in the champion section, open show winners adding to their laurels. Novice birds were a particularly taking lot, length, style and quality of feather being to the fore in the Yorkshire, but the Norwich birds were the cream of the section, true Norwich properties being evident in almost every specimen. The champions must look to their laurels—the novices are coming on at a rapid rate. Borders were a choice collection, Mr. Hewitt's lovely Buff, 1st Cheltenham, adding another win to its record. Mr. Last secured spl. best in section with his old Yellow, looking very fit. British made quite an imposing collection, the small insectivorous species being much admired, Mrs. Green's lovely Grey Wagtail secured special for best bird. Mr. Dell's old Palace Starling was once more on top in the class for larger birds.

The hard-working sec., Mr. W. D. Fryett, managed everything in his well-known style, and all was in order with catalogues on sale by the opening hour. Mr. Hutton attended to the staging, the birds being neatly arranged all round the large room, and other assistants were Messrs. Cory, Whiffen, Breeze, etc. Special winners were Messrs. Hutton, Last, Paterson, Humphris, Powell, Westrip. Special best Novice was secured by Mr. Paterson with a very fine Norwich, the runner-up being Mr. Powell's Buff Yorks. Mr. H. Norman judged.

DERBY C.B.S.

Fifty-seventh annual members' show, Nov. 18; 228 birds staged, the young bird classes being well represented. Mr. W. Twells, Derby, won the Norwich Challenge Cup for the first time with a Cl. Yellow hen, a splendid bird, of fine feather, good head and neck, and lovely condition. Mr. J. Pass, Melbourne, won Yorks. Cup for the second time with a Buff cock, of rare length and shape, splendid wing carriage and tail. Mr. Cockeram running close with a Yellow cock. Mr. Morrell was runner-up for Norwich Cup. A splendid exhibition of Norwich and Yorks. was on view, and Crests were quite up to the average, Messrs. College and Stevens staging excellent specimens. Mr. J. H. Roe, Birmingham, gave great satisfaction as judge; F. W. Jordan, hon. sec. The special feature of the show was the staging, the society having in view the possibility of holding open shows, have set up racks; these were used for the first time, and the effect was splendid, visitors obtaining a very clear view. This show was no doubt the best in the history of the society; half proceeds are for wounded soldiers.

MUIRKIRK.

Annual show, Drill Hall, Nov. 11. As soon as the birds were staged it was evident that the show would prove a success, a result which had been looked for by a hard-working committee, who never left a stone unturned to bring out the best quality of birds in the country. Their efforts were rewarded in every way, and the competition was very keen. Mr. Whitelaw, Govan, judged and gave entire satisfaction. The open medal was won by Mr. Sproat, with a splendid yellow cock. Novice medal hy Mr. Scott, with a second prize buff cockq

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Inter-club Cup show, Saturday, Nov. 11, at Wolverhampton, when a fine lot of birds faced the respective judges, and made one of the best local shows ever held; 179 birds were staged, Norwich averaging 11 per class, and the Yorks. 9. British and Novices were not so good as expected. The special list was a grand one; the handsome rose bowl and Wedgwood flower-pot, presented by Messrs. Gough and Loach, were both won by J. Gibbons for best Yorks., and best Unflig. Yorks. Gough and Loach won spl, best Nor., Hepwood and Hampton second best and special best members' Nor. Best members Yorks., J. Gibbons; 2, Pritchard; best and second best British Yorks., most points winners were Hepwood and Hampton, F. J. Weaver, Crundell and Rowley in Norwich, and J. Gibbons, E. Hall, H. O. PARTICK C.B.S.

Eighteenth annual show, Nov. 4, Co-operative Hall. This Society, we believe, has been hard hit lately by its Secretary being called up to the Army almost on the eve of the show, which necessitated the appointment of a new hand, but we were pleased to see everything looking so well under the circumstances, and reflecting much credit on the man at the helm. Messrs. Martin, Craig and Heggie judged, and seemed to give satisfaction all round.

NORWICH MOULTING SLOWLY.

St. Crispin.—Judging by the new feathers you say have appeared at the wing tips, I am inclined to think that one bird is still moulting satisfactorily, but very slowly, and the brown patches you notice on the body may very probably be nothing than groups of new quills just breaking through the skin. In any case I would not advise you to attempt any forcible means of inducing a more palpable moult at this season. If the process has not been sufficiently carried out the bird will, in all probability, assume a more active moulting condition at the beginning of spring, which, as the bird is evidently not a stock bird, will be no detriment to it at all. Meantime, continue your present general treatment, but add to the dietary for the next month a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar twice a week, and in the drinking water add 15 drops of fluid magnesia, every second day for a week. Omit it in the second week, and then resume and give the same dosage for another week.

OUTDOOR BIRDHOUSE.

Doubtful.—Most certainly you can breed Yorkshire Canaries in an outdoor birdhouse without the aid of artificial heat, and provided the place is well built, properly ventilated, free from damp and abnormal draughts to begin with, the birds will be all the better for doing without it. The only essential to success is that you ascertain as far as possible that the birds you start with have been bred and kept under normal conditions such as you purpose keeping them under yourself. This does not necessarily mean that the stock must come from another outdoor birdhouse, but rather that they should have been bred and kept in a room or building where no artificial heat of any kind is used.

FREQUENT DEATHS.

Pipe Rack.—The particulars you give and the symptoms named are very suggestive of a chronic and non-virulent type of septic fever; therefore I cannot advise you better than, in the event of another death occurring, to send the body as early as possible to our Mr. Yates for post-mortem (see rules under heading "Post-Mortems," in order to ascertain without doubt whether you have this disease among your stock or not. Meantime, see that the cages are kept as clean as possible, and it would be a wise precaution to wash them all out well with a 1 in 40 solution of carbolic fluid, such as Jeyes'. This strength you will get by adding two teaspoonfuls of the fluid to half-a-pint of water, or a tablespoonful to a quart. See also that all food and water and the vessels are always scrupulously clean. It is doubtful whether the sawdust has anything to do with the trouble, of course, assuming that it is cut from clean and uncontaminated wood; but, still, it would be much better if you were to get a coarser-cut stuff which would not get so much blown about the food and water, or otherwise you should mix with the sawdust an equal quantity of builders' sand to prevent it being blown about so easily. As regards treatment, give in addition to the seed dietary a piece of bread the size of a large hazel nut, soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar every second day, and on the alternate days half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, black rape, teazle, and broken groats. These quantities are per bird for a month, or until sufficiently recovered. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhuharb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, for three consecutive days, and every second day afterwards for the remainder of a week. After this give five drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for two or three weeks, as may seem necessary. Adhere to this system so as to give it a fair chance, and if deaths do not cease, write again as soon as you have a post-mortem report, and repeat particulars, when I will advise you further.

HENS WITH COUGH.

Vincent, Oxford.—A chronic cough such as you describe, without any other appearance of ill-health or loss of condition, may not be of any material importance. You should see that the birds are not exposed to direct cold draughts, and, in particular as the cough may quite likely be of mechanical origin and due to a dusty atmosphere, dusty seeds, or irritating fumes from too close proximity to burning lights, or any other source, take the necessary steps to remove any or all such causes of irritation, when the effects will disappear as a matter of course. Try giving, in addition to the staple seed diet, a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut, soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for two or three weeks. On the alternating days add to the water five drops each of oxymel of squills, tincture of lobelia, ipecacuanha wine, and sweet spirits of nitre. The old hen will probably have passed the zenith of usefulness as a breeding unit after next season, but no definite limit can be put upon the number of seasons a hen will breed successfully. The only sure test is to try them each season as long as they remain in good sound health and active condition. I do not think your determination to breed with the young hen which has developed the same kind of cough as the parent a wise one. The only sound system would be to reject that hen for breeding purposes before any other that had shown no signs of developing the cough.

THE RIGHT KIND.

H. B.—(1) As you are quite a tyro in the business I cannot advise you better than to get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our Manager will send you for 7d., post free. Therein you will find illustrations of breeding cages and details of all requirements, sizes, etc., as well as the whole plan of management to ensure success. With this and "Aviaries, Birdrooms and Cages," post free 2s. 3d. from our Manager, you would find no difficulty in making all your own cages and appliances. A plain box type of cage—that is, with wires only in front—about 29in. by 10in. by 15in., is best for all-round usefulness. (2) The best kind of Canary to keep is wholly a matter of personal taste. For singing pure and simple, nothing surpasses the pure Roller, and for fancy breeds, Border Fancy, Norwich, or Yorkshire are among the easiest to breed and manage, and therefore as suitable as any for a beginner to start with. (3) It is impossible to put a fixed price upon any of the breeds as a fair one. It naturally depends very largely upon the quality, or typical perfection of the particular specimens in question, as well as the vendor's idea of the value of the birds to himself, the demand that exists, etc. But for any of the breeds named the price would probably run from about 15s. per pair, upwards. You should watch our prepaid advert. columns for a few weeks to see prices they are offered at.

MATE FOR YORKSHIRE.

W. J.—Without much more definite information to work on, I am afraid I cannot be of much use in advising a suitable mate for the Yorkshire cock. You simply say it is a buff, but omit to mention whether it is clear, ticked, or what, and it would also be necessary to know whether it is a pink-eyed bird, and the markings, and whether green or cinnamon bred, of the immediate parents, to enable one to say with any degree of certainty what kind of mates would be required to breed certain marked young. You had better write again and send this information, or as much of it as you can, when I will do my best to help you. Meantime, on the scanty data I have I can only suggest that if the bird is a clear, the best mate to stand a chance of breeding marked young would be a wing and eye marked bird bred from parents of an even-marked strain, and if the bird is a pink-eyed specimen the marks of the mate should be cinnamon coloured, and the bird bred from a cinnamon-marked strain. More than this it is impossible to say at present.

SWOLLEN TOES.

Anxious One.—Stop using the wych hazel now and try the following treatment instead for a fortnight or so. Bathe the feet each evening for a few minutes in a lukewarm solution of boracic acid—a small teaspoonful of the acid in a saucerful of lukewarm water—then dry gently and paint the toes with one or two drops of Friar's Balsam by means of the tip of a small feather, holding the bird for a minute or so afterwards for any "sting" to have time to pass off, and thus prevent the bird picking at it. Keep cage floor and perches as clean as possible, which object would be assisted by strewing the floor well for the time being with a mixture of equal parts fine sand and coarse-cut pine sawdust. In addition to the usual seed diet, give a morsel of bread, soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar about every third day, and add to the drinking water 15 drops of fluid magnesia, every third day for a fortnight. Shall be glad to hear result at the end of that time. Do not prick the swellings any more.

EXTERMINATING GREY LICE.

Len.—As a rule this pest flourishes only on birds that are in a low condition or weakly. The quickest and one of the best methods of extermination, though seemingly rather a drastic one, is hand-washing and employing an insecticide in the water used in the process, and as you have only a dozen birds, if you are expert at hand-washing this would be the best method for you in the end. Wash the birds just as you would in getting them up for show, and in the first two waters used add a little Creolin, which you will get from any chemist, in the proportion of a teaspoonful to each pint of water. In the third basin use pure water only for the final rinsing. Then whilst the birds are drying well wash out the cage with a similar solution of the Creolin. After the lapse of a week repeat the whole process to clear off any survivors that may have hatched out from "nits" that escaped destruction in the first treatment. You should, of course, do the cages again in the same way at the second operation. If this method does not appeal to you, then catch the birds one at a time and dust them thoroughly with Keating's, or freshly-ground pyrethrum powder, which, again, the chemist will supply, working the powder well into the base of the feathers next the skin with a wad of wool, or a small bellows, then roll the bird in a small handkerchief, leaving only the beak free for breathing, and lay the bird in an empty cage, closing the door as a precaution against accidents. Let it lay there 15 or 20 minutes, and during this time wash out the cage with the solution of Creolin as advised above. Then unwrap bird and allow it to shake and preen itself in the spare cage, and offer a bath in which you have mixed a few drops of essence of quassia before returning it to its own cage. Do all birds and cages at one operation if possible, but in any case be very careful not to place a cleaned bird and cage close to one which has not been treated, or it may become re-infested at once.

TREATMENT OF A MAGPIE.

G. C.—The Magpie is not a very difficult subject to attend to, and yet if not properly treated it is liable to go wrong and look far from happy. Your flight should do admirably for him. Change of diet is the secret in keeping them in health. As a staple food I like "Melox" or soaked chicken meal of the best quality; then about twice a week give a good feed of insectile mixture as used for the Warblers; this, as probably you know, contains ants' eggs, flies, etc., and will assist materially in keeping the bird fit. Offer scraps from the table, such as potatoes, greens, pudding, and pieces of cooked meat, and now and then a good-sized bone to amuse him. A freshly-killed mouse or sparrow is better for them than butchers' meat, and, if you are exhibiting, these should be given while still warm, as the flesh with the blood still in it gives a gloss to the plumage unattainable in any other way. The Magpie will also eat grain, and a little occasionally makes a capital change, so do acorns and beech masts, and smashed walnuts. For exhibition purposes, in the class for large Softbills the Magpie takes a high place, but it must be shown in a suitable cage and in perfect feather. Frayed or damaged tail or wing feathers would tell against it considerably.

FRESHLY-CAUGHT FINCHES.

Nor'-West.—I am sorry to hear of your losses and fear there is something quite wrong in your treatment to lose so many Goldies. The following is the management that I have found most successful. First I like to keep the birds in separate cages; it prevents quarrelling, and one is able to attend to each bird as its health suggests. Offer the following seeds:—teazle, niger, maw, canary, cracked sunflower, and a little linseed, and a pot of cracked hemp separately. Soak rape and teazle and give a small quantity daily, but do not be too liberal with the teazle, as it makes a splendid pick-me-up if a bird is out of sorts. Get them gradually on to dried seeds. In addition to the above they should have all kinds of wild seeds which can be collected in the open. Failing this, get a packet of real wild seed mixture, which some firms make a speciality of, and give a spoonful about two or three times a week. An aperient occasionally helps to keep them in health. Now about your seed samples. The niger, teazle, and rape are all good, but the hemp is possibly partly the cause of your trouble. Some grains are all right, others are old, and the kernels are discoloured. You must have some better than this if you value your birds. If you are quite unable to get better, do not use hemp at all. Give an extra allowance of cracked sunflower; see that it is sweet to the taste and looks clean and bright. I do not like either of your samples of wild seeds. They might be useful to throw into a mixed collection of common birds in an aviary, but not for a delicate caged Goldfinch.

FINCH MOULTING BADLY.

D. Jones.—You do not say where you are keeping your bird, but whatever you do keep him out of a draught, and fairly warm. Give him a little extra sound hemp and maw seed, and, if he will eat it, a little egg food about twice a week. You should keep up the supply of wild seeds if you can, as these help to keep him in health. Put a small teaspoonful of chemical food in his drinking water fresh daily for a week, and then discontinue it for four or five days, and repeat for the same time. Let him bathe on nice bright days only, and even then early in the morning, so that the bird and cage will be thoroughly dry before evening.

MIXED SEED FOR AN AVIARY.

Anxious.—To give a mixed seed diet to suit a collection of birds in an aviary is always somewhat difficult, because each species requires rather different treatment to its fellow. The difficulty in your case is to give a diet that will suit your Goldfinches and yet not injure the Canaries. I really think your best plan would be to remove the Goldfinches and keep them in cages, but anyway, before doing so, try the following—Canary 2 parts, teazle 2 parts, rape 1 part. This is as a staple food, and any other seeds should be given separately. Offer a small handful of sound sunflower daily, and a little hemp three times a week, this you will give especially to the Goldfinches. Then procure a packet of real wild seed mixture, not Finch mixture, and give a spoonful to each bird on the days you are not giving hemp. Occasionally soak a handful of teazle and rape for them. Green food should be given whenever procurable, care being taken that it is free from frost.

MULE MOPY.

Regular Reader.—Your Mule has not yet quite recovered from the moult; it requires a little different treatment to bring it into condition. First of all keep it in a fairly warm position in a good sized cage, and allow it to bathe on all suitable occasions. Feed as follows: Canary seed 3 parts, teazle 2 parts, hemp 1 part, rape and linseed half part each; mix these as a staple food. Give a little sunflower twice a week, and green food of some kind every other day; if you are unable to get it offer sweet apple or carrot. Before making this change dissolve as much Glauber salts as will cover a sixpence in two tablespoonsful of water, and let him have it to drink for one day only, repeating two days later, then follow this up with a small teaspoonful of chemical food in his drinking water. Boil the water first, and use a china or glass drinker.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

AILING GREY PARROTS.

F. T. C.—I cannot add a great deal to my previous reply. Continue with the treatment advised therein as a whole. Bathe the eye with a tepid dilute rose-water and zinc eye-solution daily till all signs of swelling disappears. If the bird will take (eat) it, give it every other day the following: One teaspoonful each condensed milk, cornflour, half-teaspoonful cod-liver oil emulsion, mix into a paste, then add about two tablespoonfuls of boiling water and supply to the bird warm—it would be more palatable for the bird if slightly sweetened with a little honey—if the bird only takes a little of it, then only mix half the quantity at a time. At the least sign of nasal catarrh, spray or bathe the nostrils with a dilute glyco-thymoline solution, and continue this till the running ceases. I repeat that a quite warm, even temperature (day and night, if possible), will benefit your bird as much as drugs.

BUDGERIGARS.

H. V. M.—If, as would appear from your remarks, your pair, two months old, are from the same nest, then you ought not to breed from them as they are brother and sister, but attempt to exchange one of them with some local fancier so as to get an unrelated pair. Inbreeding only leads to weak stock, and if carried to any extent ends in the annoying trouble, popularly termed "French moult." As regards the question of age, you need not be anxious on this point, as if your birds should be unrelated you could leave them to take their own course. They would come into breeding condition in due course, and when this occurred, probably rather late next season, they could be allowed to go to nest, if so inclined, but birds in cages often take longer to settle down to nesting than those enjoying the liberty and exercise of an outdoor aviary. Best of luck in your re-start.

GREY PARROT PLUCKING ITS BREAST FEATHERS.

R. B.—In future, please conform to rules re name and address. There is not much wrong with your manner of feeding, but it would be better to decrease the quantity of hemp, increase the proportion of sunflower, and add one part of oats to the seed mixture. Allow it to have as much apple, banana, or other ripe fruit as it cares to take. It can also have biscuits, stale household bread and a little plain cake. Once a week put one teaspoonful of fluid magnesia in the drinking-water, and on the intervening days lightly colour the water with chemical food—continue this treatment for a couple of months at least. Grit, cuttlebone, and a chunk of wood, the latter for it to exercise its mandibles upon, should be continually in the cage. Keep the bird warm and in as even a temperature as possible; at the same time it must get light and air without draught. Report progress in six or seven weeks.

AILING BUDGERIGAR.

J. F.—It is difficult to assign definite causes from the data usually supplied by correspondence. The bird may have caught a chill during these treacherous weather periods, or something may have put it generally out of tone, or, again, it may be a case of egg-binding, but in the latter case there should be sufficient evidence for you to be aware of the fact. I advise caging her separately, keeping her in a warm room for a time and putting her on a course of Dinneford's Magnesia and Chemical Food till she has quite recovered tone. A small drinker, glass for preference, holding about one fluid ounce, should be used. Put into the water one teaspoonful of the magnesia every fourth day, and on the intervening days lightly colour the water with chemical food. The moult usually takes place in the late autumn, but the majority of the pairs I used to keep had a partial spring moult as well. The breeding season may be said to run from April to October inclusive, but many pairs when kept in roomy aviaries breed practically all the year round. As wholesome green food is not now easy to supply, keep a slice of sweet apple between the bars of the cage. Keep up a continuous supply of grit and cuttlebone. The seed mixture might well consist of canary and millet, two parts of each and one part of crushed or whole oats.

ZEBRA FINCHES FAILING TO SIT.

Tickle.—As the birds have only played at nesting on and off through three seasons, I am afraid you cannot expect this pair to improve their habits while they occupy their present quarters. If you have a small spare room (no heat required) where they could fly at liberty, or even a cage double the size of your present one, there would be a strong probability that the increased exercise, etc., would induce them to set up housekeeping seriously. Many pairs breed quite freely in an ordinary-sized Crystal Palace-type cage. It is an undoubted fact that with all wild species, that is, undomesticated birds, exercise and wing exercise are the main factors towards prolific breeding. Of course, there are striking exceptions, however these only prove the rule, in which birds have been very prolific in quite limited quarters. A good result might be attained if you could let them have a good fly round the room daily if you cannot carry out either of the suggestions given above. Occasionally pairs turn up, even among aviary birds, which act precisely as yours have done.

AN EVEN TEMPERATURE.

S. W. B.—I should consider a kitchen the one place in the house where the temperature was the most uneven. Apart from the difference between day and night, there is the considerable rise or fall when cooking is going on or otherwise. Where only ordinary rooms are available, a sitting-room in which the fire is lighted the earliest and kept going the latest would be the room to choose, and a cover in front of the cage should make them fairly comfortable at night. However, I do not think you ought to let the hen Red-headed Finch attempt to breed this winter; at any rate, till she is in condition again. You had better cage her separately and keep her in a different room to her mate. She should have the warmest quarters you can give her, where the difference between day and night temperature is not too great. The symptoms you describe point either to the after-effects of egg-binding or to difficulty in passing another egg. Give her the usual seeds, also a little sponge cake, moistened with ten drops of cod-liver oil emulsion and boiling milk. Also put half a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water twice a week, and on other days well colour the water with chemical food. Continue the treatment till she has recovered tone, and she should not be returned to her mate till quite fit.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. The Post Office regulation is that bodies of birds must be sent at the letter rate of postage, and must be packed in hermetically-sealed receptacles which must themselves be enclosed in strong wooden, leather, or metal cases. If this regulation be infringed the packets may be destroyed by the authorities. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

ADDRESS OF SECRETARY.

J. E. Pimmock.—The secretary of the Yorkshire Canary Club is Mr. J. Greaves, 279, Hollings Rd., Bradford.

TO BECOME A NATURALIST.

Master P. Fletcher.—Widely speaking, a naturalist is one who studies nature in any form, but the term is more strictly applied to those who make a speciality of zoology or botany. Zoology is the science of animal life and therefore includes birds. If by saying you wish to become a naturalist after leaving school you mean that you wish to take up the study of birds, then you should read all the literature on the subject you can get hold of, and decide which branch appeals most to you. If you decide upon going in for the study of birds in nature, then you must extend your reading in that direction, and follow it up by taking such observations as are possible to you in your circumstances. If you wish to become a bird-keeper, make a choice of one kind of birds to begin with—Canaries, British birds, or Foreign birds. Then find out from friends or by reading, or by asking us the question, what is the simplest species or variety of bird in your selected section to commence with, and the proper treatment of it. Begin in a small way, and if you have any real fancy for the hobby it will soon grow upon you. Books that will guide you are cheap enough nowadays. You will find a column of them advertised in "Cage Birds," or for 2½d. our Manager would send you post free a copy of a little book called a "Nutshell," each one of which treats upon the proper keeping of some individual bird. A list of these also appears in our advert. columns each week. If you are in doubt, write us and our experts will willingly advise you in any difficulty.

WILL MULES BREED?

J. Smith.—Two enquiries in one week on a matter which has been dealt with scores of times in our columns. Please see answer below.

ARE MULES FERTILE?

Sutton.—We are seriously considering having a stereotyped reply made for answering this ever-recurring question. Anyway, here is a copy of a reply we gave quite recently: "Generally speaking, we can only say that Hybrids are sterile. Hybrids between closely allied species, such as tame pigeons and wild pigeons, various kinds of ducks, etc., are undoubtedly capable of producing fertile eggs, and it has sometimes been claimed that hybrids between the Canary and a British Finch have proved fertile. Such cases as the latter, however, are few and far between, and when investigated scarcely ever bear the test of enquiry."

AIDS TO SUCCESS.

Our Books and a Common-sense Application of the Advice therein MUST bring you Profit as well as Pleasure.

All the experience of years of careful study by experts is at the disposal of readers.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 2/2.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2. "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the verlest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in adition to useful account pages.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge. Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.

It is advisable that all newly-purchased birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

CENT'S AND BOYS' SUITS FREE!

Astounding Xmas Offer for a few weeks only to "Cage Birds" Readers! Send only a postcard and save pounds.

Now readers, would you like a suit or pair of trousers absolutely free? Perhaps your boy also? A most astounding offer is being made by a well-known London firm! They have discovered a remarkable Holeproof Cloth. You can't tear it! Yet is looks just the same as £3 or £4 suitings. You can't wear it out, no matter how hard you wear it, for if during six months of solid hard grinding work every day of the week (not just Sundays), you wear the smallest hole, another garment will be given free! The firm will send a written guarantee in every parcel. Think, readers, just 15s. 3d. for a man's suit, and only 4s. 9d. for a pair of trousers, or boy's suit 5s. 11d., knickers 2s. 3d., guaranteed for six months' solid grinding wear, and replaced free of charge if hole appears.

The Cloth.

As previously stated, this really marvellous cloth is absolutely untearable—you cannot tear it, no matter how hard you try; but possibly the thought arises that being of such hard-wearing quality, it must resemble in some shape or form the ordinary old-fashioned cord. That is not so. Side by side with the very latest designs in tweeds, and the best of our fancy worsteds, readers without testing the cloth would be unable to say which was holeproof and which was ordinary tweed. It is absolutely identical in appearance, and for considerably less than a sovereign, it is possible to obtain the design and colouring which in ordinary tweeds could not be procured under £3 or £4. The designs are suitable for office and best wear and field or rough wear, so that readers, whether at work or at leisure, need have no hesitation in wearing garments made from this remarkable cloth. The cloth could not be torn by a barbed wire fence, it is quite impossible to tear it, and the manufacturers predict that just as soon as the public learn of its remarkable wearing qualities, ordinary tweeds and serges will become a thing of the past. For your boys it is the very cloth.

Prices Extraordinary.

The prices of garments in this holeproof cloth are truly remarkable—of course, they are cut very low, more or less, to induce the public to test the cloth. It is possible to procure a really well-cut, smartly-finished suit consisting of jacket, vest, and trousers for the absurd sum of 15s. 3d., whilst a pair of trousers guaranteed for six months' solid hard wear could be obtained for merely 4s. 9d., or gent's riding, cycling, or walking breeches for 6s. 3d. Boys' suits from 5s. 11d., knickers 2s. 3d.

Method in Making.

Readers naturally ask the question, can these goods be well made for the money? Here again is the result of the employment of modern methods and machinery, the outcome of years of experimentation, which have rendered it possible to supply a suit of clothes for 15s 3d., which our grandfathers could not possibly have obtained at anything like treble the price. As an instance of the labour-saving devices, it must be mentioned that every sewing machine used in the making of these garments is driven by electric power; no work except the actual guidance of the garments through the machine falls on the worker, with the result that double and treble the quantity of garments can be turned out with absolute assurance that every garment is really well made. This is one instance of how the method carried from the beginning to the end of the business has resulted in a better and cheaper article for the public.

The Result.

Readers would do well to investigate this offer at once, before the rush, and the result to themselves will be a considerabe saving of money in their tailoring bills, besides being able to wear garments made from a cloth which looks really smart, and yet will wear even better than the ordinary common cords.

Generous Free Samples for Readers.

To induce readers to give this remarkable cloth a trial, the manufacturers offer to send (if readers will send merely a ½d. postcard asking for free samples) a generous supply of cloth cuttings, fashions, and a most remarkable measurement chart, which will enable readers to measure themselves as well as any tailor could measure them. This will be sent absolutely free of charge by return of post. Readers must not delay a day, but should study the advertisement beneath, and send a postcard for the free samples of cloth cuttings. Remember, send now, before Xmas rush.

DECEMBER NOTES.

Give them a drink of lukewarm water, and if they have had a very cold journey, or have been delayed add 20 drops of whisky to it.

Be extra careful not to give frosted green food to any bird. Rather gather it the day before, and keep it indoors over-night.

Hemp seed may be given more liberally now that the weather is cold.

IT IS NOT

the price you pay. You may go in for the very highest-priced birds you see offered, or you may go for the lowest. But the main point that every intending purchaser looking through these columns asks, is the same, namely,

WHERE CAN I GET WHAT I REQUIRE?
WHERE, TOO, CAN I GET THE BEST VALUE FOR MY MONEY?

These questions can be satisfactorily answered by stating your requirements, accompanied by a stamped envelope, or by sending your address for my before deciding upon your purchase. It will only cost you a postcard, so you cannot be much out of pocket. But, by my value, you can, if you choose, save much.

THE THOUSANDS OF TESTIMONIALS

received by me prove this. They have come from every quarter of the Globe. The Editor of this journal and his staff had more testimonials of mine for examination than from any other hundred persons put together.

Twitterings.

Mr. J. Trengove will judge the members' show of the Burnley C.B.S., Dec. 16.

The special by Mr. T. K. Langstaff in our schedule, writes Mr. McLaughlin, hon sec. Whitehaven Y.F.S., should read to be won locally. This has been left out through a printer's error.

At the next meeting of the London C.B.A., Dec. 14, at 2, York St., Piccadilly, at 8, there will be held another of the monthly table shows to which fanciers are invited. There will be two classes for Norwich Canaries, 2 British birds, and 2 Foreign.

We are sorry to hear of the accident which befel the hon. sec. of the Hoyle F.A., Mr. H. Ware, while on his postal rounds on Nov. 29. His machine broke, throwing him heavily to the ground, and his left ribs and his collar-bone were broken. We are sure that all fanciers who know him will sympathise with him and wish him a speedy recovery.

Sorry I omitted to say in my report of Border Fancy C.C. meeting, writes Mr. W. B. Smart, that owing to present conditions we have been obliged to raise the membership fee from 1s. to 1s. 3d. I also take this opportunity to thank all members who have so kindly sent in specials, as we have well over 100, and I think ours will be one of the best schedules ever presented to the fancy.

The entries at Mardy Show, writes Mr. D. D. Jones, sec., are anything but encouraging; not a single entry to date in either of the guaranteed classes, which are 16 in number (see show advertisement). Finches, linnets, and foreign are all empty; surely our esteemed judge, Mr. Castree, deserves a better encouragement than this. The whole of the proceeds of the show go to the wounded soldiers and sailors local fund.

Mr. J. Spencer, 10, Runswick Terr., Bradford, hon. sec. of Bradford East O.S., writes that the selling prices in classes 19, 20, 21, for the show on Dec. 16, are 20s., 15s., 12s. 6d., respectively, not as printed in the year book. Unflighted birds have 8 classes, of which two are in competition for the silver rose bowl. The arrangements for the show are in the hands of skilful fanciers, and the birds will be despatched on their return journey at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. J. Fairgrieve, sec., East Lothian C.B.S., writes that after paying expenses of the Red Cross Show they have handed over the sum of £5 to the Red Cross Society, including 15s. from Mr. Livingston, Bathgate, and 10s. from Mr. J. Patterson, Chirnside.

SEASONABLE GREETINGS.

TO all our readers and to all our contributors we send Greetings and Grateful Thanks.

During more than two years of world war the "fancy" has kept its end up. Hundreds of pounds have been raised by bird shows for the benefit of war charities. Thousands of wounded soldiers have been entertained at our shows to their great delight, and many of these will join our ranks when the better times, which may be nearer than they seem, come along.

The future of "the fancy" is assured, and, considering the virility it has shown during a period of stress such as the most pessimistic pessimist would never have dared two years ago to predict, there is no wonder.

Readers of CAGE BIRDS during times of prosperity, have stood loyally during a time of storm, and contributors have helped us splendidly in our efforts to keep going. The result to-day is that CAGE BIRDS is stronger than ever, and, as we are proud to be able to say, more appreciated than ever. No effort of ours will be spared to render our paper worthy of the loyal support accorded, and in the happier times which will come as surely as to-morrow's dawn, we hope and believe that the personal friendship which has existed between CAGE BIRDS and its readers and contributors will, if possible, be more strongly cemented than ever.

To the least hopeful we would say "Buck up; there is already a rift in the cloud through which the silver lining is to be seen. Soon the sun will be shining." May your Christmas be happy, though with a chastened happiness, and may the New Year open with brighter prospects than ever for our country and for us all.

Ring Ouzels in the South.

We hear from Mr. Walter Swaysland that a Fire-crested Wren was picked up dead on the quay at Newhaven on Nov. 8. Mr. Swaysland reports also seeing five Ring Ouzels near Brighton on Nov. 15th, a very late date for these birds.

The Norwich Plainhead Club: Extraordinary General Meeting.

There will be an extraordinary general meeting of the Norwich Plainhead Club, Dec. 16, at 3, at the Joiner's Arms Hotel, Deansgate, Bolton, writes Mr. John Hopkins, hon. sec., to consider the objections which have been lodged against some of our amateur members. I hope as many as possible will attend.

A Bumper Benefit to Red Cross at Cambuslang.

The Cambuslang C.B.A., writes Mr. A. Crawford, sec., handed over to their local Red Cross work party the handsome sum of £66 as the outcome of a prize drawing in connection with their annual show, and I hope that other clubs will not let this escape without notice. I feel sure this is a record for a confined club, but it would give me the greatest pleasure to read in your paper of its getting beaten.

Larkhall Entries Extended.

Entry date for Larkhall show is extended to Wednesday morning, Dec. 13, first post, owing to our printer being unable to supply schedules in time for sending out, writes Mr. T. H. M'Gregor, sec. and treasurer, 48, Sarahville Crescent, Larkhall. A good special list assured; if any fancier is too late in receiving schedule, and will send on birds we will classify. Exhibitors should send birds on to arrive on Thursday evening, Dec. 14. (See advertisement).

Corrections in Show Reports.

In unflighted hens at Huddersfield Mr. P. Hirst won 2 and 4, not 3 and 4 as reported, and A. Radley won 3rd, not 2nd. At the show of the London and Counties A.C.B. the runner up for the cup was H. Bell, not Durham. At Blaenavon, in unflighted buff cocks vhc no name should read vhc Hyde, and 2nd in unflighted novice cocks should read Hyde, not Latham as reported. At Swansea 1st in clear, etc., buff Yorks should read Griffiths, not Brown.

Yellow Parrots.

At the last meeting of the Zoological Society Mr. Alfred Ezra exhibited living examples of three Lutino specimens of Alexandrine (Palaeornis nepalensis), Ring-neck (P. torquatus), and Plum-head (P. cyanocephalus) Parrakeets recently received from India. In all these birds the yellow is pure and perfect, being of a delicate sulphur shade.

Writing of these birds to the "Avicultural Magazine" for November, Mr. Ezra says: "My brother has recently sent me from India no less than three Lutino Indian Parrakeets representing three species, the Ring-neck (Palaeornis torquatus), the Alexandrine (P. nepalensis), and the Plumhead (P. evanocephalus). All are in fine condition and are not yearlings, since they have the full long tail. In all, the yellow is pure and perfect, of that particularly delicate sulphur shade one gets in these Lutinos. The Plumhead has a pink head, and the Alexandrine shows the usual red patch on the wings, the wing coverts adjacent to it being also edged slightly with red, giving a very pretty effect. The Ring-neck and the Plumhead both have red eyes and flesh-coloured feet; the Alexandrine's eyes are normal in colour, but the feet are light. However, some races of the Alexandrine have pale-coloured feet naturally. Neither the Ring-neck nor the Alexandrine has a ring. Besides being the finest looking bird, the Alexandrine is by far the rarest of the three: in fact, is the first Lutino of the species I have heard of, although Alexandrines are quite as common as Plumheads, if not more so. Along with these came a Lutino Plumhead with normal eyes and feet. This is rapidly assuming normal plumage, also being far enough advanced in the change to show that it is a male bird."

A Fine Entry at Gateshead.

Just as we are going to press we hear by telegram from Mr. Curry, the Gateshead secretary that entries for the show to-day, Saturday, number over 900.

The "Avicultural Magazine," the organ of the Avicultural Society, for November is mainly occupied by lists of officers for 1916-17, members of the society, and rules. A beautiful coloured drawing of the Guatemalan Jay, by Mr. Goodchild, is worth in itself more than the cost of the number, and the articles include "Jays" by Mr. H. D. Astley, "The Brown-necked Parrot" by Mr. E. Hopkinson, etc.

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1917 is now in course of preparation, and in order that our annual list of judges of cage birds should be up to date, and correct in detail, we shall be obliged if judges who wish their names to appear in next year's Directory of Judges will send us on a postcard their present address and the varieties they are prepared to judge, naming, if any, those in which they specialise. No charge whatever is made for the insertion, but only the names of those who send us the particulars desired will be included in the list. A specimen entry (fictitious) is as follows:—

"Kindly thank all those who wrote me in answer to advt. of Yorkshires in CAGE BIRDS, Nov. 18. I had so many applications that I could not answer all. Wishing you every success."—F. COOKE (Darlington).

"My short advertisement under Yorkshires has cleared off all my spare cocks down to the last bird. Later on I shall hope to trouble you again for sale of my spare hen-stock."—PERCY LANE (Worcester).

"I should esteem it a favour if you will kindly thank all those who wrote in reference to my Hawfinch advertised in CAGE BIRDS. It is impossible to reply to every individual letter, as it would cost shillings in postage. All those who sent stamped address envelopes I will reply to in due course. It is simply marvellous that one small advert. should bring so many letters and postcards. I wish CAGE BIRDS the success it so well deserves."—P. PEARCE, Camberwell).

ANOTHER NEW HYBRID REPORTED.

"M.R.T.," in a letter in the "Nature Notes" column of the "Scotsman" says that a new Hybrid has been bred this year in a small garden aviary, the female parent being a Greenfinch. A mixed series of Finches—native and foreign—is kept in the aviary, but no male Greenfinch is included. The nest was formed in a straw bottle-cover, fastened up in a horizontal position on the wall of the shelter shed, and five eggs were laid. Three of these were hatched, but only one young bird was reared to maturity. So far as could be seen the Greenfinch bore the entire labour connected with the upbringing of the young family, and for some time it was a matter for speculation what bird could be the father of the young mule. When the youngster had completed its first moult doubt was no longer possible, however, its colour arrangement and general appearance proclaiming unmistakably its relationship to a Scarlet Grosbeak. This bird—also known as the "Scarlet Bullfinch" or "Siberian Rosefinch"—has a very extensive range over the Asiatic Continent, and is common in India in winter. Before the war consignments from India were occasionally to be found in the shops of London dealers. The young mule continues to flourish, though, sad to relate, the Grosbeak has come to an untimely end.

HOW FANCIERS HELP

POPLAR C.B.S. TAKES A HAND.

A Norwich Canary Realises Over £100 for the Funds of the British Red Cross Society.

WE are indebted to Mr. A. E. Leech, chairman of the Poplar C.B.S., for the following interesting particulars of the sale of a Norwich Canary and cage for the benefit of the funds of the British Red Cross Society. When the full tale comes to be told of how fanciers have helped this and other charities by handing over the profits of shows and by other means, this story of the Canary from the East End of London will take a foremost place. The account is accompanied by an official receipt for £101 4s., and the following letter from Sir Charles Russell to Mr. A. Vaughan, of Spratts' Patent, London, whose kind offices went far in producing such a fine result.

DEAR SIR,—I am in receipt of your letter of the 18th inst., enclosing cheque value £101 4s., being the proceeds from the sale of a Norwich Canary, which was given by the Poplar Bird Cage Society, and sold by you on the Corn Exchange.

I wish to assure you how much this kind help is appreciated by these societies, and on behalf of my committee I desire to thank you most heartily. Would you also convey to the Poplar Bird Cage Society our very grateful thanks.

I enclose herewith formal receipt, and with renewed thanks,

I am, Yours faithfully,
(Signed) CHARLES RUSSELL,
Chairman, Collections Committee.

Mr. Leech's Report.

Unusual interest was taken in the sale of a Norwich Canary and cage, which was sent by the Poplar C.B.S., to the Corn Exchange, Mark Lane, on Nov. 10, to be sold in aid of the British Red Cross Society. On arrival the bird was placed in the able hands of Mr. Vaughan, the representative of Messrs. Spratt's Ltd., who took great interest in the proceedings. First of all the bird was put in a shilling draw which yielded a goodly sum, the winner generously putting it up by auction, and after being sold several times realised in all the handsome sum of £101 4s.

The Poplar C.B.S. are desirous of taking this opportunity of thanking Mr. Vaughan, the members of the Corn Exchange, and all those who kindly contributed in such a generous manner for so good a cause.

A Newspaper Account.

The "London Corn Circular," Nov. 20, 1916, after referring to the sales of splendid flowers, fruits, and various other gifts, reports as follows:—

The history of this memorable day would be incomplete without the inclusion of the "Story of the Canary," to use the language of that friend of our childhood, the "Arabian Nights." It seems that on this very day, the 10th of November, not the Commander of the Faithful, late of Bagdad, but the Poplar Cage Bird Society, a denizen of a nearer East than even the Near East, had made the Exchange a gift of a pretty Norwich Canary in a gilt cage, adorned with ribbons representing all the colours of the Allies.

The object of these wise men of the East—of London—was to induce the merchants of Mark Lane and their customers to buy this little bird at a price high enough to help to swell the purse of the Red Cross Society, and it must be admitted that the market rose to the occasion.

The bird was first put in a shilling draw that quickly produced £33, which meant if there is anything in figures, 660 shilling tickets. But the lucky winner generously waived his right to the prize, and on his proposition the little songster was put up to auction on the market—result a further £44 for the Red Cross Funds. But by this time the afternoon was wearing on, and the auctioneer in the Chrysanthemum show, who had started at 3.30, was busily at work. To his rostrum the little bird was brought, with the result that in a few minutes it had been "put up" four times, the fall of the hammer bringing £7, £5, £5, and £6 respectively, or £23 in all.

Thus a little Canary in a gilt cage had brought exactly £100 to the Red Cross in half the proverbial jiffy. The ultimate and proud possessor of this eastern gift—he had had it knocked down to him at each of the last three thuds of the hammer—was Mr. Beresowster, representing Messrs. Thornett and Fehr. He is to be congratulated on his purchase.

Prize Money Paid.

We learn that prize money in respect of the following shows has been paid. If any exhibitor has been overlooked he should apply to the secretary concerned: Old Shildon Workmen's Club, Burnley O.S.

CARDIFF.

The 20th open show of the Cardiff C.B.S. was held at the Cory Hall, Cardiff, Nov. 29 and 30. At one time it was feared that the show would have to be abandoned owing to inability to obtain a hall, and it was only after great difficulty that the Committee were enabled to secure this hall, which is beautifully lighted and free from draughts, and at night electrically lit. Entries totalled nearly 1,000, and made a really glorious display, giving the judges a hard day's work.

Of the management, we cannot speak too highly. As in years past everything went off in perfect order, and no wonder with such an enthusiastic band of fanciers as the Cardiff boys, headed by the Chairman, Mr. E. J. Banks, a keen Lancier who does everything in his power for the welfare of the Society. The Vice-Chairman, Mr. P. Braithi, is another hard worker to whom nothing is a trouble. Treasurer, Mr. A. Bubl, is one of the best, and a real sticker when any work is to be done, and the genial Sec. and Show Manager, Mr. Edwin Thomas, gets through an enormous amount of work with seemingly no trouble. Last, but by no means least, comes the Committee, all of whom are real good fanciers and enthusiasts. Revd. C. B. Jolliffe, Messrs. E. James, H. C. Smith, D. Raymond, J. Pearce, S. Wiseman, E. J. Davies, W. J. Philps, F. Howard, A. Shelfam, F. S. Whetton, D. J. Lewis, H. J. Ford, Willstone, and Wilson.

Norwich were the finest collection seen in Wales for very many years, practically all the well-known exhibitors sending down teams. To individualise is rather unfair, still we cannot help mentioning the beautiful buff cock shown by Mr. S. Cook, the buff hen of Mr. Tristem (we understand quickly claimed), and the brace of yell. and buff cocks of Mr. Crawshaw, all of fine subs. and grand type. Other real champions were put down by Messrs. Houghton, Spillman, Collings, Revd. Jolliffe and Thomas. The Novice exhibits in this section were really fine, some grand birds being staged by Messrs. Davies, Williams, Jenkins and Garbutt.

Yorkshires were splendid, altogether 300 of them, and truly a great entry, not a bad one amongst them. Mr. L. Dykes staged a really great team, which were much admired, as also were the unfl. yell. cock, of Mr. Simison, the unflighted buff ck. of Mr. Heggie, and the buff ck. of Mr. Snead. The Novice Classes were very strong, and so good all round were the exhibits, that one could almost fancy we were amongst the champions. Mr. Terrett's yell. ck.; Mr. Pennell's buff ck.; Mr. Norman's unfl. yell., and Miss Garland's unfl. buff being all birds of exceptional merit that could give a good account of themselves in the champion classes.

Borders were a magnificent collection, in fact one of the best seen in the South; every class was well filled with splendid examples of the "little ones," the type all through being particularly even, quality high class, and the majority beautifully staged. The buff ck. class was an eye opener, and it took the judge some time to sort out the cream, for every bird had to be carefully handled and compared. So keen was the competition that such noted birds as Mr. Jenkin's old buff only managed a third position, an aviary companion beating him for second place. The winner, sent in by Mr. Owen, Aberavon, is a charming example of what a high-class Border should be and well deserved his position. Another fine class was the buff hens, twenty-one real beauties, headed by Mr. Jenkins' old champion Cinnamon marked, this making her fifty-first win. Mr. Nicholas staged a couple of fine Cinnamons, winning with a lovely buff of grand quality. The Novices put up two excellent classes, some of the birds being quite equal to the champions for type and quality, but many lacked the finishing touches in staging them that the old hands know make such a big bid for victory.

Mules and Hybrids were a sight worth seeing. Pride of place must be given to Mr. Chick's cl. yell. Greenie Mule (we believe the Leicester winner), a pen-fed bird, of fine size and beautifully pure col. that has a big future before it. Mr. Goodall staged his charming Redpoll-Canary, and Messrs. Martin and Archer their well-known team; Mr. Crane also putting down some fine exhibits. The judges were:—Mr. J. H. Payne, Champ. Nor. and Mules; Mr. A. Maggs, Novice Nor and Selling; Mr. H. C. Smith, Yorks.; Mr H. Norman, Borders and British

The British Bird section was a good one, both in quantity and quality. All the Southern "cracks" were out, and the fight was keen for premier honours. Of the twenty-two H.-M. Goldies, some really grand birds were scarcely sufficiently up in colour to have more than a sporting chance, the winners were splendid specimens, burnished like gold. The Bullfinch cock class was one of the best seen for some time, about ten out of the sixteen were good enough to win at most shows, but here it was only the very choicest that could get in the money. In the West they generally manage to put up a good show of Linnets, and Cardiff was no exception. The two classes contained some magnificent specimens, and right down to the last bird were full of merit. Lovers of these beauties had a treat, no one could find fault with the first half-dozen in each class. The remainder of the classes were good, the one for hens being particularly interesting and contained some grand specimens. The Cup winners were:—Nor., W. Crawshaw; Yorks., L. Dykes; Bord., D. Jenkins; British, H. J. Chick; Spl. best Mule: H. J. Chick (cl. Greenie); Most points Mule, J. Crone; Challenge Bowl, best unfl. Can., bred by exhibitor, E. Thomas, with a grand Var. Nor. The winner in this class not being bred by the exhibitor was ineligible to compete.
